There are even stranger cases of fact following fiction. In 1858 and 1870, the French astronomer Jules Verne wrote two novels about man's first voyage to the moon. He (Verne) have been writing about the actual first voyage there, landing by Apollo XI in 1969, a century later. There were three Astronauts in Verne's fictional spacecraft and there were also three Apollo XI astronauts. In both fiction and fact, the launching site was in Florida. Verne named it Cape Town and gave it a location close to the present Cape Kennedy. The fictional spacecraft was named the Columbiad. The Apollo XI command module was the Columbia.

The French novelist said that his craft, travelling at about 25,000 miles an hour, would reach the moon in just over four days — or to be exact, 97 hours and 13 minutes. The Apollo XI craft, travelling more than 24,000 miles an hour, reached the moon in approximately 97 hours and 30 minutes.

Verne's fictional spacecraft even splashed down in the Pacific — a hundred years before the real thing happened.

One of the most astonishing cases of science written in advance is in Jonathon Swift's famous tale, Gulliver's Travels, which was published in London in 1726. In that book, Swift mentions that the planet Mars has two satellites. The telescopic passage is as follows:

"Certain astrologers in my country had discovered two lesser stars or satellites which revolve around Mars, whereof the innermost is distant from the centre of the primary planet exactly three of its diameters, and the outermost five; the former revolves in the space of 10 hours, and the latter in 21½ . . ."

Now, Mars, of course, does have two satellites — but they were not discovered by the American astronomer Asaph Hall until 156 years after Swift mentioned them. It was 150 years after Gulliver's Travels was published before there even existed a telescope powerful enough to see the Martian moons.

Moreover, Swift was not only correct about their existence but amazingly accurate about the two Satellites' very short periods of revolution and their respective sizes.

Another eerily prophetic bit of astronomical science Asaph Hall until 156 years turned up in a book called the Manual of Spherical Astrology, published in Paris by Vigot Brothers in 1897. On page 214 of that book appeared the statement:

"... planet exists beyond It will be called Phito."

Thirty-four years later, in 1931, the American amateur astronomer Clyde Tombaugh discovered a planet beyond Neptune which did come to be called Pluto.

But fast not only follows written fiction: it follows films, too.

Alfred Hitchcock's movie, The Birds, based on a short story by Daphne du Maurier, was about flocks of normally harmless birds attacking and killing human beings. In May, 1960, after the movie was released, a group of schoolchildren in Worcester, England, even dive-bombed by screaming magpies, just as in the film. Birds have received deep gashes in their heads, necks and ears where the birds were driven off.

Since magpies are inoffensive creatures, the attack was mystifying. But not unique. In January, 1969, Derek Reagan awoke to find his house in Peterborough, England, covered in a thick coating of starlings, which normally flee from man. The birds flew in from the dark, beating their wings violently against windows and assaulting doors with their beaks.

No wonder which of today's fiction will become tomorrow's fact.

MOORE GOOD EXAMPLE

NEW GLASGOW, N.S. (CP) — When the North Shore Drug Store Telegraph in Nova Scotia was looking for an individual who could best illustrate the use of alcohol or drugs is not a prerequisite for success, it came up with former professional boxer Archie Moore. In 226 bouts during his long career as a pugilist, Moore had 179 victories included 126 knockouts.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Sunday, June 23

Aries (March 21-April 19) Having too good a time today will carry a high price tag later on when you begin yearning for over-indulging.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Normally, no one has to remind you to be on your best social behavior. What remember-this out of the ordinary will occur that could put you in a poor light.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) You may feel you're being lied to concerning some advice you'll be giving. It would be more helpful to tell it like it is.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) If you want to do something nice for another, give from your own possessions. Don't expect someone else to pay for you.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) You're going to find yourself in an awkward situation. You'll have to choose between telling a little white lie and the cold, bodily truth.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you're working on a hobby today be sure to give your attention to your work, or else what you wind up with will not be found in the plans.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) That which is the most forbidden will be tempting to you today. If you choose to play that kind of time, the piper will later have to be paid.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You'll spend more time today trying to please (or appease) others than on your own interests.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Sometimes you can be just a little too blunt and frank. Today is one of those days when you'll want another's feelings.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It would be a mistake to try to buy someone's good will with material things today. You wouldn't be getting much for your money, anyway.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) There's a promise to be kept to a member of your family. Don't let it slip your mind.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) If you get bored today try to find something artistic and creative to do. It will bring everything back in focus.

Monday, June 19

Aries (March 21-April 19) A co-operative friend will assist you in an unusual but helpful manner. His services will be spontaneously volunteered.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) A sudden and unforeseen shift in conditions puts the brass ring within your reach. An important achievement is concerned.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Instead of doing everything by rote, look around and see where you can make improvements through the use of new techniques.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) The truth will surface in a situation that had you confused. Once you understand the underlying factors, you will be able to cope more effectively.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) Just because answers come to you suddenly it doesn't mean they are of little value. Quick insights should be heeded and acted upon.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't lock yourself into plans today. Leave room to make changes in case something better pops up.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) This is a good day to make some changes around the house and give things a new look, even if it's just rearranging the sofa and coffee table.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't stray too far from your plans today. Someone you will enjoy hearing from may try to get in touch with you.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Before the day is over, you may add something worthwhile to your list of valuables quite unexpectedly.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) This is as good a time as any to get into action that has you have been toying with in the back of your mind.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) Some information you will be receiving is best kept to yourself for the present. Its positive aspects could change as suddenly as it appeared.

AGREEMENT SIGNED

MOSCOW (AP) — Japan and the Soviet Union signed an agreement Monday under which Japan will grant the Soviets $450 million in credits for 194.4 million tons of Soviet coal from 1979 to 1980. It was their largest deal so far in developing Siberian natural resources.

PLANT RECORDS NUMBER

STENTVILLE, N.S. (CP) — Fruit growers in the Annapolis Valley are expected to plant about 60,000 new trees in 1974, a record, said federal agriculture specialists. About 90 per cent of these will be apple trees while the rest will be pear, plum, peach and cherry trees.

Present Prairie Prosperity Not Begrudged by Lewis

NORTH BATTLEFORD, Sask. (CP) — David Lewis, New Democratic Party leader, travelled 250 miles of northwestern Saskatchewan's highways and byways Friday culminating with a 35-minute speech here in which he bore hard the Trudeau government's agricultural policies.

About 350 persons crowded into a school auditorium to hear Mr. Lewis call once again for stabilized farm income that would eliminate what he termed "the recurrent periods of despair on the farms."

He said nobody should begrudge Prairie farmers their present prosperity because those same farmers suffered through the depressed 1930s and early 1970s.

"I think most farmers will agree this constant yo-yo effect from boom to bust and boom again is not the kind of thing that will produce a viable industry."

Fluctuations at the producer level were reflected at the consumer level and the only answer was a tough national prices control board that would monitor consumer prices as well as the costs to farmers, thus engaging farmers would get a good dollar for their food and that consumers were not faced with astronomical prices.

Mr. Lewis said Progressive Conservative and Liberal governments had done nothing effective in this field despite the Agricultural Stabilization Act passed by Parliament in 1958.

Caouette Ends Western Swing

WINNIPEG (CP) — Social Credit Leader Real Caouette ended a four-day western campaign tour Friday, saying he had the best reception ever in this part of the country.

"Everything was fine all week," he told reporters on his arrival at Winnipeg Airport, repeating his satisfaction with the tour at a meeting attended by about 65 persons in the evening.

Mr. Caouette said he feels after four days in the West that people are dissatisfied with the Liberal government and no longer sure of the Progressive Conservatives and New Democratic Party who hold most western seats.

It was the Conservatives who were the main targets of his campaign in British Columbia and Alberta. He said Social Credit can have in the past voted Conservative to defeat the Liberals, but urged them to reject such a strategy this time.

He also came out in favor of about 300 persons in Red Deer, Alta., where Social Credit supporters from various parts of the province met in what was once a party stronghold.

The largest meeting was such Western demands as uniform freight rates across Canada.

But the main thrust of his campaign was Social Credit, the monetary system and the use of the Bank of Canada to provide money "based on our profits", capacity so that Canadians can consume what they produce.

He accused other party leaders of stealing the Social Credit platform of 2200 old-age pensions at age 60, lower interest rates and a guaranteed income, which he said is straight Social Credit policy.

His audiences, all convinced Social Creditors, lapped it up, punctuating his speeches with applause and laughter at his jokes.

Mr. Caouette devoted a day to each Western province, including radio open-line appearances, radio and television interviews and an evening meeting each day.

Executive Stole Cigars

DETROIT (AP) — The general sales manager for American Motors Corp. has been convicted of shoplifting $2.66 worth of cigars from a suburban Detroit drugstore.

William Morgan, 51, who directs all AMC sales in the United States, is to be sentenced at a later date. A six-member jury found him guilty Thursday of petty larceny.

Morgan denied to Birmingham District Court that he stole three $1.62 packs of cigars from the store last Oct. 28, saying that a clerk did not charge him for them.

Regions Warned

TORONTO (CP) — Provincial Treasurer John White said Friday he has cautioned Halton regional municipality about its creative spending and that he plans to caution Durham municipality.

Liberal Leader Robert Nixon said the direct tax raid in Durham went up 25 per cent this year following introduction of regional government in January and local government costs in Halton are up 100 per cent this year.

Provincial Lottery in the Works

TORONTO (CP) — A study done for the Ontario government indicates that a provincially-run lottery could net the citizens of 200 million.

A single lottery could gross $117 million, of which 40 per cent would be required to pay costs and prizes, leaving the government more than 200 million in profit. The estimates are considered by some to be conservative.

The study, not an extensive one but valid enough to assess the potential of lotteries, may be one reason why Premier William Davis smiles when asked whether he intends to finance the government's major sports development at Bronte, near Hamilton.

Mr. Davis has already said the government is considering a provincial lottery system, but it hasn't become cabinet policy.

However, there are indications the province will use lotteries to launch its first lottery, probably within a few months.

Mr. Davis announced May 1 a five-phase program to build sports and recreation facilities at Bronte, starting with a $3.8 million Olympic-size pool.

The pool would be the centre-piece of a giant sports centre in a provincial park setting where athletes, managers and coaches would go to train and compete in many amateur sports.

All the facilities would have to be built in time for the 1976 Canada Winter Games to be staged at Bronte. Government planners hope to be able to turn the first sod this fall.

Government officials are enthused over the prospects of lotteries to finance amateur sport, and say they need only three months to get one in operation.

Considering the success government lotteries have had elsewhere, Ontario's entry into the field appears long overdue.

Ontario citizens buy British soccer pools and support lotteries in Michigan, New York, New Jersey, Quebec and Manitoba—money that could be diverted to lotteries at home.

Manitoba's first 6/49 lotteries last year was more than $2 million. Promoters of the Olympic lottery in support of the Montreal games cannot print enough tickets to meet the demand.

New Legislation For Mutual Funds

TORONTO (CP) — A new Securities Act that will protect individual investors in securities markets was introduced in the legislature Friday by John Clement, minister of consumer and commercial relations.

The new act includes a number of provisions proposed by the Canadian Committee on Mutual Funds and Investment Contracts report in 1969, and the Ontario Select Committee report on mergers and amalgamations released in December, 1973.

Under the act, mutual funds will not be allowed to make loans to their officers or directors, its management or distribution company or their associates.

"A statutory standard of care in the management of a mutual fund will take effect and undue concentration of assets will be prohibited," Mr. Clement said.

The act will further limit inside trading. Mr. Clement said insider liability will be extended to any person who acts on the basis of confidential information. "There will be a general prohibition against tipping insider information and against trading based upon such information," he said.

Conflicts of interest will also be subject to new disclosure requirements. Any interest held by members of an investment dealer in a security which they are recommending in a written communication must be disclosed.

Mr. Clement said mutual funds will also be required to provide more detailed information when confirming the sale of its units to an investor.

"Information such as the price of the share per unit, the amount deducted for sales charges or service fees and the fees payable upon redemption or surrender must be listed separately under the new act," Mr. Clement said.

He said the importance of the information contained in a confirmation of sale cannot be over-estimated because the period during which the trade can be cancelled begins when the confirmation is received.

Cattle Imports to Be Resumed Soon

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — United States cattlemen, currently in financial difficulty because they have more supplies than customers, will soon be able to resume shipments to Canada, it was reliably reported here Friday.

In April the Canadian government banned imports of slaughter cattle or meat which was not U.S. government-certified as being free of the growth-promoting drug Diethylstilbestrol, (DES).

DES was sporiade to have caused cancer in laboratory animals and its use for livestock growth promotion is banned in Canada and most other countries. However, it is still being widely used in the U.S. pending a reassessment by the Food and Drug Administration.

The informed sources here said Canadian and U.S. officials, during closed-door meetings this week, have worked out a workable agreement for limiting a resumption of U.S. shipments into Canada.

The sources said they expect it will take several days to complete the arrangements and publicly announce the details.

In Calgary, the secretary-manager of the Canadian Cattlemen's Association said recent importation of American cattle into Canada could force a reduction in the price paid to Canadian cattle producers.

Chris Mills said he knows nothing of a report from Washington, D.C. that American and Canadian officials have agreed on a resumption of fat cattle shipments into Canada.

Mr. Mills said American cattlemen are receiving about 40 cents a pounds for finished beef compared with the Western Canada price of about 49 cents a pound.

Canadian producers are already losing money at the 49 cents a pound price, said Mr. Mills.

Study Urged On Supermarts

TORONTO (CP) — Ian Deans (NDP—Wentworth) urged the provincial government Friday to conduct an inquiry to determine whether there is collusion and price fixing between major food chain stores.

Mr. Deans told the legislature a six-week sampling of 30 food items in six major chain stores in the Hamilton area disclosed little difference in the average price of the total package.

He said the major chain stores are not in true competition.

John Clement, minister of consumer and commercial relations, said the provincial government has no authority to initiate an investigation under the Combines Investigation Act because it is a federal statute.

He said the matter has been raised by counterparts in Ottawa and that he was not prepared to undertake an independent study.

Price Freeze not Answer

TORONTO (CP) — Former Liberal cabinet minister Judy LaMarsh said Friday that a Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield wins the July 8 federal election, "the Conservatives will be in for 20 years."

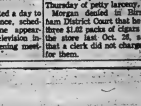
Miss LaMarsh told a Rotary Club of Toronto meeting that Mr. Stanfield's biggest liability in the campaign has been his support for a price freeze followed by a control program.

"Every economic theorist, every politician outside the country seems convinced it isn't the answer . . ."

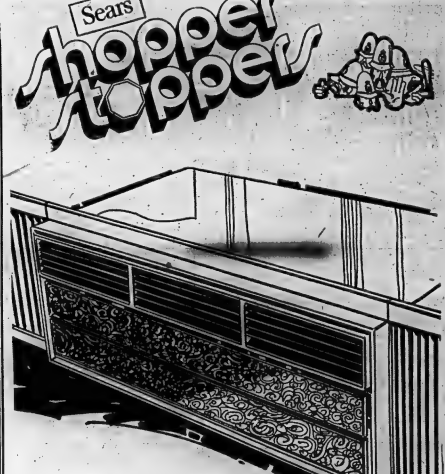
Miss LaMarsh, who was Liberal member of Parliament for Niagara Falls from 1960 to 1968 and served as health minister and secretary of state, said she is convinced most Canadians are uncommitted in the election campaign and would support the Conservatives if only they could convince themselves about Mr. Stanfield's capacity to lead.

Mr. Stanfield "seems to have been star-crossed from almost the day he arrived on the scene," she said.

In the last election campaign, his image suffered badly from a photograph showing him eating a banana, she said.



In the current campaign there was a photograph of the Conservative leader wearing cowboy boots with his trouser legs tucked into them and, said Miss LaMarsh, he couldn't have looked more like an eastern boob.



She said she regards Mr. Stanfield as at least a liberal and Liberal Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau as basically a conservative.

Irish Peers Just Bruised

DUBLIN (AP) — A fugitive leader of the Irish Republican Army gave the funeral oration at the grave of hunger striker Michael Gaughan, but police made no attempt to arrest him before thousands of mourners.

A 17-man IRA guard of honor clad in black and 2,000 mourners escorted the body of Michael Gaughan from Dublin Sunday to the grave in Ballina, his hometown in County Mayo.

David O'Connell, a top chieftain of the Provisional wing of the outlawed IRA, defied about 100 uniformed and plainclothes police to deliver the graveside eulogy.

Warned by authorities in both the Irish republic and Northern Ireland, O'Connell was surrounded by a guard of IRA men in black berets. But the police made no attempt to arrest him or to stop the IRA guard of honor who fired a volley of pistol shots over the coffin, and O'Connell disappeared in the crowd of about 2,000 persons.

Gaughan, 24, died Monday after a 64-day fast in a prison on the Isle of Wight. He and five other IRA prisoners in England had been fasting to press demands for transfer to prisons in Northern Ireland and status as political prisoners.

The other hunger strikers, including the sisters Marion and Dolours Price, quit their fast Saturday.

Early Sunday, their kidnappers freed the Earl and Countess of Donoughmore in a Dublin park. The 67-year-old countess said they were told they were being let go "because the hunger strikers stopped striking."

Lord Donoughmore, 71, told reporters he could not positively identify his captors, but "I imagine they were members of the IRA."

The two were bruised and shaken but otherwise in good health. Lord Donoughmore's coat was bloodstained, and he had a black eye and a cut on the back of his head. But he said that after the initial scuffle when they were seized outside their country mansion they were treated well.

IRA Hostages

The 71-year-old Earl of Donoughmore and his wife were released from the hands of Irish Republican Army kidnappers Sunday. The couple were abducted last Wednesday while returning to their 600-acre estate in County Tipperary. They had been visiting friends.

Ballet Star Wins Battle

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Jewish ballet star Valery Panov said today that he and his wife will leave the Soviet Union Friday after a two-year battle to emigrate to Israel.

In a telephone call from Leningrad, the ballet dancer said he has been told that he and his wife, Galina, can collect their exit visas Wednesday. They were told Saturday that permission for them to leave has been granted.

They were originally told they could pick up their visas today, but Panov said formalities delayed the issue of documents.

The former star of the Kirov Ballet in Leningrad said he now is confident that he and his wife, expecting their first child, will be away by the weekend.

"Only today did I feel really sure that we would get the visas," he said. "I have been given the green light everywhere I go. Papers are ready and waiting for me, and officials at Ovir (the visa office) were very polite when I went there today."

The Panovs were told Saturday that they would have to be out of the country by Thursday, but Panov said today the delay of one day was unavoidable because of the paperwork involved.

Can Emigrate

Former Kirov ballet stars Valery and Galina Panov have been given official permission to emigrate to Israel. The husband and wife, who have fought for two years for such permission, will be given visas and would be free to leave.

Oil Firm Won't Talk To Guerrillas

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Texasco Inc., an American oil company that has broken off negotiating with African guerrillas for the release of five company employees, said Saturday it will not resume talks until the guerrillas release two hostages.

H. W. Pressler, the Texasco chairman, said negotiations have failed because the terrorists, representing the Eritrean Liberation Front (ELF) are disorganized and without an authoritative leader.

The hostages could be set free at any United States Embassy or consular office in Africa where they could receive medical treatment and Texasco could be notified immediately, Pressler said.

Major Battleground

Campaigns Focus on Ontario

by ANDY ROY

Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield and Prime Minister Trudeau campaigned in Ontario Saturday, as areas considered the major battleground for the July 8 election.

The prime minister met friendly throngs in several southern Ontario communities and urged them to reject the Conservatives and vote Liberal.

"Don't take a chance on Conservatives. Don't take a chance on inexperience," he said as he denounced the Conservative plan to impose price and income controls.

"Take your choice and vote for good Liberal candidates and good Liberal policies."

He opened the day in Beamsville, a town of 2,400 west of Hamilton, and then went on to Welland, Haspeler, Guelph, St. Catharines and Oakville, before flying home for a two-day break.

The Liberals are fighting hard in southern Ontario, where the party suffered heavy losses last time to the Conservatives. Liberal strength in the 88-seat province dropped to 38 seats in 1972, just over half the number the party won in 1968.

The prime minister is to resume campaigning Tuesday in Quebec and make another tour of Western Canada later in the week.

For Conservative Leader Stanfield, Saturday was the opening day of a seven-day blitz of the province, bringing his anti-inflation proposals to the farm gates.

In a hectic 15-hour day, he brought his arguments and handshakes to eight communities, stopping long enough in some of them to defend his proposals to implement a 90-day freeze on prices and incomes.

Wherever he was questioned, the 60-year-old leader was asked to expand on his proposals for controls.

Would they apply to rents? Yes, they would.

Would the temporary freeze go beyond 90 days? "I wouldn't want to be associated with a longer freeze than that."

While he dealt with the broad spectrum of inflation in television interviews in London and Wingham, Mr. Stanfield related it specifically to the farming business when he hit the small towns.

"No one has suffered more from the effects of inflation than the farmers," he told a crowd at a picnic at Hensall. His proposed freeze, would not apply at the farm gate, he said.

Tornadoes Tear Up Midwest

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tornadoes and floods caused 23 deaths and left hundreds injured in three states during the weekend. Damage was estimated at $65 million.

Oklahoma and Kansas officials are seeking a presidential declaration of disaster for areas hit by tornadoes in their states.

Oklahoma's David Hall tentatively estimated damages at $25 million. Damages in Kansas were established by officials to exceed $20 million.

In Arkansas, weekend flooding was responsible for four deaths and an estimated $9 million in damages, authorities said.

Late Sunday night a tornado hit a dormitory at Ferris State College in Big Rapids, Mich., causing some damage and one minor injury.

The twister, one of several which passed through the north central part of the Lower Peninsula, also blew away about 70 per cent of the roof at Riverview Elementary School.

The National Weather Service said the tornadoes that struck Saturday were part of a storm system almost as powerful as the one that struck the Midwest April 3 and killed 300 persons.

Nixon Trip Confirms U.S.-Arab Friendship

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon begins an overseas journey today hoping to achieve twin goals of strengthening the new United States role in the Middle East and convincing the American people that world peace requires his continuation in office.

After spending some time in Austria to adjust to the time zone changes, Nixon arrives in Egypt Wednesday for the first stop in a tour of five Middle East countries.

Diplomats in the Middle East and Washington see well in many U.S. officials see the trip as official confirmation that the United States is a friend of the Arabs.

This is particularly true in the cases of Egypt and Syria, two Arab countries that had been entirely dependent on the Soviet Union for military and political support.

Nixon's visits therefore are expected to give a further push to Moscow's declining influence in the Middle East.

Last Rites Given Leger

SHERBROOKE, Que. (CP) — Gov.-Gen. Jules Leger, 65, who suffered "an abrupt stroke" at night, was in hospital today after which he called it a critical period.

"We can assure the next 24 hours will be decisive," an aide to the head of state said late Sunday. There was no question of transporting him to another hospital, he added.

Mr. Leger was taken to the hospital centre of the University of Sherbrooke at about 10 p.m. EDT Saturday night, 15 minutes after he tried to leave the room where the dinner was held following University of Sherbrooke convocation ceremonies.

The Governor-General and his brother, Paul-Emile Cardinal Leger, both received honorary degrees.

When he reached the door, Mr. Leger appeared to be in pain and held on to his brother to steady himself.

The Governor-General then sat down while Dr. Gilles Pigeon, dean of the university medical faculty, gave him a quick examination.

He was then taken to the hospital where several physicians, including Dr. Pigeon, Dr. Gaston Sauve, Mr. Leger's personal doctor, and Dr. Antonyr Frechette, Mr. Leger's son-in-law, attended him.

Neither Mr. Leger's doctors nor his aides would give details of the illness, although an aide said the Governor-General suffered a "cerebro-vascular" attack.

Government House in Ottawa issued a statement after hearing further medical bulletins would be issued if the Governor-General's condition changed.

"Whether the ultimate severity of Mr. Leger's illness cannot be predicted, his condition is stabilized stable, since his admission," the statement said.

His brother, former Roman Catholic archbishop of Montreal, administered the church's last rites to the Governor-General Saturday night in the hospital.

Cardinal Leger had also received an honorary degree.

Government House said both the Queen and Prime Minister Trudeau were informed of Mr. Leger's condition.

During the Governor-General's illness, Chief Justice Bora Laskin of the Supreme Court of Canada will assume his duties.

Mr. Leger was installed as Governor-General in January, replacing Roland Michener.

The convocation marked the 25th anniversary of the university in this city of 160,000. Vincent Massey, then governor-general, received an honorary degree from the university at its first convocation.

About 150 university degrees were awarded in the Saturday afternoon ceremony, delayed for an hour because of the late arrival of the Governor-General.

Government House said Mr. Leger had to travel to Sherbrooke by car when his plane scheduled to land there Saturday at Montreal International Airport after the first leg of a flight from Ottawa.

Arrested For Murder

SARNIA, Ont. (CP) — Dale Buckingham, 16, of Sarnia Township has been charged with the non-capital murder of 16-year-old Carol Long, whose body was found Sunday.

He was arrested near Sarnia airport Sunday, and charged with the strangulation death of the girl.

The long girl and a friend, Crystal Machulets, 11, were walking together when they were confronted by a man with a knife. He tied them up, and forced them into a nearby area.

The other girl escaped and notified police.

The dead girl was later discovered 1½ miles away in three feet of water with her hands tied behind her back.

Police said the girl who escaped ran for almost a mile with her hands tied and a gag still in her mouth until she reached a florist company where she was released.

The girl's mother said her daughter told her the man came up behind the girls, held a knife at their throats, and then tied and gagged them.

News Briefs

OTTAWA (CP) — Continued consumer confidence in the economy contributed to a 1.7-per-cent rate of real growth in the economy during the first quarter, Statistics Canada reported today. However, the preliminary report on economic performance during the January-March period also showed a large 3.3-per-cent inflation component. The national product — the total value of goods and services produced by the economy — grew by 4.9 per cent during the first quarter.

Faces First Crisis

PARIS (AP) — President Valery Giscard d'Estaing was threatened today with his first political crisis after firing Jean-Jacques Servan-Schreiber from his cabinet. Servan-Schreiber, a magazine publisher, was fired because he criticized the government's plans for a new series of nuclear weapon tests in the South Pacific.

Falls Tension Cools

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — Tension eased somewhat Saturday in Niagara Falls, where white and black youths have engaged in violence and shots have been fired, since a police.

No policemen were injured, but a man suffered a chest wound in a separate shooting. He was reported not seriously hurt.

The violence began Wednesday as about 300 youth began throwing rocks and bottles outside Niagara Falls Senior High School. It continued sporadically into early Saturday, mostly after nightfall.

Police said about 25 officers were fired on late Friday while chasing six youths from a warehouse. One 15-year-old was arrested.

The wounded man had been walking on Highland Avenue on the north side, one of two heavily black areas where violence occurred. The other is on the city's east side.

Throughout much of Friday night and early Saturday, police received complaints of roving bands of youths stoning automobiles.

In one incident, Ruth Robinson, 58, suffered facial cuts when a bottle was thrown through the windshield of her car.

Alfred Covington, 27, was arrested by police found a rifle and shotgun in his car on the east side. He was charged with violating the conservation law.

Albert Convocation Weekend Affair

It was a busy weekend for students and staff of Albert College.

The annual convocation was held Sunday in the Memorial Chapel at Albert College, Altogether, 39 Grade 13 graduates received their honor certificates while 20 Grade 12 graduates were recommended for secondary school graduation diplomas and statement of standing.

Awarded the Howard Award for being the finest representative lady student, was Shirley Wales, who will study law at Glendon College in the fall.

Warren Lee was awarded the Marsh Award presented to the finest representative male boy student at the school. Warren will continue his studies at Queen's University, taking a commerce course in the fall. Both winners of these high awards have been at Albert College for just a year.

There are 11 Albert College graduates chosen as Ontario Scholars. They are Anita An, Gabrielle Guenther, Warren Lee, Andrew Li, Vincent Li, Joe Lai Cochia Ng, Sally Poon, Lin So, Shirley Wales and Constantine Yu.

During the afternoon convocation, students from the Ontario Business College also received presentations.

There were a total of 66 academic awards and presentations handed out during the convocation ceremonies in the chapel.

After the invocation by Reverend George Ward of Bridge Street United Church and a few remarks from Albert College headmaster, Lorne Shewfelt, a number of musical selections were rendered by some of the students.

This was followed by the valedictory address by Shelagh Hanson, who recalled the five years she spent at Albert College, relating out various recollections that stood out in her mind. She ended her address by saying that this wasn't goodbye but a farewell, since they may all see one another again.

On Saturday evening, the college held its annual banquet for the graduates and on Sunday morning a baccalaureate service was held at Bridge Street United Church with Rev. George Ward officiating.

Arts Organization For Youth Planned

A youth-run, youth-oriented arts development organization is in the offing in the Quinte area with the announcements today that a meeting of area youth has been called.

Murray Irwin, vice-principal of Centennial Secondary School said today, a meeting will be held at the school's Active Theatre Wednesday, June 12 at 7:30 p.m.

Already, notices have gone out to all area high school music and art teachers.

"It's hoped that we can set up some kind of steering committee and work towards setting up a meeting in the fall," said Mr. Irwin, recently appointed arts co-ordinator of the Hastings County Board of Education. He will assume his duties in autumn next year.

He envisions an eventual Junior Quinte Arts Council to result from Wednesday's meeting. The meeting is open to all area youth.

Mr. Irwin said he feels that the Quinte Arts Council is not geared to youth. When Move It!, an event of the QAC's annual Artsfest, was being organized there was nothing to build on, he said.

"We have nothing to let these kids set up workshops and develop," Mr. Irwin worried. "They have to do it on their own."

Two Hurt In Crash

TRENTON — Two people were sent to hospital late Saturday night — the result of a two-car collision on Dundas Street at the town's east limits.

Diane Ellis, 22, of the Belleville area was treated and released from Trenton Memorial Hospital. Driver of her car, Zdenka Baker, 34, was first treated at Trenton and later sent to a military hospital at CFB Trenton.

Their car was stopped on the highway and attempting a left turn into the Dutch Mill Inn when it was struck from the rear by a car driven by 19-year-old Robert Williams of Foxboro.

None of the five people in the Williams vehicle were injured.

Damage was estimated by Trenton police at about $600 to the Williams car and $900 to the Baker car.

Mr. Williams has been charged with careless driving.

Hay Bay Trophy

Toronto fisherman William Healy took home the prof of his weekend fish story after landing the 11.6 pound pickerel. The catch was made on the south shore of the bay where Mr. Healy has his cottage.

Consecon Dam Grant Approved

PICTON — James Taylor, MPP Prince Edward-Lennox has announced Government approval of a $12,500 grant for the final engineering and construction of Consecon Mill Dam.

The construction and associated work will replace the old destroyed dam and, according to Mr. Taylor, the dam will provide recreation and water for firefighting purposes.

The MPP attended a meeting of Consecon area ratepayers in 1972 regarding the need for a dam and has worked in support of it for many months.

Honored Students

Albert College held its annual convocation in the Memorial Chapel of the college Sunday afternoon. Among the many awards and presentations handed out, were awards for the boy and girl student for being the finest representative students of the school. Shirley Wales was presented the Howard Award while Warren Lee was awarded the Marsh Award for this honor. They have a few words following the ceremonies with Lorne Shewfelt, headmaster of the school.

Deaf Teacher of Deaf Has Advice for Hearing

Most of us as children were told the story of Dumbo, the elephant with giant-sized ears who overcame his difference and learned to fly.

A Montreal teacher of the deaf, himself deaf but able to hear with a hearing aid, uses that simple children's story to paint a vivid picture of what a deaf child has to go through psychologically in society and how he can cope with his handicap.

Charlie Bourke, is only 25 but has been deaf since birth. Through perseverance and hope he was able to complete his graduate work at Yale and Columbia and will be returning to Columbia to continue his studies.

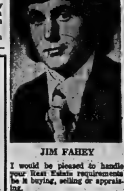
He has been teaching at the Montreal Oral School since September 1973 and was speaking to the last meeting for 1973-74 of the Quinte Association for Hearing-Handicapped Children.

Mr. Bourke is the deaf member of the staff at the school, one of the few completely oral day schools for the deaf in Canada. His students are seven and eight years old.

Continuing his analogy of Dumbo, Mr. Bourke explained that deaf children are like Dumbo with his big ears. Only instead of big ears they have hearing aids, something that sets them apart from the other children.

And just as the other elephants made fun of Dumbo because he was different, so, too, do other children make fun of deaf children out of ignorance and prejudice, said Mr. Bourke.

But as Dumbo was befriended by a little mouse named Timothy who helped him realize his dreams and cope in society, so is it important for the deaf child to have someone that understands him, and will accept him for what he really is, even if he is different.



And as Dumbo was able, with the help of his friend Timothy, to overcome his difference and turn his fantasy dream of flying into reality, deaf children can also cope to other alternatives such as art, pantomime, writing to compensate for the hearing they lack.

The over-all message Mr. Bourke tried to point out through the story was that motivation is the key for a child to psychologically cope with his handicap. That no matter how far-fetched and ridiculous a dream may seem, even something like a flying elephant, that dream may come true.

This is achieved through perseverance and the help of understanding people said Mr. Bourke. "Everybody has something to offer society even if they are different. Nature has endowed us with fantasies to cope with reality," he told his audience of mostly members of hearing handicapped children.

The Quinte Dance Centre held a special presentation Saturday evening in their Front Street studios. Some students performed a dance presentation and Christine Cleary, given to 22 of the students from Grade 1 to 4. The first half of the program was a demonstration character class and the second half was this performance by Donna Kelly, one of the senior students attending this special presentation were David and Joanne Scott, Ballet Master and Mistress of the National Ballet of Canada. Mr. Scott is a brother of Donna Scott, director of the Quinte Dance Centre.

Cadet Activities Reaching Climax

By HOWARD KORESH
Air Commodore A. D. Ross, OC, CFEC, CD, regional representative and vice-chairman of the Air Cadet League of Canada was made Honorary Life Member by the ANAF Association at a reception in the Tartan Lounge of the Duke of Edinburgh Unit following the air cadet inspection last week. The presentation was made by unit president Hank Ford immediately after the inspection last week. The trophy, to be known as the Allen Rasmussen Award, is in memory of the late cadet warrant officer who died in January, 1971. The presentation was made by Mrs. Rasmussen and president Hank Ford. The Duke of Edinburgh Unit 201 trophy for Youth and Citizenship was awarded to FS.Sgt. Terry Wheaton by unit vice-president Edward Kehoe, while the keeper trophy was presented by Alderman Arthur Keegan.

Three members of the local cadet corps will be attending Annapolis Naval Academy next week as guests of General Lewis B. Hershey, president ANAVICUS and the Department of Maryland, Stephen Hopkins and Gary Rattan, members of No. 2216 Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment RCACC and Ross Gibson from the 908 Duke of Edinburgh Squadron RCAC have been selected to represent Canada at the one-week citizenship training course at the academy. This is the fourth year the local unit has been asked to select candidates and they were grateful indeed to J. C. Lundberg, past dominion president, ANAF, for making the trip a reality. Following a short briefing session the cadets will be presented with their tickets and best wishes of the unit prior to leaving on June 18.

The ANAF men's invitational golf tournament drew 33 golfers Sunday morning to Stoco for the first of several matches planned for the summer. Bob Reid took top honors with a low gross while Dick Thomson was first with a low net. The most honest golfer in the tournament was Sam Hewson. Sports chairman Jack Fitzgerald awarded prizes to every participant and announced the next tournament will be held at Stoco on Sunday, July 27.

On Tuesday, June 17, Duke of Edinburgh Unit vice-president W.J. "Jack" Ford celebrates his 77th birthday, 43 years of which he has been a member of the local unit. May he continue to be a daily visitor to the club for many years to come.

Entertainment this week in the Tartan Lounge is the summer cocktail dance on Saturday, June 21th featuring the music of the popular duo Hart and Soul. Make up a party and enjoy an evening of dancing and song to this very popular entertainment group. Joe Lewis returns for another engagement this coming Friday with entertainment commencing at 5:30 p.m. for members in the lower lounge.

Sick comrades in Belleville General Hospital are: C.J. Belshaw, room 326 while Walter Stockwell is in room 722.

Question Of Rights

There is a curious backlash — counter offensive if you like — under way with regard to those who smoke and those who don't.

The smokers are saying in effect: "Get off our backs . . . if a man (or woman — and there are plenty of the latter who do) wants to smoke himself to death, who shouldn't he?"

All well and good — from the standpoint of human rights, but it does not get away from the fact that many a smoker abuses this right where the interests of the general public, cleanliness and hygiene are concerned.

Consider the teenage boy in the dairy bar. He was frantically inhaling and exhaling to finish the weed before his food order was ready, wafting smoke over the whole place. Tobacco smoke is tough not only on the lungs but on clothes.

And there are the supermarket smokers. We believe others should follow the example of a Toronto housewife (North York or Scarborough as we recall) which recently banned smoking in these establishments. Dairy bars similarly would be contributing to a more hygienic situation if they said "No" to smoking.

And what about the characters who empty their cat ashtrays in the middle of the supermarket lot?

A classic example of abuse of smoking rights has also come to us in the form of an exchange of letters between Mrs. D. G. Anderson of Belleville and officials of the Canadian National Railway in Montreal.

Mrs. Anderson had written complaining of a violation of non-smoking regulations in a section of a coach she and her husband occupied between Montreal and Belleville on March 30. She complained further that mention of the violation to the train conductor had drawn a negative response.

A letter from the CN expressed the company's "sincere apologies for your unfortunate experience . . ." when the conductor did not courteously handle your complaint to enforce the non smoking regulations in that section of the car reserved for non-smokers."

The letter added: "The incident is most regrettable and does not reflect the standard of service we like to maintain with our customers . . ."

The responsibility of smokers is clear. They have a right to indulge their habit, but at the same time they should think a little more about the rights of non-smokers.

B.C. Pays Well

The highest paid people on a weekly earnings basis in Canada literally are the "workers" in B.C., those who live under the political wing of "Labor."

We refer to British Columbia and its New Democratic Government.

Average weekly earnings in Canadian industry in March stood at $170.48 and were highest in B.C. at $192.15, according to figures released by Statistics Canada.

The figures for other provinces were: Ontario $174.17; Alberta $172.91, Quebec 163.36; Newfoundland $159.11; Manitoba $156.76; Saskatchewan $156.65; New Brunswick $148.04; Nova Scotia $144.14 and Prince Edward Island $120.00.

Average weekly earnings (by industry division) also revealing, with construction people the most affluent at $236.76, followed by mining at $228.10, manufacturing $178.34, finance, insurance and real estate $167.10, trade $138.73 and service $131.60.

Hourly earnings in March averaged $4.10 in construction, $5.18 in mining and $4.14 in manufacturing.

Newfoundland's comparative affluence does not seem to tie in with its traditional image as one of Canada's less well-endowed regions. Possibly construction and mining projects have something to do with its strong showing, outside of the prairie provinces and the Maritimes.

All in all though the figures are a measure of Canada's overall affluence, one of the factors which makes this country one of the most favored and envied in the world today.

Medical Men Express Views

The Point Of Death: Some Aspects of An Old Problem

UNESCO Features

The progress of medicine in almost every part of the world has increased the power of the doctor. At the same time, it has created new dilemmas for him, because of the changing role of the individual, science and society.

Even the earliest times, the moment of death has been declared by the point at which the heart stops beating, but in the past few years a movement has been gaining ground in America and several European countries to make irreversible coma — a brain death — the determining criterion, rather than the cessation of spontaneous respiratory or cardiac function.

This problem which raises a number of scientific and ethical issues — particularly because of the pressure to use the organs of hopelessly unconscious patients for transplant purposes — was discussed along with the question of euthanasia at a round-table meeting in Geneva last November. The meeting, which brought together doctors, philosophers, scientists, lawyers, social scientists and theologians from Britain, British Guiana, Germany, Sweden and the United States, was organized by UNESCO, the World Health Organization and the International Organization of Medical Sciences under World Health Association and UNESCO auspices.

Among the participants were Dr. Henry K. Beecher, professor of Anesthesiology at Harvard University and "godfather" of the new definition of death; Prof. Jean Cremieux, the kidney transplant centre at the Hospital Necker, Paris; Dr. Jens Lauberg, of the World Medical Association; Dr. Alfred Gellhorn, director of the Center for Biomedical Education, City College of New York and formerly dean of the University of Philadelphia Medical School; Prof. Serge Lebovici, Centre Alfred Binet, Paris; and Professor Marie-Pierre Herzog, director of UNESCO's human rights section and co-ordinator unit. Here is what they had to say about the question.

First of Three Parts.

BEECHER: Can society afford to discard the "dying" as capable of hopelessly unconscious patients when they could be used to relieve the health dependency of but still salvageable individuals? Only because of current business throwing away human resources which are potentially life-saving. It's permissible to use them when the criterion of brain death has been fulfilled. Not only permissible, but mandatory.

The exact moment of death may be impossible to determine. But death of the brain is an easy diagnosis to make. In fact, it can be made with no apparatus for us do not feel it necessary to include electroencephalogram tests. many people do, but I think they fail to understand the chances of error and place too much reliance on the electro-encephalogram.

The definition of brain death has two parts. First, the individual whose brain is dead suffers from deep unconsciousness and failure to breathe for any period. Secondly, there is no muscular movement or reflex response. Also there are no reflexes except an occasional spinal reflex which does not go through the brain.

These conditions must prevail over a period of no less than 24 hours. And two groups of people have to be excluded: individuals who are under barbiturates — and who cannot be aroused — and those who have metabolized the barbiturates and their blood level has returned to normal - and individuals who are hypothermic, that is, very cold — below 32 degrees C.

BENOIT: In kidney transplant operations you can't use the kidneys of any person who has recently died - only those of a person who, because of an accident, is suffering from what we call irreversible coma: brain death. It is the card-die and respiratory function is maintained by the heart-lung machine.

Three or four years ago, when the second of this kind occurred in France and we approached the families for permission to remove the kidneys, we met a refusal in 85 per cent of the cases. Today, they accept in nine cases out of ten.

BEECHER: I have a card in my purse, my wallet stating that I don't wish to receive extraordinary medical treatment in a fatal condition. I think a very good case can be made for legalized euthanasia in hopeless cases. No law I am aware of has ever been invoked that there's no necessity to continue to a desperate situation, to waste drugs and care upon an individual who by no stretch of the mind could be restored to anything approximating consciousness. That's what I call negative euthanasia. I am made uneasy by the easy acceptance of euthanasia by society - it's not an entity. Certainly, if you decide to put a sick man into a vein or give him a dose of barbiturates...you can kill a person; that's positive euthanasia. But if you simply withhold treatment you're waiting for the continuation of life. It's negative euthanasia and I think in fact, ethically, it is different, in many situations.

JONGEBREUR: In a survey of 418 doctors carried out in the Netherlands, 60 per cent showed that more than half were prepared to practice passive euthanasia (not to prolong life artificially) at the request of incurable patients or their families. If the validity of such a request were legally recognized.

Since 1961, the Swedes have considered it both legitimate and justifiable to create conditions for doctors not to prolong the life of incurable patients. The physician's chief duty is to cure not to kill. But does prolongation of the life of the terminally ill by unrelenting therapy really represent the point of view of the patient the relatives? Of the physician to accept defeat?

Canada Post Blows Own Trumpet

Peterborough Examiner:

Canada Post — better known as the Post Office — has come up with a new issue of stamps. The issue of six 6-cent stamps marks 100 years of letter carrier service in Canada. The stamps honor employees and carry portraits of six different types of postal workers going about their daily business.

The issue of these six stamps" said Postmaster General Andre Ouellet, "on occasion for all of us to remember 100 years of dedicated, devoted service to the Canadian public by letter carriers.

Not more than this, the issue gives us a chance to remember not just the postman who makes his rounds, but all the thousands of men and women who have made the postal service who serve the public every day."

Mr. Ouellet, we notice, did not say "one hundred years of dedicated — and uninterrupted — service."

Still, the postmaster general has a point. Just what, the 6¢ stamps officially go on the market, will indeed be an occasion to remember our postal service.

Those poor forgotten souls who toil relentlessly to move the mail deserve their very own remembrance day. After all, it has been at least a month since the post office and its employes dominated our newspapers, saturated our radios and television and vied most peculiarly for our total attention as we agitated past their deserted rural boxes.

How quickly we forget.

Mr. Ouellet also took the opportunity to remind us how well the post office is doing in keeping pace with the rapid change and constant growth of Canada." I guess the post office, so goes Canada, he implied. How comforting.

"In a very real sense, the growth of the Post Office is intertwined with the growth of Canada. For 100 years, the tradition of unfailing postal service was developed as the standards set by the very first carriers.

That tradition of "unfailing postal service" lives on today with the post office's $2,000 employees, said Mr. Ouellet.

How quickly he forgets.

In light of the chronic amnesia suffered by a large proportion of the Canadian population, including our own Mr. Ouellet, June 11 will be an eventful day for the nation.

Would it be going too far to suggest two minutes silence be observed as the mailman drops the bills through the door it will be the least we could do in remembrance of the 100 years of "unfailing postal service" we have all — so forgetfully — enjoyed.

Linguistic Hurdle For Bourassa

Trois-Rivieres Le Nouvelliste: Premier Robert Bourassa says he hopes his legislation making French Quebec's official language will be passed before the national assembly's summer adjournment, probably in mid-May.

We suspect, however, that Mr. Bourassa is in less of a hurry now to have this legislation passed.

He has been aggressive in the national Assembly, calling Parti Quebecois opposition "unduly and ill-conceived reaction" and describing as "Orangemen" the English-speaking elements alarmed by the proposed legislation.

The premier has had to be known that amendments to the legislation may be passed, especially in the most controversial area, education.

The extremists of both sides have been the most vocal up to now. But Mr. Bourassa admits his legislation pleases neither side. Even within the Liberal caucus, fundamental differences have evolved.

Mr. Bourassa has never shown much ardor in fighting linguistic battles, preferring to deal with economics. His slowness in dealing with a matter that has been developing for more than but not learned lesson from it — if we judge by last fall's provincial election.

Thus we cannot say the premier would be frustrated if his language legislation is blocked. We must even wonder if it is not a ploy.

It would not be the first time that the premier has retreated.

With the case for which is known, he could readily fall back on the legislature committee's study of the bill, on the legislation and abandon a position that has become excessively troublesome.

But a leader less courageous than Mr. Stanfield could have looked for a compromise, seeking arguments that would give his party the least possible trouble.

The quickness, directness and clarity with which Mr. Stanfield dealt with the risky question justify the judgment that he is a man whom we should render homage.

Experimental Train's Cool Reception

Brantford Expositor:

Already the federal government and three private partners have put in $6 million into developing LRC train service (initials stand for Light, Rapid, Comfortable), but the reaction of CP Rail chairman Ian Sinclair to his experimental swift, aluminum train is anything but encouraging.

He seems to sum up the public transportation situation appropriately. Because people generally prefer cars, there is no doubt that other forms of transportation have relatively little to offer passengers. Planes, trains, buses and boats are either too expensive, too inconvenient, too slow, or uncomfortable.

The LRC, said Mr. Sinclair, "will not compete with the 707's (short takeoff a landing) aircraft now being developed privately and at great public expense. And LRCs could link up with the Canadian National's contention that the Ontario government is developing a great expense and in considerable controversy at the Canadian National Exhibition grounds. Mr. Sinclair said GO transportation "is not up to par." The LRC could be the reply to Hamilton-Ottawa or Edmonton-Calgary flights for people who dislike the sometimes bumpy air trips they would experience in STOLport(durnit) turbulence.

The LRC would take about two hours to get from Montreal to Toronto but Mr. Sinclair feels the 360-mile trip is too long for a train passenger. His explanation is one of the best summaries of the transportation situation: "People have been spoiled by the suspension systems on their automobiles and the smoothness of jet aircraft." The railway's image of transportation degeneration gap which leaves passengers in the 19th century inadequately served. This is why government cannot come up with complacency as Mr. Sinclair seems able to do.

Road Works Nemesis For Trees

Editor,
The Intelligencer,

With only six months left of the present term of office of the incumbent city council the promised road-widening program is now getting under way.

The scene of the activity is Bridge Street West with the prospect of building expressway type highway of modern design holes and cutting down trees. To date 11 perfectly good mature trees have fallen under the axe cutters assault.

As I remember Victoria Avenue to be one of the more beautiful streets in the city. I enquired of the Public Works Dept. what plans, if any, existed to replace those lovely old trees.

I was advised...that...at this time, there are no plans to replace the trees that have been removed to allow for widening of the roadway.

I have never been able to understand, why, in the first place, that those who are responsible for the preservation of preserving those things that contribute to the beauty and charm of the community find it necessary to indulge in such acts of folly in the name of progress.

Why is it necessary to widen the street at all? Are there plans afoot to give us another bridge over the Moira at both ends? Is it that the election promises of the present council seem to have the tinge of tokenism about it?

Another thing that concerns me is the fact that there appears to be an increasing number of dumps being established in the city.

From what I am given to understand these have been given the go ahead by the Ministry of the Environment for the dumping of fill — fill being good solid earth.

However, if one examines the junk that is being dumped you find every thing from bedsteads, domestic garbage, timber and old tires. Complaints have been made to the responsible officials at City Hall but it appears that no action beyond the required poll that enables them to hide behind.

PACE is currently proofreading these articles and have found a few more pictures have been made, and if this practice continues, the City Council can look forward to a fee, of color slides and slide show, prior to appropriate action being taken.

Assisting The Mentally Retarded

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

After visiting the Ontario Association Conference for the Mentally Retarded held in May at Trent University and also visiting on a Sunday committee at the L. S. Penrose Centre in Kingston, I felt it was a duty to inform the local public that "Times they are a-Changing", and that people who have previously been in institutions will be integrated (that's the substantive of Society).

The Ontario Government as of April 1, 1974, started to move some dignity for the first time to people, who though limited in knowledge, can be an asset instead of a liability to a municipality, if given the opportunity.

When you notice someone who is really trying to become part of society — and surely can use a lot of help — PLEASE — reach out, and let him, or her, know that you will accept their limited capabilities — and who knows, maybe you will have a better understanding of what is meant by brotherhood.

Macaulay Mountain Shelter Opened

PICTON — The original concept of conservation was recalled last weekend by James Taylor, MPP, Prince Edward-Lennox, during the official opening of the Macaulay Mountain Conservation Area Recreational Shelter.

Guest speaker for this special event, Mr. Taylor noted that water management was the initial goal of conservation. Each of Ontario's conservation authorities covers a drainage area of one or more watersheds.

Mr. Taylor commented that he supports the "watershed basis" as the proper concept of management of provincial conservation authorities. The MPP, who has served on a select committee on conservation, said that most early authorities were created because of flooding. The need for supplementary programs was recognized and today other facets of conservation such as fish and wildlife studies and pollution are considered. He referred to the Macaulay Mountain site as primarily a recreation area.

In a review of the Prince Edward-Hastings Conservation Authority, Mr. Taylor noted that it was established in December, 1965, through an "order-in-council. It is one of 38 conservation authorities in Ontario covering 41,600 square miles of territory and including 648 municipalities.

The Macaulay Mountain Conservation area was named for the late Reverend William Macaulay, once rector of the Old Church of St. Mary Magdalene in Picton. It was once a part of his wide land holdings in the town.

"He seemed a very progressive individual, not just concerned with the hereafter but with the here," said Mr. Taylor.

The recreational shelter is located on property purchased by the Prince Edward Region Conservation Authority in 1968. The provincial government provided a 50 per cent grant and a further grant of $4,000 to enable preparation of development plans. The area later was enlarged by the acquisition of an additional 200 acres.

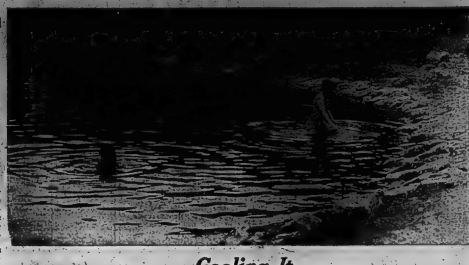
Mr. Taylor commented that the province contributed toward the cost of construction of an entry to the site, well drilling, dam construction and the building of a parking lot. Winter Works and SWEEP programs were used in environmental improvement work at the site.

Through a 10-year agreement with the PERCA, skiers can enjoy the slopes of Macaulay Mountain in the winter months. The Picton Bay Snowriders also have access to the area for snowmobiling.

"It's a multi-use facility and it accommodates people with a wide variety of interests. It will serve the people of Prince Edward as a recreational outlet," said Mr. Taylor.

He said that future plans for the area include a unique stream and escarpment site, development for outdoor education and provision of walking trails and a workshop.

Construction of the shelter gives the PERCA administrative headquarters for the first time.



Regional Director of the ministry of natural resources, T. W. Huenton, predicted that the building will be widely used by the community and will serve as an attraction for visitors.

Colin Caswell, chairman of the Ontario Conservation Authority Chairmen's Committee, termed the site "a prime area" with its ski hill and pond.

"You have done a wonderful job not only for the community but for a surrounding area of 300 miles," he said.

George Hess, MP Prince Edward-Hastings observed, "This is the great difference between Prince Edward and other counties. While they are talking about it, you do it." He said that too many areas focus on new highrises while there is too little thought and action to preserve the beauties of nature.

Municipal officials and guests attending the Saturday opening were led to their seats by piper Ormand Reid. After guest speakers' remarks were completed, chairman of the PERCA invited Mr. Taylor to unveil a plaque marking the opening of the shelter. A wine and cheese party followed in the new building.

Cooling It

Whom it's hot, it's hot and youngsters enjoying a dip in the pond at the Macaulay Mountain Conservation area Saturday were oblivious to dedication ceremonies under way nearby. About a dozen children dove and swam in the man-made pool at the foot of the mountain throughout the afternoon.

Shelter Opens

James Taylor, MPP for Prince Edward Lennox, did the honors this past weekend in opening the Macaday Mountain Conservation Area Recreational Shelter. The area was named after the late Rev. William Macaulay who Mr. Taylor described as a "progressive individual not only concerned with the hereafter but with the here."

Vimy Remembered At Trenton Dinner

TRENTON — The sombre remembrance of the battle of Vimy Ridge filled the Trenton Legion Saturday.

More than 150 people gathered to ponder the battle and its losses. Seventeen men sitting at a single headtable cast their thoughts back farther than the rest. They had been there at the battle on the coast of France that broke the Germans's hold. Vimy was not the final shot but it brought the Allies into a commanding position that finally brought an end to the Great War.

Mike Harrison — speaking for the first war veterans — recalled following the "the hot dog feed held in the old armory," that marked the first Vimy banquet in 1919.

"This is a far cry from the banquets held then. You've certainly gone overboard," he said.

Saturday marked the 57th Vimy dinner, combined in later years with a salute to the men who fought in the second world war.

Don Dishart, commenting on the men of both wars and to the young people who knew neither of the world's great encounters, "take a look at the person in the chair beside you before the chair becomes empty."

For one woman Saturday night, WW II was the remembrance of the more than 400 "sons" she adopted.

Hazel Farley corresponded and sent bundles to the boys on the battlefields who had once filled chairs in her Trenton High School classroom.

Miss Farley sat quietly throughout the evening, remarking only on the beauty of the roses presented to her. She is the only woman in Canada to be presented with honorary, lifetime membership to the Legion.

Guest speakers were Legion contestants in provincial public speaking competitions. Cathy Carscadden and Robin Fitzgerald. The girls spoke on Canada and Peace.

Hazel Farley Honored

Miss Hazel Farley was presented with roses Saturday night during the Trenton Legion's Vimy-VE banquet. Miss Farley is the only woman in Canada to be given a legion membership. The membership was bestowed on her for her correspondence to more than 400 boys fighting in WW2 who earlier had fought with homework problems in her Trenton High School classroom.

Aircraft On Duty

TWEED (Special) — The Ministry of Natural Resources Aircraft has returned to Tweed for the summer season. The pilot this season is Doug Calver, and the engineer is Jim Kirk.

The Aircraft is used for many phases of Natural Resources work including stocking fish in lakes, reconnaissance flying on fires, water droppers on fires, supplying firefighters with food, and suppression supplies as required and transportation for firefighters to many parts of the province.

Already this year the pilot and engineer report having trouble with persons tampering with the aircraft at night or on days when staff are off work. This is a very serious situation as essential servicing parts may be damaged easily and might not be apparent in the pre-flight check and cause a serious mishap or loss of life.

Wayne Miller, formerly Superintendent of Bon Echo Provincial Park has been promoted to District Parks Supervisor, Tweed district. Wayne, with his wife Shirley and daughters Susanne and Dawn will be moving to Tweed within the next few weeks.

Cycle Dumped, Injuries Slight

WEST LAKE — Two Belleville area residents escaped serious injury Sunday afternoon when the motorcycle they were riding rolled on the shoulder of the West Lake Road.

Dennis Davis, 20, Foxboro, and his passenger, Judy Morrison, 17, Belleville, both received cuts and bruises in the mishap.

The incident occured when the motorcycle swerved from the path of a car to the shoulder of the road.

Driver of the car, Ken Hyatt, RR16, Picton, was unhurt. Damage to the 1974 motorcycle was estimated at $200. There was no damage to the car.

Alberta's Blue-eyed Sheik Disclaims Desire to be PM

EDMONTON (CP) — He has been called the king, the blue-eyed sheik, the programmed man, the toothpaste smile, the nice little rich kid.

He is the boy who announced in Grade 4 that he would be prime minister; then in the man who now disclaims desire to sit anyone on Parliament Hill.

This is Peter Lougheed, who sometimes refers to himself as "he," who works an average of 12 hours a day, 5½ days a week as premier of Alberta.

He is the man described widely in his province, after three years in office as the pivot and dynamo of his party, so totally in control that a successor is not even being thought about.

Many observers believe that if he were to call an immediate election his Progressive Conservatives would sit but in the assessment's habitat of federal and international affairs, says the premier believes in the team approach, perhaps inflated by experience in sport.

"It's not enough to say that a man believes in that type of approach but Peter Lougheed lives it."

On the floor of the legislature he often looks like a quarterback calling the plays.

Sometimes when his ministers rise to reply to the opposition in question period, Mr. Lougheed scribbles notes and then jumps up and passes them down the row of seats himself, bypassing the house pages.

The oil revenues roll in, international consortiums line up for chances to spend billions on the Athabasca oil sands and petrochemical plants. A pipeline from the Arctic is planned across the province, agricultural returns soar and secondary industry becomes stronger.

The opposition in the legislature is reported to be in disarray.

The 45-year-old premier doesn't take credit for all of that, especially for the soaring oil revenues based on international moves. But the Alberta boom and what many regard as Alberta-first policies are said to have caused Mr. Lougheed's popularity to soar in his province.

But he still comes on like a football player, scrambling for yardage or to knock down a pass.

Commentator Harry Midgley described him thus in Edmonton Journal:

"He has the instinct to move in for the kill and he usually senses skilfully where the vulnerable spot in his opponent's defence is. But when stirred, he has a tendency to indulge in overkill."

Five-foot-eight and in good physical condition, the one-time defensive halfback for Edmonton Eskimos of the Western Football Conference still operates at a pace that tires many who try to keep up. He bounces as he walks.

He told reporters late last year while developing energy policies and working out an all-price deal with Ottawa that he couldn't "afford the luxury of feeling tired."

Person who knew him in Calgary before he became premier describe him as stubborn, always willing to commit himself and unwilling to fall short of his goals.

As a warm-up for politics, he was the president of the students' council at the University of Alberta where he obtained bachelor of arts and master of law degrees.

He gained a bachelor's degree in business administration from Harvard and afterwards joined Mannix Co. in Calgary as junior counsel. Four years later, he was vice-president of the land and construction firm. The next year he was director—at 32 a brilliant business success.

He courted Jeanne Estelle Rogers in the same determined manner, getting in touch with her dates with the popular campus beauty long ahead of competitors.

They were married in 1953 and have two sons and two daughters.

In 1963, with legal and business experience behind him, he left Mannix for private practice—and politics.

When he won the Conservative leadership in 1965, the party lacked even a single seat in the legislature. It had been without a leader for a year.

Mr. Getty says Mr. Lougheed would often go to four or five meetings a night to speak to groups of three or four, maybe a dozen, to build the party.

"He gave himself at all of these rallies. He worked as hard for a group of three or four as he did for larger ralies. That's what I respected most."

Politics were nothing new. His grandfather, James A. Lougheed, became a Conservative senator at 35. His grandmother was the daughter of a senator.

But Peter Lougheed was scarcely known in the province dominated by the strong hand of Social Credit Premier Ernest Manning. When an election was called in 1967, only Mr. Lougheed and five other PCs gained seats.

It was small representation but it gave the leader and his party a prominent platform and a certain momentum in the eyes of Albertans.

Premier Manning retired and was replaced by the more folksy Harry Strom, a dry farmer from southern Alberta.

The Conservatives won the Manning election in the by-election and became second party. Mr. Lougheed increased his hectic efforts. When the 1971 election was called, the Conservative leader began a campaign like never before seen in Alberta. The cry was: "It's time for a change, Now!"

It worked. Alberta had a Conservative administration for the first time, winning 49 of the 75 legislature seats while Social Credit dropped to 23. The New Democratic Party had one.

The Conservatives had a new star. Mr. Lougheed was immediately questioned as a likely candidate for the federal leadership.

But the new premier steered firmly away from any suggestion that he might be a successor to Robert Stanfield as national Conservative leader.

He is still mentioned prominently for the job, despite reports of loss of prestige over Alberta-first energy policies, but his answer appears even stronger than before.

"I love Alberta," Mr. Lougheed said recently when asked if he would consider succeeding Mr. Stanfield should the Conservatives lose the July 8 election. "My roots are here, I have a job to do. And I am not thinking about it (the federal leadership)."

Mr. Getty has a hard time seeing Mr. Lougheed working at anything besides politics.

"He's a political animal maybe not in the accepted sense of opportunism, but he sometimes reacts politically where others might react emotionally or intellectually."

Quarterback at Work

Alberta premier Peter Lougheed, onetime defensive halfback for the Edmonton Eskimos of the Western Football Conference, is said to look like a quarterback calling plays on the floor of the legislature. Politics runs in Mr. Lougheed's family — his grandfather was a Conservative senator and his grandmother was the daughter of a senator. (CP Photo)

Men.
It's time you took milk-drinking more seriously.

If you think only kids need milk, think again. It's a potent "nutritional cocktail" that can make a big contribution to your health, vigour and vitality.

How milk helps increase vitality and stamina.

Milk is a nearly complete nutritional package. All by itself, it can provide many of the food factors needed for health.

Result: milk is geared to meet your body's needs better than any other food.

It does not give you a quickie artificial or short-term lift (like a candy bar or cup of coffee). Instead, it makes a serious nutritional contribution to your body's reserves of strength...helping you to function, and enjoy life, to the fullest.

A food— not just a drink.

Although you do drink milk, its nutritional potency puts it into the "food" class in a big way.

One proof of this is the fact that milk actually feels filling and satisfying: A real stick-to-the-ribs sensation.

This is why milk, added to a grab-and-run type of meal, can boost its food value, and make it more filling and satisfying. So eating on the fly needn't mean running out of steam halfway through a busy day.

Milk's role in a man's fitness programme.

If you don't have some sort of fitness programme, you're just asking for trouble.

But "fitness programme" doesn't necessarily mean health cultism or elaborate equipment or expensive clubs.

It means recognizing the importance of getting proper sleep; of getting some kind of physical activity every day; and of seeing that your body's engines are properly fueled.

Here's where milk comes on strong. Along with meat or fish, fruit and vegetables, bread and cereal, it should be part of each day's food intake.

If you eat the right things, by the way, you won't need to eat great quantities to feel satisfied and benefited by your meals: it's not just how much you eat, it's what.

And "what" includes milk, no two ways about it. It is such a serious food that no adult can afford to ignore it.

Nutritional facts about milk.

Milk provides many nutrients essential to adult health—and, importantly, provides them in a balance correctly proportioned to the body's needs. Milk is rated an excellent dietary source of NO LESS THAN FIVE essential nutrients:

Calcium. Adult bones and teeth continue to need calcium to stay in good shape.

Protein. A very important health factor. Not many people realize that milk provides high quality protein.

Riboflavin. Another factor in maintaining adult health.

Vitamin A. Milk is an excellent source of this important vitamin.

Phosphorus. Another factor needed to maintain the health of adult bones and teeth.

In addition to these five, milk is a good dietary source of THIAMIN. In most cases VITAMIN D has been added in Ontario.

This is why milk has earned the description of "Nature's most nearly perfect food". And why it is so important that adults realize that they, too, need milk. Each day.

To get the most out of milk, drink it every day.

Right now, why not start adding a glass of milk to whatever you eat for breakfast every morning.

In addition, have another glass—or a carton—of it sometime during the day. At lunch or at breaks or even before bed.

That's all there is to it. But—do it every day, to get the fullest benefit from milk.

That benefit is worth having. Milk, remember, is Nature's most nearly complete nutritional package.

It can give you a man-size push along the road to fuller health and more abundant vitality.

That's quite a promise.

But then, milk is quite a food.

Quinte Cuisine

It makes a sense of gastronomic adventure to try Lynn Knudsen's Steak Tartare. On the other hand, she says, once you try it, you'll be a fan. It's favorite with husband Brian and they often serve it as a first course to friends when they entertain at their Bridge Street home. Lynn, who expects their first child next month, is a golfer and bridge player and is currently busy crocheting little sweaters.

Steak Tartare

two lbs. ground lean steak
½ cup chopped onions
¼ cup drained capers four egg yolks
eight anchovy fillets, chopped one or two cloves finely chopped garlic one tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
pinch tarragon
¼ cup finely chopped watercress
¼ to ½ cup chopped parsley
¼ to ½ tsp. Worcestershire sauce

Have the very lean steak — don't substitute a cheaper cut — ground twice. Combine steak with onions, capers, anchovies, egg yolks. Add remaining ingredients according to personal tastes. Toss lightly to blend. Mound on serving platter and chill three hours. Serve surrounded by crackers, rye bread and pumpernickel.

MR. AND MRS. PETER FRALICK

Ryckman — Kellar

King Street United Church, Trenton, was the setting for the May 18 wedding of Susan Jeanine Kellar and Donald Charles Ryckman. Rev. Doug Joblin, Mississauga and Rev. McDowell, Trenton performed the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alton Kellar, RR 2, Frankford and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon Ryckman, Brester, Ontario.

The bride, given in marriage by her mother and father, wore a pure silk full length gown. The gown featured a high mandarin neckline adorned by imported alencon lace, an organza yoke was outlined by the alencon lace which ran the hemline. Her veil from a Juliette cap, and she carried a cascade of roses.

The matron of honor, Lesley English wore a yellow print full-length gown, the empire bodice featured a square neckline and short puffed sleeves. The A-line skirt featured a flounce at the bottom. A yellow cumberbund adorned the waist-line. She carried a white parasol

Bridesmaids Ruth Blamire and Sheila Austin were gowns of yellow and green respectively, featuring matching cumberbunds and feathered sleeves. They carried white parasols with flowers adorning them.

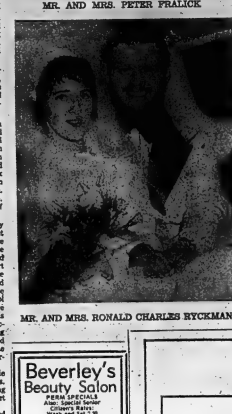
Flower girls Melanie Blamire, daughter of Mrs. Blamire were a matching dress and carried a basket of assorted spring flowers.

The best man was Gord English and the ushers were Doug Ryckman, brother of the groom and David Kellar brother of the bride.

The couple took a wedding trip to Kingston, Niagara Falls, Smooth Rock Falls, Exeter, and will reside at Pine Falls, Manitoba.

Hayden — Fox

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT HAYDEN



New Westminster United were stirred like the maid of honor but wore a soft yellow.

The flower girl Sherri Lee Marsland, niece of the bride, dressed in a similar baby-blue gown and carried a small basket of flowers.

Before the ceremony candles on the altar were lit by Kimberly Morden and Vincent Freeman, niece and nephew of the groom.

The best man was James Dorie, friend of the groom. The ushers were Arthur Hayden brother of the groom and David Marsland, brother-in-law of the bride. The groom and his attendants all were dark brown cuzedos.

After the reception held in the Frankford Legion hall the couple left for a tour of Niagara Falls and the Great Lakes. They are low residing in Copper Cliff.

MR. AND MRS. RONALD CHARLES HYCKMAN

Fralick — DeRushie

Bridge Street United Church was the setting for the May 4 wedding of Michele Anne DeRushie and Peter William Fralick. They were united by Rev. George K. Ward.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph DeRushie, RR 4, Belleville and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ron Fralick, 7 Linton Park Road.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a floor length chantilly lace gown with long tapered sleeves with a frill at the wrist. The bodice was moulded to the natural waistline and the full tiered bouffant skirt formed the chapel length train.

A bonnet of frilled lace held in place the tiered veil of silk illusion which was accented with tiny seed-pearls. Her bouquet was red roses and baby's breath.

The matron of honor Barbara Harcourt of Woodstock wore a blue floor length gown of organza with long sleeves and flounced hemline, accented with frilled chantilly lace. Her hat was matching ribbon banded with peau ribbon to match the gown, and completes the ensemble.

The bridesmaids Mary Jean DeRushie sister-in-law of the bride, Paula Cox of Nanaimo and Eleanor McPhee of Perth wore outfits the same as the matron of honour's in pink, all carried bouquets of white mums and pink roses. The junior bridesmaids, Cathy and Gloria Fralick sisters of the groom, wore dresses similar to the bridesmaids only in yellow and carried heart shaped cushions, made of the same material as the dresses.

The best man was Donald Green of Deseronto.

The ushers were Philip DeRushie brother of the bride, Dave Wenkitt and Larry Newton all of Belleville. They wore pearl grey tuxedos.

The reception took place at the Belleville Shrine Club, where there was a supper and dance.

The couple took a wedding trip around Lake Michigan and will reside at Kenron Estate, RR 3, Belleville.

MR. AND MRS. RALPH FRANCIS

Francis — Rollins

Trinity United Church, Madoc, was the scene of a afternoon wedding in May. Joined in matrimony were Carolyn Marie Rollins and Ralph Percy Francis. Rev. Douglas Heard performed the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Rollins of RR 3, Madoc and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Francis, RR 3, Madoc.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of sheer polyester over taffeta featuring a high neckline with a pleated yoke, embroidered with pink roses. The long, full sleeves were gathered at the wrists with frilled cuffs. The gown was fashioned with a high waistline and the skirt fell to a pleated crepe ruffle.

The maid of honor was Sharon Chapman, cousin of the bride and she wore a sleeveless gown of pink nylon with white velvet polka-dots over taffeta featuring a short dress. The gown was styled with a high ruffled neckline, high waistline and was gathered at the back with a small train. She carried a bouquet of pink tinted carnations with white daisies.

The bridesmaids were Shirley Francis, sister of the groom, and Bonnie Rollins, sister-in-law of the bride. They wore blue gowns, fashioned identical to the maid of honor's outfit and carried bouquets of blue tinted carnations and white daisies.

The flower girls Debbie McAdam and Kim Sedore, cousins of the bride, were dressed in pink and carried baskets of artificial pink carnations and white daisies.

The ring bearer was Larry Bird, nephew of the groom.

The best man was Jack Francis, a brother of the groom and the ushers were Brian Rollins, brother of the bride, and Gene Francis, the groom's brother.

After a wedding trip to Niagara Falls and Hamilton, the couple took up residence at 20 Benjamin Street, Belleville.

Ann Landers

Pawed, Petted—and Mad

Dear Ann Landers: I am fed up to the teeth (let) to everyone from the human race, at least those I've been through. I'm the girl who, little old confidential me would become a card-carrying women's libber, tomorrow.

It's going to take more than the Human Rights Commission to eliminate the discrimination toward women in business. Two weeks by being pawed, patted and pinched on the family has me convinced. Here is my letter of application for a new job:

"Gentlemen (1): All I want is a chance to earn a living. Please hire me because I am competent, experienced and stable. Shhy my 36-inch bust, big brown eyes and lovely smile. Just look at my work record of 18 years.

"It may be a shock to your ego, but I don't want to sleep with you. I will rely on my business skills to make my way."

Two weeks ago I lost a good job because I wasn't "co-operative." It makes me wonder. How about you, Ann?—Disgusted

Dear D.: Sorry, Buttercup, but plenty of females have made it on ability. You will never convince me that a woman has to sleep with her boss to get ahead. Only those who wouldn't cut it otherwise do. In fact, I believe the opposite is true. The smart woman realizes that—ethical—which is the logical position—if she wants to be treated like a woman.

Dear Ann Landers: I read with interest your response to Miss Undecided on the subject of whether "Negro" is acceptable as a description of those of us who have black African ancestors. However, it was an error to say I preferred "Negro" to "colored." Since I believe "colored" was used to avoid the reality of our black heritage.

I don't care what people call me, but I do care about the attitude behind the word used. If their term is acceptable to me if the attitude of the user is one of respect rather than bigotry or condescension.

Dear Ann: I have oped for black, but my friends who have walked picket lines and gone to jail in the 30s, 40s and 50s for the cause of civil rights have an equal right to respect the term Negro.—Patricia Roberts Harris

Dear Pat: Thank you for setting the record straight. The vast majority of Americans with black African ancestors who wants to connected also prefer blank. A reader from Ohio made a fascinating observation. He said, "The word 'colored' is a complete misnomer since black is the absence of color." Interesting!

Dear Ann Landers: I am 37, divorced, and have been going with an attractive man for nearly two years. We are very much in love and will last Christmas he gave me an engagement ring.

My problem is that whenever we have an argument he feels justified in going to cocktail bars and picking up strange women. He claims that if I would shut up and not argue with him, he wouldn't do these things.

Am I crazy for letting him bire me this way? What kind of life will I have with him? I need some answers.—Confused

Dear C.: Second question first: Your life with him is highly predictable. Either you will keep your mouth shut and do exactly as he says, or he'll prowl the bars after every argument and pick up some tramp. First question: Yes, you are crazy if you let him continue to hurt you this way.

Real Life Bo Peep Likes Isolated Job

RIO BLANCO, Calif. (AP) — She rides up into the high country with her sheep, a girl alone with the quivering aspen, pinon pine, pale bunch grass, he quiet little creeks, the crystal lakes that mirror the endless sky.

There are simpler. "You kind of know your own mind," says. There aren't all the little hassles. It's easier to tell right from wrong."

Every three days or so, her boss, Gus Haladros, who owns the sheep, rides up with groceries for the rest of the time Laura Colby, 23, is alone with her charges.

What is the blue-eyed daughter of a wealthy La Jolla, Calif., family doing up here? She fell in love with the land, with the idea of raising and caring for those small servants of man.

Her family used to summer in this wild place and that was before she met Gus and begged him for a job shepherding his sheep. "I'm born with a passion," she told him. "I think I can raise them."

Add to the does, filling over the high meadows of wild grass, moving the sheep to new pasture every day, shielding them from coyote and bear. She carries a 30-30 rifle, seldom has had the opportunity to use it. She sleeps mostly in a sheep wagon with a sign over the door that says "Home."

Other ranchers have asked me to work for them. There's not much muscle involved in their methods," she says. "It's more a matter of knowing the land, knowing the sheep to new pasture every day, shielding them from coyote and bear. She carries a 30-30 rifle, seldom has had the opportunity to use it. Successful Living

Sleepless Wife Hides Her Pills

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I have been getting a psychiatrist's help for years and was getting virtually nowhere. Then last year I met my husband and everything changed.

Because of physical illness my family doctor took me off my medication. I had been on tranquilizers and antidepressants for years, so there was a period of adjustment and my husband's help I came through it quite well.

The only problem is trying to sleep. Now I am awake sometimes 20 or 25 hours and that finally fall asleep due to exhaustion. I couldn't stand this so when I went to the doctor a week ago I asked him for sleeping pills. Now I am sleeping quite well.

The problem is, my husband forbade me to take anything because he doesn't want me to become addicted. I want to be so dragged on my pills and he doesn't want to see me like that again.

I have them hidden here at home. We very rarely disagree on anything but I know this would cause a fight.

Dear In A Bind: Tell him and face the music. A husband like yours deserves the truth. He is going to find out sooner or later anyway; preferably you should arrange for him to talk with your doctor. Not all drugs are habit-forming.

There are ways to learn relaxation besides seeing a psychiatrist and taking pills. Do you get enough exercise? Drink too much coffee? Think worrying thoughts that keep you keyed up when you should be laying down?

A course of Yoga could help those insomniac of yours; and if there is a deep-seated worry, it may be a social worker you need. But most of all, you need your husband's trust, by keeping honest with him.

Dear Doris: I am a slim, petite person with a large tummy. With fashion these days, my tummy and I need help. I also have a friend with the same trouble. I am enclosing 50 cents for two leaflets on tummy exercises.

Do have the column going. Your advice to other readers has also helped me with other problems. Thanks to you, I've got both the courage to do things that should have been done long before.

L.W.

Dear L.W.: I'm sending you two 25-cent leaflets: "For That Spare Tire—A Special Massage", and "Be Figure Perfect". You see, the first one is not really anything that will tone up stomach muscles; it merely gives you a way of helping to break down the fat cells in the tummy area. For the largest help.

The other one, "BE Figure Perfect," tries to cover the problem spots with suitable exercises. You and your girl friend will find both of them helpful.

You aren't the first person to say someone else's dilemma — and my suggestion — gave them the courage they needed to take action. It's a wise girl who can follow advice and accomplish something. Good for you!

Dear Doris: I was asked to a dance a couple of months ago by two guys. I said I'd go with both of them. Later I had to turn one down, and it turns out that I picked the wrong one.

NOW I want the other back. Do you think I can achieve that? And how?

Mystified.

Dear Mystified: Sometimes you can be lucky — and "the other" may like you well enough to try again.

You can learn from experience. Next time, accept the first invitation you receive, graciously. If a second person asks you for the same occasion, say that you are already dated but would love a rain check.

(Is it better to put up with misunderstandings or to begin talking things over? Let Doris help you see the light. Send your letters to care of this newspaper.)

Discrimination Underground

OTTAWA (CP) — Sex discrimination is not dead here—it has merely gone underground.

That's what Journal reporter Susan Riley discovered when she tried to visit a local sewer—it's strictly off-limits to women.

Because the machinery being used to build it—a rock mole—is commonly used in mining, the sewer is being treated as a mine.

And, as everyone with a superstitious streak knows, women aren't allowed in mines—they bring bad luck.

Surgery Aids Twins

Claims Support for Bill

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa said this weekend a poll that shows more than 80 per cent of Quebecers favoring official recognition in the province for both French and English indicates support for his proposed language legislation.

Legislation aimed at making French the official language in Quebec with English recognized as a second language was introduced in the national assembly May 21.

Speaking on a French-language television program, Mr. Bourassa said the poll indicates the government is justified in intervening in the language question to a legislative way.

The poll was commissioned by the Montreal French-language daily Le Devoir and the Quebec City French-language daily Le Soleil, all of which published it Saturday.

It shows 42 per cent of Quebecers favor official recognition of French and English, and 40.5 per cent favoring French as the official language with English recognized as a second language.

Mr. Bourassa said the poll affirms "the reasonable option as government has taken in his matter," because "the fundamental option" of the proposed legislation "appears in question," he said.

Massive Search for Cheryl

AURORA, Ont. (CP) — More than 3,300 persons searched without success Saturday for seven-year-old Cheryl Braden, who has the approval of the population of Quebec."

York regional police Sgt. Don Wills, in charge of one search headquarters, said the volunteer turnout was "fantastic."

"We've shut our 38-man teams and they're driving it everything they've got," he said. "Everyone is doing his own little bit."

Mounted police have posted a $7,500 reward for information leading to the whereabouts of the little girl whose disappearance has created an aura of gloom on this community just north of Toronto.

"If she's been killed, then the police had better keep whoever did it well away from her, or there'll be a lynch mob formed," said on father of two.

The Going Gets Rough As Olympics Win 2-1

By ALAN TESWORTH
Sports Staff

Belleville Olympics roughed their way through the Oshawa Balkans for their second win in Premier Soccer League play on Sunday, coming up with a 3-1 victory, over the visitors. The game was played at the Ontario School for the Deaf.

The match was characterized by chippy play throughout, with players from both sides taking what can only be classed as cheap shots at their opponents. Several incidents resulted in scuffles on the field, with one in the second half erupting into the spectator's area.

Frank Berrego, a defender for the Oshawa club, decided not to agree with comments directed his way by fans near the Belleville bench. He stepped into the crowd, offering them several swings of his fists.

A general melee broke out, with both teams, fans from both sides and officials wandering around the Belleville bench area.

Police were summoned to dispel the disturbance, arriving after the play had been resumed.

On the soccer end of the game, the Olympics were headed by ball throughout the contest, although going into a defensive shell in the second half.

Fundic Zdravko opened the scoring for the Olympics with about 15 minutes elapsed, after taking a long pass from Charlie Nesterovski. The ball split the defence and made it to Zdravko, who had slipped in behind, to beat the Oshawa netminder.

Thomas Agosto tied the game for the Balkans, when he headed in a shot in the 36th minute.

The eventual winning marker was collected by Mike Del Grosso, from an indirect kick from John O'Neill, just prior to the end of the half.

The locals went into the defensive shell after the Berrego fracas and did not have many opportunities to score, although Kevin Kirby came close with about five minutes left to play.

Taking a cross from O'Neill, Kirby headed the ball, only to have it hit the inside of the crossbar.

Kevin Vigh was back in the Belleville net after missing last week's game, coming up with his usual outstanding performance.

He had been classed as professional, having played in the Toronto area two seasons back, and had also been registered with his amateur status. Having played the first game of the season for the Olympics, he was not allowed to play last week's game.

He went to the league headquarters in Toronto personally this past week, getting his reinstatement hurried along in time for Sunday's game.

Olympics next action comes this Sunday with a game against Portuguese Soccer Club of Kingston. The game will be played at the Kingston pitch.

In the Junior exhibition match that preceded the Olympics, Bellaire Gunn Golden Mile Juniors shutout Oshawa Legion by a 2-0 count.

Franko Spada scored the first marker after a shot by Ron Ferguson was partially stopped by the Oshawa goalkeeper. Ferguson had made his shot off a corner kick by Bobbie Foster, one of the outstanding players for Belleville.

The second goal also came off a corner kick, scored by Keith Lawday. He finished off a play started by Dario D'anca.

Actions Bewilder BMSA Treasurer

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

City council has the treasurer of Belleville Minor Sports Association (BMSA) bewildered.

Carolyn Moynes says she isn't sure what the association is going to do for finances.

She requested a grant of $25,000 from the city," said Mayor Mcmurray, "for the third year in a row we received a grant of $21,000."

"Besides cutting back our grant," she added, "they rule the cost of ice rental to $31 an hour."

"Minor sports needs to come up with an extra $11,000 just to make the 1974 budget balance," she said, "and the only possible solution to the problem is to raise our registration and sponsorship dues."

"Minor hockey is going to be the hardest hit," commented Mrs. Moynes.

Last season minor hockey forked out $1,150 a week to the city for the use of the ice surfaces at Dick Ellis Rink and the Memorial Arena.

With the hour in ice rental minor hockey will pay almost 25 per cent more than it has been, bringing the cost to approximately $1,400 a week.

Aneting Waitkin, president of the minor hockey, says the organization will have to double last year's registration fees in that case the cost of a Belleville minor hockey organized hockey would be $16.

Mrs. Moynes relates a story which adds to her confusion.

"Two years ago when I was involved with minor hockey and Robbi Jeffrey was the head of Recreation and Arena Committee, we were requested more ice time from the city. Mrs. Jeffrey was concerned about where the extra money for ice time would come. It was suggested at that time that we raise our registration fees. Mrs. Jeffrey said that we shouldn't because she felt we would overprice ourselves."

"Now Mayor Jeffrey and the council are forcing us to raise our registration fees right across the board, particularly in hockey," added Mrs. Moynes.

Lorne Williams, Director of the Recreation and Arena Department, commented, "it's a vicious circle. We had to raise the price of ice time to counteract the arenas losses."

The city arenas finished $73,000 in the red last year.

"The cost of everything goes up," said Arenas manager Robb Burrowes.

Mrs. Moynes explained that inflation has hit hard in the price of sports equipment.

"We paid $115 a set for sweaters in minor hockey last year," she said, and that price rises every year. With the $11,000 deficit incurred in the minor hockey program, inflation can amount to a large sum of money.

Minor hockey will pay $22 an hour for use of the two ice surfaces operated by the city. But, minor hockey will get less money from minor sports because of the $11,000 that the city cropped off the BMSA.

When will this "vicious circle" be broken?

Two words replies, "I honestly don't know the answer to that question."

Three Divisions For WHA Squads

RANCO LA COSTA, Calif. (CP) — The Western Hockey Association teams will adopt a three-division format in the 1974-75 season.

The WHA's board of trustees, winding up their annual spring meeting Saturday, gave unanimous approval to two divisions of five teams and one of four.

The two-year-old WHA expands to 12 teams next season with the addition of Phoenix and Indianapolis A Ins.

Cincinnati, the fourth team playing in the 1975-76 season.

The restructuring calls for an all-Canadian division consisting of Edmonton Oilers, Vancouver Blazers, Winnipeg Jets, Toronto Toros and Quebec Nordiques. The West Division will be comprised of Houston Aeros, Minnesota Fighting Saints, Phoenix, San Diego Mariners, formerly of Denver Knights, and Michigan Stags, formerly Los Angeles Sharks.

The East Division will consist of Chicago Cougars, Indianapolis Racers, New England Whalers and Cleveland Crusaders.

League president Dennis Murphy, a leading advocate of the three-division concept, said that the top ten teams in each division will qualify for the play-offs, along with the two other teams in the league with the next-best records.

Cincinnati will be placed in the East Division in 1975-76.

The WHA also said it will experiment with the elimination of the centre red line during exhibition games.

Teams will be permitted forward passing from their own zone to their opponent's blue line, and be permitted to clear the puck into the attacking zone once beyond their own blueline.

Below the red line, the puck must be passed or carried by a member of the defending team. A pass to a teammate in the attacking zone will be allowed only if the intended receiver is the last opponent on side.

Only the team captain will be permitted to discuss an issue with the referee. He will be allowed to come off the bench, and in the event the captain is not playing, the coach will designate an assistant captain for the game.

While no definitive action was taken toward future expansion, Murphy said the WHA is to receive expansion applications from groups in Miami, New York, Birmingham, Dallas-Fort Worth, Portland, Denver, Seattle and New Orleans.

Michael Power OFSSA Repeater

TORONTO (CP) — Michael Power high school of Toronto finished with 52 points to win the over-all boys' competition at the Ontario Federation of Secondary School Athletic Association's track and field championships ended Saturday.

It was the second consecutive year the school won the meet. Toronto Central was second with 58 points followed by Neil McNeil high school of Burlington with 50.

Joe Boscarol of Power, who finished a poor fifth in a 200-metre heat earlier in the day, returned to anchor the 400-metre relay team to a meet record 42.5 seconds.

Power's victory became lame in the earlier run, scored the group of boys he is coached past a Toronto Sir John A. Macdonald runner to victory with a 100-metre clocking of 10.7.

In the senior 1,500-metre relay, Power clipped half a second off the Canadian interscholastic record with a time of 3:16.4 — the first ever after two of Powers' competitors had been involved in four previous runs of the day.

Glenn Bogue and Bill Kennedy each ran two heats and a final of the 200 metres and a qualifying heat of the 1,500-metre relay.

Kennedy ran his third leg of the 1,500 final in 47.4 and Bogue anchored the side home in 47.6. The first two runners, Jim Kolnick and Jack Lewis, had split times of 50.7 and 50.8, respectively.

The Canadian midget record went up by six inches in the pole vault as Mark Bragg of Woburn cleared 3.96 metres, a shade over 13 feet.

The only triple winner of the three-day meet was Toronto Wexford's Joanne MacLeod who won the 200 metres with a record time of 25.3 seconds. She earlier won the 100-metre hurdles and 400-metre dash.

Bill Britton of Leander Boy edged Paul Williams of Toronto Riverdale in 2:31.4 to the 2,000 metre run. The time, a personal best for Britton, gave him the ninth best time recorded in the Commonwealth this year.

In the junior 3,000, Dennis Vanderkrants of Michael Power knocked 10 seconds off the meet record, clocking 8:46.6.

Hugh Spooner of Toronto Newtonbrook eased to victory in the junior boys' 200 metres.

Wexford took the girls title with 33 points, two more than Nelson.

Henderson a Toro?

Few Big Names Up for Grabs

MONTREAL (CP) — Only a handful of hockey's biggest names were made available Sunday night for today's National Hockey League intra-league draft.

Each of the existing NHL teams was allowed to protect 15 players for the proceedings with NHL-owned goaltenders and first-year professionals exempt from clubs.

All NHL-owned players not protected or exempt from the draft are available for claim by other NHL clubs at a claiming price of $46,000 (U. S. funds).

The maximum loss to an NHL club cannot exceed one player.

New York Rangers, who lost out to Philadelphia Flyers in the Stanley Cup semi-finals, decided to leave veteran forwards Bruce MacGregor, Bobby Rousseau and defenceman Jim Neilson off their list.

Last week, Neilson was reported to be part of a deal which would see centre Derek Sanderson head to the Rangers from Boston Bruins, forward Walt McKechnie going to the Bruins from California Golden Seals and Neilson to the Seals. The deal was announced in place during today's draft but Sanderson and McKechnie were protected.

Toronto Maple Leafs dropped their winger Paul Henderson from their list as well as minor league Ace Lundigran. Henderson's signing with Toronto Toros of the rival World Hockey Association is expected to be announced today.

Atlanta Flames left veteran forward Leon Rochefort and Doug Rombough, Harold Snepsts defenseman off their list while St. Louis Blues dropped veteran forward Nick Bagnarai, defenseman Ted Harris and fourth-line centre John Wright from their squad.

Philadelphia Flyers decided to drop defenceman Barry Ashbee from their protected list. Ashbee, who suffered an eye injury during the Stanley Cup playoffs, announced his retirement last week saying he no longer had the desire to play.

Pittsburgh Penguins left veteran defenceman Ab DeMarco off their protected list while Montreal Canadiens dropped veteran left winger Frank Mahovlich from their 15-man list. He was protected. Mahovlich is negotiating with the Toros, who have offered him a three-year pact.

Any player selected in today's proceedings must be included on the claiming team's protected list for Wednesday's expansion draft which will stock Washington Capitals and Kansas City Scouts.

Each NHL team will be permitted to protect 15 skaters and two goaltenders for the expansion draft. The four clubs who lost goaltenders in the June expansion draft—Montreal, Los Angeles Kings, Boston Bruins and Chicago Black Hawks—have the option of being exempt from the goaltender's draft.

Little Current Is Now Established Leader

NEW YORK (AP) — Thoroughbred racing's three-year-old division leaderless for most of the year, finally has one—Little Current.

"Little Current beat everything in the Preakness and everything here," Braulio Baeza said after finishing fourth on Rube The Great as Little Current won the Belmont Stakes Saturday.

"Little Current is a very good horse."

The John Galbreath-owned colt flashed past Jolly John and Kentucky Derby-winner Cannonade with a little more than an eighth of a mile to go and won the 1½-mile Belmont by seven lengths in the Preakness and everything here," Braulio Baeza said after finishing fourth on Rube The Great as Little Current won the Belmont Stakes Saturday.

"Little Current is a very good horse."

In the Preakness, Little Current shot through on the rail to win, but in the Belmont Miguel Ithalde...

"I went outside because I knew they would be looking for me on the inside," said Rivera. "They say it was a poor field but, my horse, he's the great-est.

And with some race luck, the son of Sea-Bird might have been a Triple Crown winner. Because of the large field in the Derby—23 starters—Little Current's come-from-behind style got him into traffic trouble. But he did close from 16 lengths back, after a half mile, to finish fifth 6½ lengths back of Cannonade.

"I think he deserves a little rest now," said trainer Lou Rondinello. Then we'll point toward Saratoga."

"I'd like to run in the Travers at Saratoga Aug. 17," said owner Galbreath, an international sportsman. "Everybody says that way."

Galbreath also said he is thinking about the Prix de l'Arc de Triomphe in Paris in the fall although Little Current has never run on grass.

Little Current's victory was accomplished in 2:29 1-5, 3 1-5 seconds slower than the record set by Secretariat last year, but the time in the final quarter is a sizzling 24 seconds.

"I know the time was nothing to write home about, but Rivera's horse had to do it the hard way," said Ron Turcotte, who finished eighth on Secretariat's come-from-behind style to get him into traffic trouble. But Little Current's victory was the 11th straight for a Galbreath entrant in that year, a streak dating back to Arts and Letters' 1969 victory in the Belmont.

Come Across Or Else

OTTAWA (CP) — Bob McKeown of Ottawa Rough Riders says most of the veteran players in the Canadian Football League (CFL) will retire today if certain monetary demands are not met.

In an interview with radio station CFRA, McKeown said George Reed of Saskatchewan Roughriders, CFL Players' Association president, already has had the retirement notices and will present them to league commissioner John Gaudaur at the CFL offices at 5 p.m. today.

McKeown, Rough Riders player representative, said Sunday the players are seeking a $7-a-day increase to $37 a day for preseason training camps and something—he didn't specify what—more than the $50 they now get for each preseason game. They also want more playoff money.

McKeown said the training camp money now is less than the hourly minimum wage for most provinces and that if owners paid the whole package of demands, it would average out to about $40,000 a team a year "and that's what they are paying now for a couple of rookies from the states.

He said the retirement notices Reed has represent almost every CFL veteran.

Perfection For Landers

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

The pitchers had the charge over the weekend in the Ontario Football League providing a no-hitter and a perfect game.

Pete Landers produced the perfect game for Toronto Saturday night pitching a 1-0 win against London.

Landers struck out 19 as he retired 27 London players in a row. Joey Adams, who pitched a four-hitter, took the loss.

Reg Martin pitched a no-hit, no-run game Sunday as Hamilton blanked Niagara Falls 3-0 in the second game of a double-header. Niagara Falls won the opener 5-0.

St. Catharines beat London 5-2 and 4-3 and Toronto downed Ottawa 1-0 and 3-1 in other Sunday games.

Woodbridge blanked Hamilton 6-0 in Saturday's only other game.

Martin gave up two walks in his no-hitter.

Ed Nendorf had limited Hamilton to five hits in pitching Niagara Falls to its first-game win. He was backed by a 12-hit attack.

Expos Split with Braves

Red Hot Reds Aren't Gaining

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Big Red Machine is rolling, but not fast enough to catch Los Angeles Dodgers.

Even though Cincinnati Reds buried Philadelphia Phillies 16-7 Sunday for their 12th victory in 13 games, the Dodgers held an eight-game lead in the National League West race.

"I honestly feel we will win more than 90 games, even after a bad start," Cincinnati manager Sparky Anderson. "The trouble is, I don't know if it will be enough to catch the Dodgers."

Cincy's winning 40 per cent of their games in the last few weeks, the Reds have gained only one game on Los Angeles.

Anderson hopes to duplicate last year's record, when the Dodgers took a big early lead, but buckled at the end of the baseball season. The Reds, playing .700 ball in the latter part of 1973, eventually won the West championship.

In other games, Pittsburgh Pirates bombed San Francisco Giants 14-1, Houston Astros routed New York Mets 11-1, the Dodgers nipped Chicago Cubs 4-3, San Diego Padres downed St. Louis Cardinals 6-5, and Atlanta Braves topped Montreal Expos 3-2 in the first game of a doubleheader before losing the second game 7-3.

In Saturday's games, Pittsburgh defeated San Francisco 6-4, Atlanta topped Montreal 5-3, Philadelphia beat Cincinnati 6-5, New York beat Houston 4-3, San Diego edged St. Louis 4-3, and Chicago beat Los Angeles 4-0.

Johnny Bench sparked a seven-run seventh with a two-run homer, helping the Reds blitz the Phillies.

Brings Anti-inflation Theme

Stanfield Beginning Ontario Blitz

OTTAWA (CP) — With Ontario considered the main battleground for the July 8 general election, Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield has begun a seven-day blitz on the province, bringing his anti-inflation proposals to the farm gates.

In a hectic 15-hour day, the Conservative leader mixed his arguments and handshakes to eight communities Saturday, delivering in some lengthy defences of his proposed 90-day wage-price freeze.

"We are not magicians," he told a television audience in London. "We have no magic solutions. But what we have... is the will and determination."

The United States, which had imposed controls, was more successful than Canada in fighting inflation, he said.

He knew trade unions were enthusiastic about controls, but he was sure they could be convinced such measures were in the national interest.

As for corporations, he warned that if they raised prices to beat expected controls, they could face retroactive legislation. Conservative government would "insist that they stay in line."

Wherever he was questioned, the 59-year-old leader was asked to expand on his proposal for controls.

Would they apply to rents? Yes they would.

Would the temporary freeze go beyond 90 days? "I wouldn't want to be associated with a longer freeze than that."

What's the difference between a freeze on wages and a freeze on incomes? "All the difference in the world."

While he dealt with the broad spectrum of inflation in television interviews in London and Windsor, Mr. Stanfield related it specifically to the farming business when he hit the main towns.

"No one has suffered more from the effects of inflation than the farmers," he said about 300 at a picnic at Ingersoll. His proposed freeze would not apply to the farmgate.

Mr. Stanfield ran into warm audiences at all his stops. He met undistrusting in Walkerton, Port Elgin, Teeswater and Southampton, always shaking hands as he went, keeping the conversation to pleasantries.

Spots Heckler

Trudeau Takes Time Off After Friendly Ontario Visit

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau flew home for a two-day break late Saturday after campaigning for the July 8 election among friendly throngs in five southern Ontario communities.

Travelling by car and taking a stock campaign speech with him, he spent a full day meeting voters and urging them to reject the Conservatives and vote Liberal on July 8.

"Don't take a chance on Canada. Don't take a chance on hocus-pocus," he said as he denounced the Conservative plan to impose price and wage controls.

He opened the day with a morning walk along the main street of Beamsville, a town of 3,400 near of Hamilton. There were a number of Conservative election posters and one or two hecklers but he was welcomed enthusiastically by a crowd that pressed around him as he made his way to a podium near the centre of the town.

The Liberals are fighting hard to make gains in southern Ontario, where the party suffered heavy losses last time to the Conservatives. Liberal strength in the 88-seat province dropped to 35 seats in 1972, just over half the number the party won in 1968.

Mr. Trudeau drove from Beamsville to Welland where he was kissed several times on the street and again on a platform in front of the Welland court house where he met the local rose festival princess.

A high school band boomed out Hey, Look Me Over as he pressed toward the podium with Victor Rathen, Liberal candidate for Welland who won the riding in 1972.

He delivered a set campaign speech at each stop.

Why did the Conservatives and New Democrats vote against the May 6 budget when it offered more tax and income tax cuts, he asked repeatedly? Why did they vote against antiprofiteering legislation and higher corporate taxes?

He accused both parties of putting political expediency ahead of the national welfare and of failing to propose positive alternatives to programs he seeks.

Before leaving Welland, the prime minister ate lunch at a cafeteria-style restaurant and signed autographs for curious customers and patrons.

In St. Catharines, he was met by a large afternoon crowd at a shopping centre and was welcomed by a line of mini-skirted cheerleaders.

Before his next appearance in Guelph, Mr. Trudeau stopped at a hotel in Hespeler and changed to running clothes for a quick jog and a look at a local tennis court. He declined an invitation to play, saying photographs might make it appear that he wasn't campaigning hard.

He spoke at a park in Guelph where he was heckled briefly by a small group of demonstrators demanding equal rights for homosexuals.

"Read your Criminal Code," he answered, referring to amendments several years ago removing restrictions on homosexual acts by consenting adults in private.

His last stop was an evening rally at Oakville where an enthusiastic crowd jammed a high school auditorium. The overflow filled an adjoining cafeteria to listen via loudspeaker.

He left afterward for Toronto where he boarded his campaign jet for Ottawa. The day ended a five-day tour that started Tuesday on Vancouver Island and included stops in each province back to Ontario.

Off Tracks

BROCKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Mainline traffic between here and Montreal was resumed Sunday after being halted for almost 20 hours by the derailment of 17 cars of a Canadian National Railways freight train.

There were no injuries in the crash, which a CN official estimated to have caused damage totalling $500,000. The cause of the derailment was not immediately determined.

Labor of Love: Margaret

VICTORIA (CP) — Margaret Trudeau said Sunday the Liberal Party will have to work harder to gain more support in the week to July 8 federal election.

The prime minister's wife also told party workers here that her husband had nothing to do with her becoming involved in the campaign—it was her own idea.

Mrs. Trudeau said she's enjoying this campaign more than the one in 1972 because it's more of what she called a "grass-roots affair," enabling her to meet more voters.

Just Ask Mary: Bob

SOUTHAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — After Margaret Trudeau introduced her prime ministerial husband in Vancouver as a man who taught her a lot about love, Conservative Leader Stanfield couldn't resist it here Saturday night.

Speaking to about 100 people in a hotel, Mr. Stanfield apologized for the fact his wife, Mary, had remained in Ottawa for the day.

He was very sorry she couldn't be there for the occasion.

"She could have told you how much I taught her about love and that sort of thing," he said.

Lewis Conducts Campaign Bareback

GLASLYN, Sask. (CP) — The expression on David Lewis's face was like that of a skydiver who jumped from his plane and then remembered he wasn't wearing a parachute. You can hardly blame the New Democratic Party leader; on his first horseback ride in nearly 50 years—bareback, at that.

"I don't know whether this is guts or nuts," he laughed almost hysterically after he had reached the relative safety of a corral fence.

The stunt was to keep photographers happy and was on the farm of Clem and Della Windman, a couple celebrating their 60th wedding anniversary and who have supported the NDP and its predecessor, the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, almost as long as they have been married.

Mr. Lewis had to be talked into getting on the horse, normally ridden by one of the Windmans' grandchildren, but there was no need to talk him into getting off.

"The last time I was on a horse was in the village where I was born" he said, referring to Znamenka, Poland, where he was born June 23, 1908. "My grandfather had a horse and cart and buggy ... but that was strictly the last time."

The humorous interlude came Saturday during the second day of a 613-mile bus trip through northwestern Saskatchewan before Mr. Lewis, his wife Sophie, their aides and an entourage of reporters and photographers flew to Vancouver Sunday from Saskatoon.

Although Mr. Lewis met only a large afternoon crowd at a shopping centre and was welcomed by a line of mini-skirted cheerleaders.

Before his next appearance in Guelph, Mr. Trudeau stopped at a hotel in Hespeler and changed to running clothes for a quick jog and a look at a local tennis court. He declined an invitation to play, saying photographs might make it appear that he wasn't campaigning hard.

Lewis Defends Feed Grains Policy

SOUTHEY, Sask. (CP) - Justice Minister Otto Lang wound up a three-day campaign tour of southern Saskatchewan Saturday by telling 900 people here that the Manitoba and Saskatchewan governments and their spokesmen for the National Farmers' Union have tried dishonestly to distort federal Liberal policies.

Defending federal feed grains policy in particular, Mr. Lang said politicians on the issue organized by the two provincial governments, both New Democratic Party administrations, have been "blatantly dishonest."

Referring to the first question on the Saskatchewan plebiscite ballot, which asks whether farmers favor taking feed grains away from the Canadian wheat board, Mr. Lang said he doesn't know anyone who is in favor of that.

He said the federal policy will give farmers a choice between delivering to the board or the private purchasers throughout Canada.

Mr. Lang, minister responsible for the wheat board, also complained that Liberal programs are being distorted by "dishonest politicians, some of them in government and some of them in farm organizations."

"I speak specifically of one or two spokesmen for the NFU."

Wage-price Controls No Solution: Martin

SARNIA, Ont. (CP) — Liberal Senator Paul Martin said Saturday that wage and price controls would not solve Canada's inflation problems.

"Every country in the world has abandoned wage and price controls," Senator Martin told a news conference prior to addressing a Knights of Columbus convention.

"Look at the problem they created in the United States."

He also said the proposed $250-million Polysar petrochemical project should be built here despite attempts by Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed to have the plant located in his province.

Sarnia chemical valley was the only logical site for the

Voight Prefers Stage To Acting in Films

NEW YORK (AP) — One minute Jon Voight is Connecting, poking fun at himself.

The next, he is deep into serious discussion of what he says really matters—his family, the theatre and his art as an actor and as a person.

Tall, blonde and slightly rumpled, Voight was homeward bound in Los Angeles after filming the suspense thriller The Odessa File in Munich. Ahead, he said, were months to relax and prepare a play for regional theatre.

"I need to return to work on the stage," he said. "It's the only place other than the classroom where I can do a thoroughly creditable job. I can feel myself stretching a bit and it refreshes me so that I can do the quick work required in films."

Last year the 35-year-old actor appeared as Stanley Kowalski in a revival of A Streetcar Named Desire in Los Angeles opposite Faye Dunaway, then took his own production company and the same play to Buffalo.

"I think it got better as it went along, although critics weren't necessarily in agreement. By closing night I was pretty good."

Appearing on stage takes away the distance between actor and audience that comes in movies and "makes you feel more like a person."

"I'd like to do more—comedy, classics, not necessarily big stuff but something pertinent to today's situation."

What he has in mind initially is a production of Tennessee Williams' Camino Real.

"I can work with people I admire, get work for themsome of the people who need work. People in films can afford to do it, even if it means losing a little money."

Eventually, Voight said, perhaps there might be a theatre of his own, a place to do a classic like Moliere's Don Juan.

His early plans included following the footsteps of his father, a Yonkers, N.Y., golf professional. His scores were in the low 70s but his interest changed to painting, sculpture and drawing and he majored in fine arts at university.

Then Voight found a new interest in dramatics and said he realized he could never express himself as well in drawing as he could in performing.

Selective about scripts, he has appeared in Catch-22, Deliverance, The All-American Boy and Conrack, in which he teaches school on an isolated all-black island.

In The Odessa File Voight will appear as a young German journalist who, for personal reasons, tracks down the commander of a Second World War concentration camp. A change from the happy-go-lucky but committed schoolteacher of Conrack.

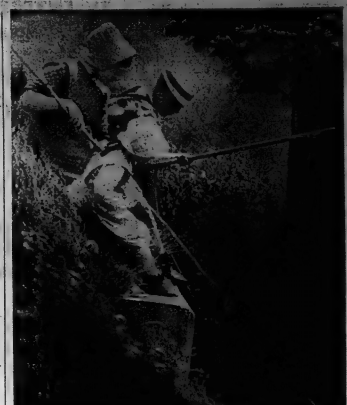
In Conrack he played against 23 scene-stealing black youngsters who had never acted before, recruited from a church group.

"They were genuine and wonderful kids. Anything they did was perfectly believable—that jargon of theirs had a wonderful poetry. It teaches you a lot about yourself to work with kids.

"They aren't all sing and I can't, really. There's a scene where one student says, 'Conrack sing like a frog.' That's about right. As long as it's silly I'm fine, but if I have to be serious I'm in trouble.

"One of the kids came up to me and said: 'You're shy, aren't you, Jon? I had a cousin that was shy.' Every day with these kids was like that. They'll tell you straight just what they feel."

Voight's son, just about a year old, was born just before filming began for Conrack.



"We've been living in an apartment in Los Angeles," Voight said. "We've never had a house. It's time I bought about my son and got a house with a stream and trees."

He plans to take a vacation with his wife Marsheliza, read no scripts and relax. He takes his work seriously.

"I'm experimenting and I want the freedom to experiment and fail. Acting is getting to whatever is the most distorted part of you and stretching to give your best performance, maybe even do Hamlet.

"But I want to do stupid things too—stupidity is rampant today."

"Most of all, I want to do a lot of different kinds of things and grow."

Showbiz Shorts

"In Praise of Hands", a National Film Board color production devoted to the dignity of human creativeness and the excellence of craftsmen in all parts of the world and at all levels of society, will receive its world premiere at the First World Crafts Exhibition held at the Ontario Science Centre in Toronto June 19.

The film was produced in co-operation with the World Crafts Council and the Sports and Recreation Bureau of the Province of Ontario. It will be shown daily at the five-day event and later will be given a world-wide release.

The film, shot in Canada, Mexico, Finland, Poland, Nigeria, India and Japan, provides a fascinating glimpse of the magnificent panorama of world crafts. Among the crafts covered in the film are weaving, pottery-making, metal-working and wood-carving. Some of the world's top master craftsmen are shown, such as weavers Magdalena Abakanowska of Poland and Dora Jung of Finland, and Japanese potter Arakawa.

In all, the NFB camera crew traveled more than 30,000 miles and shot in over 80 locations.

"The film is largely about craft-making but is also a tribute to the world's craftsmen," says Donald Winkler, the director.

"I wanted to get as close as possible to the experience of craft-making and show from a humanistic point of view how craft-making universalizes all cultures," he said.

Sydney Newman, chairman of the National Film Board of Canada, announced two three new top level appointments for the Film Board, which are effective immediately.

Doug Ruppel has been named as director of Technical and Production Services. Marc Devlin as director of Administration and Scott Burnett as assistant director of Planning and Research.

Doug Ruppel, a native of Waterloo, Ontario joined the Film Board in 1971 as director of Financial and Administrative Services after working as a program analyst at the Treasury Board. He has an extensive background in engineering and holds degrees in mechanical engineering, Business Administration from the University of Toronto and an MA from Carleton University.

Marc Devlin, who is presently director of Personnel, will now add Financial and Administrative Services to his responsibilities. Mr. Devlin, who is a native of Quebec City, joined the Film Board in 1966 after working for the CBC in various administrative capacities for over 10 years.

Toronto-born Scott Burnett joined the Film Board in 1969 as a distribution officer in Thunder Bay. He is a graduate of the University of Toronto. In 1971, he was transferred to headquarters as co-ordinator of Distribution for the Board's Challenge for Change—Societe nouvelle program and in 1973, he was appointed chief of the Audience Needs and Reactions Unit.

Actress Dies

NEW YORK (AP) — Blanche Yurka, who acted in mostly tragic roles on stage and screen for 70 years, has died at 87.

Miss Yurka, who died Thursday of arteriosclerosis, was a native of Czechoslovakia who grew up in St. Paul, Minn.

She made her stage debut in Bohemian Girl at the age of 13 in the Sokol Hall in Manhattan. The hall also was the site of her last performance, in the title role of Jean Giraudoux Medecman of Chaillot in 1970.

Her most famous film role was Mme. Defarge in A Tale of Two Cities.

Katherine Cornell Is Dead at 76

VINEYARD HAVEN, Mass. (AP) — Actress Katharine Cornell, 78, died at her home here early Sunday of pneumonia, her secretary said.

Miss Cornell was best known for her stage performances, but in an era when many of Broadway's best-known named turned to Hollywood or television, Miss Cornell remained loyal to the legitimate theatre world that knew her as "the American Duse."

Her only appearance on screen was in a non-commercial venture, Stage Door Canteen, a wartime film.

The theatre world paid tribute to Miss Cornell last month with the dedication of a Katharine Cornell room at the theatre library in New York's Lincoln Centre.

Miss Cornell was born Feb. 16, 1898 in Germany where her father was doing graduate work in medicine. She was raised in Buffalo, N.Y., and made her first professional appearance there in 1918 as a member of a stock company.

An earlier stint with the Washington Square Players in New York City was unproductive. A casting director who spotted her during this period wrote three words next to her name on his program: "Interesting, monotonous, watch."

In 1921, she married Guthrie McClintic, who directed all her plays but one. He died in 1961 and Miss Cornell retired from the stage.

She became a star in 1925 with her appearance as Iris March in Michael Arlen's The Green Hat. She was typecast for several years in seductive roles and melodramas.

Breaking out of the mold, Miss Cornell formed her own production company in 1931 and inaugurated "Katharine Cornell Presents" by staging The Barretts of Wimpole Street. It was a success and she revived it five times.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Tuesday, June 11

Aries (March 21-April 19) Be careful of your associations today. Others may involve you, caught in the midst of intrigue that you are better off avoiding.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) A friend isn't as open and frank with you as she should be about something you are both involved. Watch out!

Gemini (May 21-June 20) An alliance that you put considerable faith in is rather flimsy. Rely on yourself more than depending on another.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) This is one of your indifferent days when you will only give your tasks limited attention. You will neglect entirely something important.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) It won't work out to your advantage if you try today to hide something from your loved one. It's best you keep it all out in front.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You are likely to make an agreement that you have small intention of keeping just to maintain harmony in a relationship.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't do today what you can put off until tomorrow" is apt to be your motto. Conscientious tasks will seem even more difficult.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You will feel deprived and neglected if you don't indulge your slightest whims and fancies today.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Situations that revolve around the family are exceptionally confusing and complicated. You'll be a major contributor.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You tend to tune in on things more negatively than positively. This gives you a defeatist outlook before you try.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Keep a weather eye on your money and other valuable possessions today. Otherwise, you might suffer a loss through carelessness or theft.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) It would be very difficult for you to get away with anything unethical. Do everything in accordance with your highest ideals.

Foster Has His Night At Brighton Speedway

By CECIL S. PAUL

Despite the fact that the rain tried very hard to cut short the racing card at Brighton Speedway on Saturday night, it let up and with all drivers pitching in to help dry out the track the promoter of the card was run with only a slight delay in the proceedings.

Wayne Foster of Newcastle continued to dominate the six-cylinder class by getting his first triple win of the season and picking up the maximum of 75 points, for the third week in a row. Wayne now has a total of 245 points, well ahead of second place driver, Ron Herrington who has 185 points in the big Red Cap Pokels Award battle.

Greg Anderson of Trenton also had a good night as he took his qualifier and came back to outrun the field in the Feature to pick up his second and third victory of the year. Bob Mathew is still holding down the lead in this class with Bill MacPherson closing the gap quickly, only trailing by two points.

Paul Turner earned his second checkered flag in the stock class by taking the consolation event.

There are now a total of 10 cars in this class, Gord Keller, the driver of car 32, has switched to the modified class which explains the reason why he ran with both classes on Saturday night. He loses all the points he has in the Stock class and has to start from the beginning as an last weekend, Gord failed to pick up any points.

Ray Ellis of Campbellford, driver of Flying Sam's old machine from last year ran to a win in the first consolation for the 4cms by outrunning Willard Cormier to pick up his first win of the year.

During the second consolation, the night which went to Wayne Foster all the way, Herck Fibrabil, the "Flying School Teacher", who finally got old 27 ready to roll, was driven into the wall by Sonny Kimmerly of Oshawa. "Kimmerly was disqualified from running for the remainder of the night so failed to get his second chance at the qualifiers.

The six features showed a field of 14 starters with Willard Cormier taking an early lead. Larry Beatty took over on the sixth lap but by then Foster had started to make his move and two laps later he had it all to himself with Beatty settling for a second place finish.

Fred Linde, the man from Stockdale had won three events up until Saturday night but has never earned any points. He won the eight cyl consolation three weeks in a row. Fred decided it was time to get on the scoreboard and this is exactly what he did. He took his qualifier for 25 points and then took the lead from Bill Devis of Frankford in the sixth lap of the eight feature to chalk up his second win of the night and get a total of 75 points and he now has five checkered flags to his credit.

George Pettingill of Picton has his Ford power rolling in the super feature and took an early lead but Wayne Foster's six took him on the back stretch and came for his third win of the night and his first super feature victory of the season with Bob Prudhomme of Belleville running a close second, followed by George Pettingill. There was no Pole the Winner as only four cars finished this event and the contest stats Bishop's must correctly pick the first five place finishers in their proper order of finish. This contest will be worth $215.00 this weekend when action gets underway on Saturday night at 7.30 p.m.

Minor Baseball Action

House League Roundup

Belleville Conductors moved into a first place tie with the Kinsmen Club in Belleville Minor Baseball Association tadpole division after whomping the Kinsmen 24-4. In other ladpole games the Conductors defeated Cablevue 19-7 and the Legion Blazers Dart League clobbered J. J. Trudeau 14-5.

Jim Crouchman and John Burke shared the pitching duties in the Conductors win over the Kinsmen striking out 18. The pair got help at the plate from Brian Christopher with two home runs, Pete Mulroney with a double and three singles and Burke with a double and a pair of singles.

For the Kinsmen Sean Bloomhower bobbed a homer.

In the Conductors second game, John Burke shared the pitching duties with Glen Pieper and threw two framed 15. Burke aided his own cause with a homer and a single and Jon Crouchman punched three singles.

For Cablevue Peter Little cranked a home run and three singles and Kevin Reed added a homer.

Legion House got a home run and a single from Jamie Wright and a double and two singles from Greg Laing as they defeated Trudeau 13-5.

Ron Strather had a double and a single for the losers.

J. F. Nelles Realty took the brunt of the action in the tyke division as they dropped two games. Alhambra 10 beat the Raiders 23-5 in one game and Bob's Sports edged them 15-13 in another.

In a third tyke game Bayshore Club bounced past Kinsmen Club 13-12 in the most baseball game of the week.

Steve Shuique led the way for Alhambra with a home run. Al Tompkins had a triple and three singles, Terry Latrow had four singles and Steve Mays, Dave Shanoss and Jeff O'Neill each added a double and two singles.

For Nelles, Nico Petchiny belted a triple and two singles and David Parker cranked a pair of singles.

Nelles' second loss, to Bob's Sports, was certainly not for lack of effort. The Raiders matched their competition almost blop for step in every category except hitting.

Ken Kyrwaty led Bob's with a homer, two singles and Dave Barberstock added a single and a double as did Glen Wyrnark.

For Nelles, Pitchiny was once again the big hitter with a triple and a pair of singles. John Ord added two doubles and a single and Steve Nelles punched three singles.

Trevor Powell's seventh inning home run with one man on base proved to be the difference between winning and losing for the Bayshore club.

Powell's two run homer gave Bayshore a 19-18 win instead of an 18-17 loss to the Kinsmen. The Kinsmen came up with four runs in the bottom half of the seventh to cross within one run of the Bayshore Club.

Tim Mulroney also swung a big bat for Bayshore with a triple, a double and a single. Todd Crawford belted three doubles and a single and Larry Genereaux had four singles.

For the Kinsmen, John Cossen cranked a triple and Peter Hurley had two doubles.

In peewee action Mel Barrigan Landscaping downed the Kinsmen 13-4, Belleville Broadloom edged Motorland Dusters 9-7 and the Kinsmen came out on top of a 6-5 squeaker with Legion 99.

Mel Barrigge got three singles from Rob Bowers, two singles from Jeff Hanna and Ross Harvey and a double from Mike Vezi.

The Kinsmen were led at the plate by Kevin Jones with a double and Peter Burley with two singles.

Harvey and Dan Haslewood picked up the win for Barriages fanning 12 and allowing just three hits.

Dave Coughlan had a double and two singles and Belleville Broadloom agreed out another seven hits in their victory over Motorland.

The Dusters were led at the plate by Dan Manning and Mark Dery with a double and single.

Finally in peewee, the Kinsmen Club were oublit 8-5, but finished up with a 6-5 win over Legion 99.

Lyle Kelsey pounded out a double and two singles and Mike Calnan added a spair of singles for the Kinsmen.

Rising Employment Trend Stopped

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment rose during May to 5.5 per cent from 5.3 in April and a seven-month trend of rising employment levels was stopped, Statistics Canada reported today.

The Atlantic region was hardest hit among areas if the country and among age groups young men had the largest increase in unemployment.

Statistics Canada does not separate the effect of students entering the labor force on seasonally-adjusted unemployment levels and evidence is mixed on how much student unemployment is in the higher level for young men.

The highest seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate was combined with a slight drop in the proportion of the population actively seeking work.

Actual unemployment totalled 534,000, which was 8.4 per cent of the 9,676,000 in the work force.

The percentage of actual unemployed was down from six per cent in April. A drop in actual unemployment is normal for this time of year and seasonal adjustments account for these variations. The actual rate in April, 1973, was 4.3 per cent and in May, 1973, it was 5.3 per cent. Two years ago the April to May change was from 5.8 per cent to 6.2.

The seasonally-adjusted unemployment total rose by 21,000.

Hydro Plan Costs Users

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Hydro's decision to use oil instead of coal to fuel two huge generating stations being built on Lake Ontario is likely to cost power users an extra $50 million a year by 1979, an Ontario Energy Board hearing was told Monday.

The board is hearing an application by Hydro to increase power rates next year by 15 to 16 per cent.

A financial forecast accompanying the submission noted that the current cost of producing heat from coal is about half of that of producing the same number of thermal units from oil based on coal costing $15.68 a ton and oil $6.84 a barrel.

By 1979, the blend of United States and Western Canada coal that Hydro would be using is expected to cost $27.87 a ton and oil is projected as costing the commission $11.48 a barrel.

In that year, Hydro plans to purchases about 10 million barrels of oil for the new generating stations near Kingston and Port Hope.

Hydro said the oil would cost $110 million, while coal-fired generating stations would profor about $60 million.

A Hydro spokesman said outside the hearings that the 2,112,000-kilowatt Lennox generating station at Strath, near Kingston, was originally planned as coal-fired.

However, a feasibility study in 1969 recommended substitution of oil because of a long-term surplus of . . . oil in the area," the spokesman said. "This recommendation was reconfirmed later by an outside consultant.

Both recommendations were made several years before the price of oil started to rise significantly.

The hearings are expected to last at least six weeks.

Rare Hopper

Joey Koss, 4, of Warren, Mich., found a rare albino frog in a pond near his home. His mother, Mrs. William Koss called the University of Michigan to get more information. Dr. George W. Nace, a zoology professor who heads the Amphibian Facility is trying to get Joey to donate his pet for research.

Crime Rate Climbs

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's crime rate increased 4.9 per cent in 1973, Statistics Canada reported Monday.

Preliminary figures released by the federal statistics department show that the largest increase occurred in the Northwest Territories—12.6 per cent—while the crime rate in Manitoba decreased .9 per cent.

There were 20,606 cannabis-related offences in 1973 compared with 42,980 offences in 1973.

The number of murders decreased to 494 in 1973 from 678 in 1972, but the number of attempted murders increased to 668 from 613 over the 12-months period.

Rape increased 17.3 per cent with 1,522 incidents in 1973 compared with 1,298 in 1972.

Prostitution increased 59.2 per

News Briefs

BELFAST (AP) — Guerrillas blew up a Roman Catholic primary school near Belfast today and an anonymous caller later telephoned a newspaper saying it was the work of Protestant extremists. After the blast British troops found another bomb in the wreckage and defused it. The building was empty at the time of the explosion and no one was injured.

Nixon Holds Talks

SALZBURG, Austria (AP) — President Nixon met for more than 1½ hours today with Austrian Chancellor Bruno Kreisky to discuss the U.S. chief executive's visits to the Middle East and Moscow. Spokesman Ronald Ziegler said the meeting was equally divided between the two topics. Nixon leaves this medieval city Wednesday for Egypt on the first step of a five-country Middle East tour.

Kettles Cause Panic

OTTAWA (CP) — Public panic over lead emissions from certain brands of electric kettles is unwarranted, the president of the Canadian Medical Association says. Dr. Peter Banks said "lead poisoning due to this cause is restricted almost exclusively to young children and even then is very rare." Most of the kettles sold in Canada boil water with lead levels of less than 0.05 parts per million —the maximum level considered safe for human consumption, he said.

Kissinger Could Quit

SALZBURG, Austria (AP) — United States State Secretary Henry Kissinger said today he will resign unless the controversy over his role in national security wire tapping is settled up.

His voice breaking with emotion, Kissinger said the controversy is hurting U.S. foreign policy.

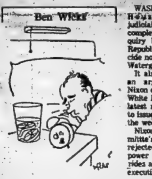
"I do not believe it is possible to conduct the foreign policy of the United States under these circumstances," he told a news conference. "If it is not cleared up, I will resign."

Kissinger, his eyes glistening with tears, said leaks to the news media have defamed his honor and reputation.

"It is not possible to conduct national policy under this sort

Subpoena On Way

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House of Representatives judiciary committee, driving to complete its impeachment inquiry by July 15, is resisting Republican demands that it decide now on whether to call key Watergate witnesses.



It also is refusing to get into an argument with President Nixon over its right to subpoena White House tapes, ignoring his latest rebuff and making plans to issue a new subpoena later in the week.

Nixon, in rejecting the committee's fourth subpoena, also rejected its contention that the power of impeachment overrides any claim he can make to executive privilege.

of attack," he said in delivering his threat to quit.

The Nobel Prize-winning diplomat, again denying he ordered wiretaps on his subordinates, said he spoke behind the press.

In his confirmation hearing before the Senate foreign relations committee last year, Kissinger denied ordering the taps.

Leger Outlook 'Encouraging'

SHERBROOKE, Que. (CP) — Governor-General Jules Leger was reported "conscious and cooperative" Monday night but still "maintaining certain symptoms of the stroke he suffered Saturday night," his aide said.

"Generally speaking the situation is encouraging and favorable," Roger Nantel said. "The state of the Governor-General is improving despite the presence of certain neurophysiological deficiencies."

Peter Cowan, press-secretary to the 61-year-old head of state, said Mr. Leger is no longer being treated in the intensive care unit of the hospital.

Mr. Leger, Mr. Cowan said, recognizes members of his family and is able to stand up and sit on the edge of the bed.

Lamoureux Sent Abroad

OTTAWA (CP) —Lucien Lamoureux, who retired this spring after serving as Speaker of the Commons longer than anyone else, was appointed ambassador to Belgium and Luxembourg Monday.

The last ambassador to Belgium and Luxemburg was Jules Leger, who left the post when he came to become Governor-General.

First Steps Wobbly

Margaret Trudeau campaigned for the Liberals in three Vancouver ridings Saturday, the first time she has actively campaigned without her husband, Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau. During one appearance, she tried her skill at walking on stilts, but gave up after a few wobbly steps.

Lewis Blasts PM's Housing Program

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP) — NDP leader David Lewis capped the first day of a two-day visit to the lower British Columbia mainland Monday with a scathing assault on Prime Minister Trudeau's recent package of housing policy proposals and Progressive Conservative leader Robert Stanfield's alleged lack of alternatives.

Earlier, he had been on a radio open line program and had visited an old age home and a high school before going on to a shopping centre to do some mainstreeting with his wife, Sophie.

The high point of the day, however, was his denunciation of the Liberal housing proposals in the House of Commons Friday when Mr. Trudeau announced $500 tax-free grants for persons buying their first homes. These would apply only if the homes are new.

The other parts of the three-part program are provisions for 95-per-cent mortgages for low and middle income families and elimination of income tax on the interest of savings of up to $10,000 if the money is set aside for a down payment of a first home.

Mr. Lewis described this package as "so far out of touch that it is more than just dishonest. It was a deliberate attempt to mislead Canadians into believing that the government was actually doing something about the housing crisis."

He accused the prime minister of being typically arrogant, heartless and offensive.

"The crux of the problem—and neither the Liberals nor the Tories are prepared to touch it—is the fact that unserviced lots in Vancouver . . . were selling for $18,000 in January of this year . . .

With service costs totalling $8,750, the left hand lot combination began was $26,750. Last week, he said, the cost of an unserviced lot in Vancouver was reported to be $32,000.

These facts known to every Canadian trying to buy a house, make a mockery of Trudeau's phoney promises . . .

"If that program helps 500 young Canadians in the next year I'll be 38 on my next birthday, on the 23rd of this month." Mr. Lewis will be 65.

"The only kind thing that one can say about this sort of calculating callousness is that Trudeau has had to admit that six years of (his) Liberal government have totally failed to meet the housing crisis."

Mr. Lewis, with an attentive and enthusiastic audience of about 1,000 in a large covered arena, tore into the Conservatives, saying it would not be in that party's interest to oppose big business developers.

Campaign Harmony

Mary Stanfield (right), wife of Conservative leader Robert Stanfield, sings along with staff and newsmen aboard the Stanfield campaign plane that has taken her thousands of miles. "Being the wife of a prime minister doesn't distract me," she said in an interview.

No Freeze For Real

SHERBROOKE, Que. (CP)— Real Caouette, Social Credit party leader, said Monday that should his party hold the balance of power in the event a Progressive Conservative government is elected July 8, Robert Stanfield probably would abandon his proposed wage-and-price freeze.

Mr. Caouette said in an interview his party is opposed to the proposed measures, which have formed a focal point of Mr. Stanfield's election campaign.

"If the Conservatives implement that policy, we will not hesitate to support the Liberals," Mr. Caouette said.

Illegal Dumps to Be Checked

City bylaw enforcement officer Gary Reid will be asked to report to council on what steps are being taken to clean up several areas in the city where it is claimed garbage and litter is being illegally dumped.

The request for the report was by Alderman Dr. John Stock, following a complaint to council Monday from Mrs. Blecker Ave. resident, Kenneth Peoples that as of May 1 he had counted 12 different locations in the city being used as garbage dumps.

In addition to refuse from wrecked buildings, old washing machines, at least one refrigerator with an open door, and old mattresses had been discarded.

The abandoned refrigerator could be a potential death trap for some youngster, Mr. Peoples said.

He said owners of the properties would promise a clean up but after a bit of work nothing more would be done.

Two locations with which Mr. Peoples was particularly concerned were a site on the west side of Herchimer south of Bleecker, owned by a local contractor, and another location on the east side of the same street.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey said several property owners were involved in the location west of Herchimer Ave., with a small section actually being owned by the city as part of its industrial land bank.

She admitted it appeared the area was being used by residents as a convenient but illegal dump. The city bylaw enforcer had investigated and had been promised co-operation in a cleanup when the ground dried sufficiently for equipment operation.

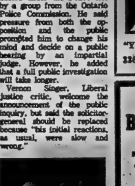
In support of his complaint about the illegal garbage dumps, Mr. Peoples presented a series of pictures showing actual conditions.

Alderman Stock said he had been "shocked" by the picture of the open-door abandoned refrigerator shown by Mr. Peoples and, in view of the delegation, called for a report at the next meeting of council by the city bylaw enforcer.

John A. Pringle To Conduct Probe

Norfolk County John A. Pringle, former Hastings county crown attorney, has been appointed to conduct a public inquiry into the drug raid at the Landmark Hotel in Fort Erie on May 11.

Solicitor-General George Kerr said Monday that the investigation should be under way early next July and completed by the fall.



During the raid, police stripped and searched men and women in the hotel in an effort to uncover drugs.

The solicitor-general said Judge Pringle has been given carte blanche to select staff counsel to conduct the inquiry.

Judge Pringle, 50 was appointed a judge in July 1972. He was Hastings county crown attorney for 16 years before his appointment to the bench. Judge Pringle was special counsel during the proceedings in 1967-68 to extradite Hal Banks, former head of the Seafarers' International Union, but has never served on a police commission.

Mr. Kerr said earlier that the inquiry should be conducted under the Police Act by a group from the Ontario Police Commission. He said pressure from both the opposition and the public prompted him to change his mind and decide on a public hearing by an impartial judge. However, he added that a full public investigation will take longer.

Vernon Singer, Liberal justice critic, welcomed the announcement of the public inquiry, but said the solicitor-general should be replaced because "his initial reactions, as usual, were slow and wrong."

REAL ESTATE:

BUY OR SELL FIRST

Al. McKinney
A. E. LePage
Realty Ltd.

Should you buy your new home or sell your present one first?

This situation arises consistently when families move up into a larger home in the same general area. In this case, it makes sense to sell the present home first.

The secret, however, is to sell the house under the confident that the proceeds will pass and that you will be settled in, say, 90 or 120 days. This way, you avoid the possibility of owning two homes at the same time.

True, it puts you in a position of being forced to buy another home, but this was your original intention anyway. With a commercial effort, one should be able to buy the right property in the 90 or 120 days allotted.

Also, you avoid the possibility of panic-selling your original home (a good way to lose money), you'll know exactly how much money will be available for a down payment on the new house.

Building Start This Year On Apartments for Elderly

By AL ZABAS
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — A start on an eight-storey 89-unit senior citizens' apartment building can be forecast for September this year, Vaclav Kuchar, an Ontario Housing Corporation (OHC) official optimistically told council Monday.

Meeting in a committee of the whole session, council was told the Cresswell Dr. project is the first phase of an approximate five-step development scheme.

In the second stage, some 36 single-family dwellings will be constructed on a 3.5 acre site behind the senior citizen apartment building.

Predating a construction start, Mr. Kuchar stressed he was being optimistic — given uncertainty of brick and steel deliveries. If all goes well, he expects the building to be finished in fall 1975.

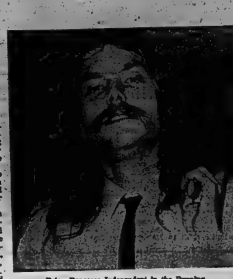
Councillor pressed details of the project —subject to its final approval — favorably.

At a caucus meeting in February, council discussed preliminary plans for the complex with OHC officials.

Council is expected to give the project a formal go-ahead at its regular meeting next week.

However, still not clarified is an OHC proposal to put Trenton a proposed 60-foot road allowance on a street that would serve the expected 36 homes behind the apartment building.

Town bylaws call for a 66-foot road allowance with a 25-foot roadway.



Architect Ernest Cromarty asked council if it would accept the narrower road allowance. He said he had not spoken to provincial government officials to check whether the town would still get its usual road maintenance subsidy on the narrower allowance.

If Ministry of Transportation and Communications officials do not accept the narrower allowance, it would be widened to 66 feet.

Mr. Cromarty also requested council to permit a 36-foot setback from Cresswell Dr. Town bylaws provide for a 25-foot setback.

Building plans call for seven upper stories of 13 single-bedroom units each. At ground level, another four units are planned for use by handicapped. A two-bedroom unit, the only one in the structure, will house the superintendent.

Utility rooms, laundry and recreational facilities will take up the remainder of the first storey. Parking facilities for 25 cars and an outdoor garages are also provided behind the building.

Brian Burgess: Independent in the Running

Stagehand-come-farmer Election Independent

BRIGHTON — A Toronto stagehand-come- Colborne - farmer has thrown his hat into the Prince Edward - Hastings election ring.

Brian Burgess says he is running completely as an independent and is "the only candidate who can represent the riding."

Mr. Burgess says party candidates are confined to party policy.

"Elect a bunch of independents and let them sort the mess out," he told a group of Northumberland County farmers at a candidates meetings Monday.

Sporting denim jeans, a blue work shirt and long hair, Mr. Burgess says "I'm not trying as a joke."

"I'm the only candidate who's equipped to represent people under 30."

Mr. Burgess has formally filed election papers with the riding's returning office and has paid his $200 election deposit.

He says the issues are reduced "ridiculous federal government spending" and cutting back on taxes." As an example of misspent funds he cites a federal grant of $39,000 to a group of Toronto homosexuals for construction of a club house.

Mr. Burgess has little or no party machinery to run his election campaign — "only a few friends helping me out."

"We're not spending much money," he said.

Pointing to the other candidates he said: "I can say things they can't say."

"I am running because there is no one I can vote for. There is no one saying what I believe in."

'Pious Motherhoodisms' Farm Rep Hits Tory 'Non-policy'

BRIGHTON — Gordon Hill, president of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, blasted federal Conservative farm policy Monday, charging it was filled with "pious motherhoodisms."

Mr. Hill spoke to candidates running for the ridings of Prince Edward - Hastings and Northumberland - Durham.

The meeting was sponsored by the Northumberland Federation of Agriculture.

Mr. Hill said "there are serious storm clouds on the horizon that are threatening the farmer's income."

He said none of the federal parties are offering a sweet pill to the farmers "but I am very disturbed about the Tory policy."

The Conservative policy paper is "as vague it's a non-policy," he said.

Mr. Hill said neither he nor his federation had any "magic wand" to wave but considered it his responsibility to make these comments before the public.

"We know the problems of the farmers and the NDP don't stand a chance of forming a government," he said.

Mr. Hill said the major problems facing farmers today are surplus production that threaten to lower commodity prices and rapidly escalating cost of farm production.

"The Conservative policy paper doesn't point anywhere near to come to grips with these problems," he said.

Rooftop Garden Criticized

TRENTON — Town council is having itself some criticism if it moves to buy lawn and garden furniture for a roof deck atop its Dundas Street municipal offices, Edward Steed, ward 1 representative councillors Monday.

"I don't think it's necessary," and would not be useful to the public, he told the committee-of-the-whole session.

Spending money to create the roof deck would also provoke him to criticism, said Councillor Ron Price.

Councillor John Bunn favored the estimated $250 purchase of lawn chairs, a possible sun umbrella and other furnitures. They would be used by both visitors to town offices and employees, he said.

He said he felt a furnished roof deck would have a beneficial effect on town hall atmosphere at the municipal offices.

A council decision on the purchase is expected at its regular meeting Monday.

Latecomers' Tax Hike Is Pondered

TRENTON — Town council here will decide next week whether to endorse a Pittsburgh township resolution calling for a levy increase from one to two percent against ratepayers whose tax bills are in arrears.

The increased penalty would be levied at a rate of two per cent per month per calendar year.

During the committee-of-the-whole session Monday, town treasurer Milton Fagan told council the one per cent penalty no longer acts as a deterrent against delayed payment of taxes.

All suggestions received an "advisable move" he said. "In my view it would be to our benefit."

The Municipal Act now provides for a maximum penalty per rent levy.

Should council endorse the resolution, indication of its move and a call for change will be made to the next Municipal Liaison Committee, as will a similar request to John White, Pittsburgh is in the Kingston area.

Embarassment Of Cats, Dogs,

MARMORA — A Marmora resident from Hastings St. who complained to village council about the number of cats one of his neighbors is harboring, received assurance from the council that his complaint would be directed to the animal patrol officer, Don Tucker of Stirling.

Reeve Jack Reynolds explained that cats, as well as dogs, are covered in the bylaw recently passed by council and Mr. Tucker will be asked to investigate.

The number of dogs running at large are an embarrassment to Council, Mr. Reynolds said. He added that if Mr. Tucker does not provide satisfactory service other means will have to be found.

While studying at Albert College he served the Foxboro - Roslin - Tillenburg - Frankford Pastoral Charge.

He is now serving the Toronto congregation of Runnymede.

School Board Unhappy With Cable Television

BLOOMFIELD — Problems with the cable system at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute and Queen Elizabeth public school in Picton have prompted school trustees to complain to the Canadian Radio and Television Commission in Ottawa.

Hillier trustee Clare McFaul told trustees the board's original agreement with cable television was to be provided to PECI and Queen Elizabeth.

He added that it is his understanding that there are "a number of days and hours" when the schools do not receive it. Mr. McFaul observed that the anticipated use of the cable system is not being made.

He moved a letter to the CRTC informing them trustees is dissatisfaction with the subscription of programs.

Man Dies Of Injuries In Crash

TWEED — The driver of a car involved in an accident on Highway 37 near Stoco Road west of Highway 37, has died of his injuries.

Dead is 21-year-old Garry Woods of RR2, Havelock.

The young man and two passengers were taken to Belleville General Hospital following the accident that demolished the Woods car.

Police said the Woods car lost control, skidded 242 feet, hit a rock cut and a culvert and went airborne for 76 feet before landing on its top in the middle of the road.

Fighters Halfway

TRENTON — Four CF-5 fighters stationed at Cold Lake — 180 miles north of Edmonton — reached the halfway point of a cross country, re-fuelling mission at Trenton Monday.

A base spokesman said Tuesday the four jets, nestled under the wings of a Trenton 437 Squadron Boeing 707, are training aid and practising for the June 30 airshow planned at the base here.

"We're not allowed to do those things at air shows. There's too much risk involved. Every day low over a crowd," said Capt. Bob Hale, base protocol officer.

The jets and the Boeing are expected to turn around and head back to Cold Lake — a 1,500 mile trip to Cold Lake sometime Tuesday.

Officer Finds Stolen Cars, 3 Charged

HILLIER — Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police has recovered three cars, stolen from Brampton, in Hillier Township.

The vehicles were stopped by Constable I. R. Knox in a routine police check and were discovered earlier to have been missing from a Brampton car dealer's sales lot.

Three people, Christopher Gordon, 18, Toronto, Robert Woods, 18, Brampton and Robert Nightingale, 17, of no fixed address, have been charged with possession of stolen vehicles. The trio was arrested at 2 a.m. Monday.

BLOOMFIELD — The Prince Edward County board of education has voted to put Hillier trustee Clare McFaul "in his place" following a brief overview of a board newsletter.

The newsletter, soon to be circulated in the homes, carries pictures of all trustees on its front page. Mr. McFaul felt he overlooked in the group in the caption with serving from 1969 to 1974 as trustee for Ameliasburgh.

"In the type of error we have here, which was purely business administrator E. A. Short before trustees voted to put the item in the newsletter. Distribution of the newsletter, entitled "Keeping Busy Done With Our Children, With Our Schools and Our Money, will be delayed because of the mistake.

The publication, includes an explanation of the board decision and method of operation, comments by the principals of Prince Edward County schools, reports by director of education John Hall, special services co-ordinator Russell Williams and business administrator E. A. Short. The newsletter is the first report for distribution in the board's five years of operation. Regular production and distribution of the circular list would be too costly.

$6,400 Grant To Seniors

Melrose Health and Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde today announced a New Horizons grant for $6,400 to a group of retired citizens in this area who are planning special activities within the community.

The grant, awarded to Township of Tyendinaga Senior Citizens Club, Shannonville, will be used to install kitchen facilities and set up equipment for games floor and music.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids...and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painfully. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly relieved. Itching relieved . . . actual retraction or reduction (shrinkage) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished

Those That Weren't Farmers...

BRIGHTON — Farm politics of Canada's three major political parties were laid out before a meeting of the Northumberland County Monday night.

On the platform were candidates from the ridings of Prince Edward-Hastings and Northumberland-Durham.

Each of the candidates agreed farm production was Canada's most important industry and that a national farm stabilization plan was necessary to upgrade farm incomes.

Gordon Hill, president of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, attacked all candidates for their comments saying "they are all out of their depth."

"None of them have farmed and none really understands the day-to-day problems of the farmer."

Of the Northumberlnd & Durham candidates, Conservative incumbent Allen Beckett once comes to the riding as a Toronto businessman. Liberal Allen Beckett is a retired consulting economist and the New Democratic Party's Russ Walker is a milkman.

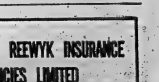
In Prince Edward Hastings, neither incumbent Conservative George Hees, nor the NDP's Barney Gottfried is acquainted firsthand with farming. Liberal George Zaduban operates a beef farm and teaches at Trenton High School.

Independent Brian Burgess, a stage hand from Toronto who lives on a Colborne farm inherited from his father, said "I'm the only candidate that can represent you."

Candidates were bombarded with questions following brief speeches. Most of the questions centered around incomes and farm produce prices.

George Hees said money must be made available for farm development, "especially to the young farmer trying to start out."

He Wasn't Charged



TRENTON — It was incorrectly stated by police and reported stated in The Intelligencer that Foxboro 19-year-old Robert Williams was charged in connection with a two-car collision Saturday night.

Mr. Williams was stopped on Dundas Street attempting to turn his car on Dundas St. when it was struck from the rear.

Trenton police said Tuesday that he has not been charged.

Detente!

Wouldn't it be the greatest of all political words if Left and Right, Black and White and others were to fuse into their swords into ploughshares and war no more.

Each would have, if not his just share, at least what he wants. There would be no need to rush into print to belabor the evils of the other system or group. All would be sweetness and light, the pens of the pundits would be stilled, every country would be permitted to run its own affairs in its own way, their policies understood by all. There would be no more railing and rant. No more humbug.

It would be like the situation depicted in a cartoon of the Kennedy era. There was a mock-up of a newspaper page. JFK is seen shaking hands with a beaming Khrushchev, one headline says South Africa ends apartheid, and another says: 'Cartoonist Shoots Self — Out of Ideas.'

Of course this is dreamland. The world does not function like that. There has to be some degree of tension and confrontation in the affairs of nations as in those of people.

Left and Right continue to be at odds, the most vociferous probably being the dentists of the Left, wrestling daily over typewriters, the smothering the hapless Right, Establishment, or whatever, with a torrent of words. The latter somehow survive because for the most part they turn the other cheek. When someone from this side of the political spectrum does venture into print, the tone is conciliatory — perhaps a shade patronizing — as if trying not to be disagreeable. However, this usually invites another barrage from the opposite league.

One of our more erudite gentlemen of the press of the time of course they are too busy to engage in any sawvering discussion, they have work to do, which is not always the case at the other end of the political scale.

On the international scene it is difficult to determine what is the true state of affairs in any one country. One suspected columnist refers to South Africa as "racist," and to Ulster as that "truly depraved" part of Ireland. Both descriptives are as misleading as they are inaccurate because they do not come anywhere near encapsulation of all aspects of life in those countries. In these places, after all, are people made in the same image as we are, who breathe the same air, share the same joys and sorrows as we do. We may ask too, appropriately, if these native peoples do not enjoy equality and a high standard of living. In the case of Ulster, the majority of people there are civilized, hardworking. To brand them all as "truly depraved" is less than fair or accurate.

We must look further than to simplistic phrases and verbal cannonades. We may all have some "side," but we have to see the whole mosaic too.

Another Tape

The latest tape from Patricia Hearst confirms one can only think she is alive but also that she appears to have been won over completely to the cause of the so-called Symbionese Liberation Army. Miss Hearst and a young married couple are the only survivors of an original group of nine which was active following the newspaper heiress' kidnapping last February. In the tape she speaks of having been in love with one of the men killed in the recent shootout in Los Angeles and, as further proof of the bizarre political influences to which she has been subjected, refers again to her family as the "Pig Hearsts." All in all it has been a sad and frightening tale of political skulduggery as the pages of history have unfolded.

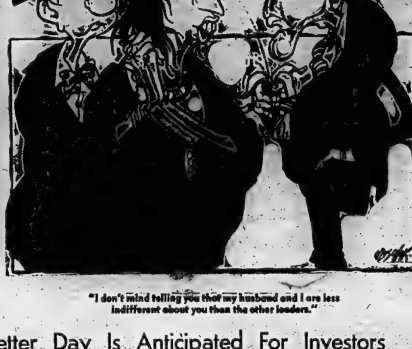
Solution Beyond National Bounds

Global Nature Of Inflation Haunts Election Campaign

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Who says this federal election campaign isn't concerned with international affairs? The basic issue of the campaign is an "international affair," harshly inflation.

And the chief reason neither Trudeau nor Stanfield as prime minister will solve it, is because the global economics which have caused it are now beyond the control of any national leader to lick in purely national terms.



Take many of the products we use and eat. As the economists say, we "import" inflation when we buy them abroad from countries undergoing the same inflationary spirit as our own.

Or take cars to name any major industrial nation in the world today from whom Canada imports goods which isn't suffering from inflation? Name them and there isn't one. West Germany, France, Sweden, Italy, the United Kingdom, the U.S. and Japan, especially Japan, are all hard-hit with the same affliction.

Now let's take special ethnic and regional interests. It might be understood that foreign affairs would enter into the campaign in North Toronto's Eglinton riding because the incumbent is External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp. His opponent is quite a worldly guy as well, namely business executive Murray Maynard who has seen as much of this world as Mitchell Sharp.

Maynard's largely self-designed industrial and defence products like the touch-down helicopter system and collapsible hangar for ships, are used or have been investigated by all the major maritime nations this side of that old iron curtain.

But both Maynard and Sharp know the key vote which could elect Sharp for the third time in a fight against Maynard, or elect the fighting Tory for the first time, is the Jewish vote in Eglinton.

"I don't mind telling you that my husband and I are less indifferent about you than the other leaders."

Maynard figured it was the Jewish 10 per cent of Eglinton riding's voters who are mainly Anglo-Saxon who turned the trick for Sharp's trickle up win in 1972.

As Canada's foreign minister, Sharp has had and will have the power to make moves on behalf of Israel if he and the Liberals are re-elected to power.

But Maynard in his own way hasn't been far behind this time. He made a major trip to Israel earlier this year and has blinds the recipient to the wishes of the donor.

Also, let us not be duped into believing that Conservatism is irrelevant or acceptable ideology for African today. Firstly, many of the new African states, and the radical movements, would appear to be financially subsidized, and determined to remain nonaligned. The growing 'political' force today from an international perspective is not Communism, but the quasi-legal forces of the "Third World". Secondly, from a cursory examination of African politics would reveal that Africans have their own plans for Africa. Having shaken off the political overlords of Europe, they are not about to become inescapably dependent upon the whims of the Soviet or Chinese politburos. Let us not underestimate the political awareness of African political leaders. They will accept aid from all sources but will remain their own masters. The Soviet leadership has plans for Africa — but it is not axiomatic the state of Africa are presently confronted with Soviet-indoctrinated and manipulated forces. Our "cold war" fears are not substantiated by detailed studies of the reality of African politics.

Furthermore, I am appalled by those who would lend their support for the "established" governments of Rhodesia and South Africa and the colonial governors of Portugal. Surely we cannot sympathize with governments which treat the majority of their people as at best second-class citizens, or those living upon them restrictions which violate their humanity. At the same time, I do not believe that the activities of liberation armies are to be supported - murder cannot be sanctified. If the injustice is taken by those now in power, peaceful change can be accomplished. (Obviously, the statement of an optimist).

Editor,
The Intelligencer,

The concern of the editor of the Reader's Digest, the editor of The Intelligencer and of Mr. Grant Hall is understandable to a little late. That world revolution and subversion are the aims of International Communism has been known for over a hundred years. Perhaps these gentlemen and their fellows were bamboozled by Soviet trade propaganda and, backed the wrong horse 35 years ago.

Now the Global Communist conspiracy, including Russian kind, condemned the people of Latvia, Lithuania, Estonia, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria, Rumania and East Germany to Communist the annexation or take-over of their countries, the murder of their leaders and the rape of their economies, the number of murders and deaths in the Communist empire doubled and Communism advanced to the brink of victory in International Communism and International Zionism were the only victors of the second world war; everybody else lost.

Did Mr. Hall believe, the leopard would shed its spots and Communism and Communists have a peculiar habit of coming home to roost. Please do not complain when they come.

LETTERS
Africa and the Third World

Editor,
The Intelligencer,

Of recent letters in The Intelligencer concerning Communist subversion in "Black Africa", I find that the facts expressed have been well articulated. There are, however, several comments which I would like to contribute.

Firstly, the history of Soviet attempts to subvert African regimes has not been one of success. In the early states, the Soviet presence in the "revolutionary democracies" of Algeria, Ghana, Guinea, and Mali was increasing. From the Soviet perspective, the socialist revolution was at hand; soon, all Africa would be united under the leadership of the Communist Party, and the "imperialist lackeys" would be routed. Unfortunately, the timetable was not kept. Despite huge and poured millions of dollars of economic military aid into these states, and having provided technical and political advisors, (prior to 1966, a Soviet official was the chief adviser to the Ghanaian cabinet policy), the Soviet presence in these states was shattered. Grandiose promises of aid were not always honored; pro-Soviet African leaders died or mentally ill; and the ideology of Communism was found to be unacceptable.

Are we to assume that present Soviet and Chinese offers of aid will meet with any greater success than before? Of course, the Soviets have become more adept at giving aid and are not likely to make bureaucratic bungles such as supplying [illegible] and did little to increase Soviet prestige. On the other hand there is very little evidence to support the proposition that military or economic aid improves the chances for a Communist take-over in Africa. Studies of foreign aid programs do not substantiate the statement that the provision of aid

Labor Council's Politics

Editor,
The Intelligencer,

The letter by Enos David in relation to the notice of motion by Belleville Labor Council member Ian Reilly calling for a boycott of the 1974 United Way Appeal was unconscionable, his fence-sitting days as an alderman.

Preferring to neglect comment on the motion itself, the prevention of "double dipping" by the YMCA, he elected to embark on a tirade, directed at making Mr. Reilly and the QDLC appear as naughty children in need of correction.

The two most pertinent statements in Mr. David's letter were on an acknowledgement that the United Way is not "truly representative of the community" without the inclusion of organized labor, and the "matter of taste level" and the fact that Mr. Reilly is a "fair minded, public spirited citizen."

If Mr. David believes what he says, then it is a sad fact that Labor in the Quinte area was included in a real position of decision-making only because of the token appointments to various boards that characterizes and limits their role today.

As a "fair minded and public spirited citizen," Mr. Reilly has the temerity to question some of the established practices in Belleville. This is where he treads upon thin ice. I don't think he can't do it.

Mr. Reilly is on record that he elected who-presided in the Canada-Israel Chamber of Concourse.

Nice timing by him with both activities and with that International element in mind which could get him elected this time.

Incidentally Maynard would make an ideal Tory leader or national defence minister, given his long relationship with both departments as innovative exporter and supplier.

Who says foreign policy doesn't count in this election?

Better Day Is Anticipated For Investors

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

If you have money to invest, and you've been waiting for the highest possible yield, get ready to dive.

That, in effect, is the advice of some financial analysts. They believe that the long advance in interest rates that has carried them to unprecedented heights, is at last coming to a halt.

In that case, this could be the time to commit those investment funds, without fearing future pangs of regret at having missed still higher rates.

Just this year—not yet half over—the average yield on Government of Canada 13-week treasury bills has soared from 3.23 per cent to 8.58 per cent. But in recent weeks the yield on long-term bonds—such as the widely held Canada 4½ per cent 1983 issue—has been trending downward, and the price upward.

A number of factors are at work. Interest rates may have reached the point at which many investors foresee hard times if no longer profitable to use credit. A curtailment of housing starts (which last year reached a recorded 268,500 is reducing the demand for home loan funds. And U.S. interest rates are coming down, as more easy banks cut their prime rates.

Perhaps most significant of all, the market nearly shattered the recent $600 million two-part offering of Government of Canada bonds dated June 15. Dealers had feared that the Canada issue would depress the prices of outstanding issues.

"It is our belief that the upward interest rate cycle has come close to running its course and that a return to lower yield levels may be expected during the next few months," comments Bongard, Leslie and Co. Ltd., an investment house.

"Quite deservedly, the here-to-fore unattractive bond yields have attracted the attention of investors to whom a high level of current income is a paramount importance.

"However, many investors may be maximizing their efforts to lock up a fixed return at high pre-tax levels.

"Under existing income tax regulations, there could be a strong favoring bias if these investors were to look closer at the after-tax benefits obtainable from dividend-paying preferred or common stocks."

Mr. Maynard, a resident of Ontario or British Columbia (both have a 30.5-per-cent provincial income tax rate) pays taxable income in the middle range (up to $25,563) would end up with the same amount of after-tax dollars by investing in stocks yielding 6 per cent as by investing in bonds or other debt instruments paying 10 per cent interest.

Naturally, the net result varies depending upon personal tax rate, federal tax bracket, stock dividend rate and bond interest.

But in every case, a lower yield on dividends is the equivalent of a higher interest yield because tax credit is given only on dividend income, while interest income is fully taxable.

The sudden drop in interest rates is likely to materialize, because demand for money would remain strong. If during the next few months the interest rate should confirm that a peak has indeed been reached, it could be reasonable to expect many short-term borrowers to try to convert their debt to long-term.

For the stock market the implication could be renewed investor interest in so-called "growth-sensitive stocks" such as the public utilities, banks and finance companies.

Liberals Have Had Few Big Guns

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — Is a previous piece the PCs and their outstanding members over the past 30 years were discussed.

Today it is the Liberals' turn. And what about them?

In reviewing the Grits there probably is more room for argument than with either of the other major parties.

And not because of an abundance of choices. Rather, because of a paucity of them.

For since they were voted out of power in 1943 the Liberals have returned few outstanding members.

For the most part the men they have sent back, or who have been elected for the first time, have been more or less routine politicians who have had to grow on their ridings mainly through local personal popularity. (A trend that has been changing with the last two elections.)

In fact in looking back on the whole period only two men come to the writer's mind as outstanding: John Wintermeyer and Stanley Knowles.

John Wintermeyer, lawyer, who represented Waterloo North in the house from 1955 to 1963, was one of the few men unconscious to ever sit in the Queen's Park chamber.

Unusual in that in no sense was he a politician.

Every politician to be successful needs a bit of guile. Wintermeyer just simply didn't have any.

The only son of a wealthy family and a devout Roman Catholic, he was sympathetic to, but really couldn't comprehend, the less privileged section of the public and he was completely honest. Not only appeared to be frank. If he was asked a question he felt he had to give a frank answer. And a politician can really afford to do that.

Yet he was a brilliant man. He had vision and drive. Credit for the start of the government's GO transportation system with him the personality visited then president of the CNR, Donald Gordon and got his cooperation) and there are other important developments which he really initiated, and others he proposed which would have meant a healthier province if the government had adopted them.

And in 1963 he was closer to defeating the government than anyone before or since. When the campaign started the PCs had barely enough candidates in charge of the morning service held by Bishop Frank W.G. Cleak, D.D. presiding bishop of the Reformed Episcopal Church in the United States. He will be buried in Forest Lawn Cemetery. He also be in charge of the confirmation class.

While local fishermen vainly strive to entice unsuspecting denizens of the deep to their hooks, A United States visitor in this country, a Mr. A. Collins has successfully landed a 9-pound salmon trout. He and a local guide, were on Devil Lake at the Hideau Club in the Kingston when the husky prize was hooked and hauled into the boat. A summer guest at the home of R.A. Rossborn, this is Mr. Collins' first visit to this locale.

Realtors Scoff at Election Home Promises

OTTAWA (CP) — Real estate agents and mortgage lenders have adopted a "plague on all your houses" approach to housing proposals by the Liberal, Progressive Conservative and New Democratic parties in the federal election.

They say some of the suggestions may help a little in a few cases but are unlikely to have a significant impact on the current housing market. Some of the proposals have serious drawbacks, they suggest.

Replying to questions by mortgage lenders of the recently-announced Liberal mortgage policy, Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford said in Ottawa Monday lenders "prefer a traditional mortgage market which is built for the upper part of the market."

But the government was trying to shake up the housing market so that more low-and medium-priced homes were available. This was the purpose of the Liberal plan requiring low down-payments for moderately-priced housing, with high down-payments reserved for executive homes.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield and NDP Leader David Lewis have scoffed at Liberal plans to provide cheap mortgage money for moderately-priced homes, expand the Assisted Home Ownership Program (AHOP) and offer $200 cash grants to first-time buyers of new homes.

The two party leaders have said the Liberal plans are meaningless and unrelated to actual house prices. This view is disputed by Mr. Basford.

Mr. Lewis said in Winnipeg last week that the majority of Canadians still cannot afford a house despite the new Liberal policies.

The Liberals have described as inflationary proposals by Mr. Lewis to set a six-per-cent ceiling on mortgage rates and by Mr. Stanfield to permit tax deductions of up to $1,000 for interest paid on mortgages over eight per cent.

Mr. Basford said after a Monday news conference that the Conservative proposal would help those who already have enough money to buy a house but would do little for the moderate-income family frozen out of the market.

The Conservatives also have proposed lifting the 12-per-cent tax on building materials and the New Democrats suggest a two-price system for lumber and other basic construction commodities. The domestic price would be lower than the export rate.

Realtors and lenders are unhappy with all the housing platforms mentioned by the political parties.

One Ottawa realtor said the only solution to high house prices is increased supply.

"The easier you make it for houses under $40,000 to sell, the more likely the price of these houses will decrease."

Donald Kirkup, research director of A. E. LePage Ltd. of Toronto, said the government should pump $1 billion into direct loans for housing to increase mortgage funds available and provide another $1 billion for serviced land.

Mr. Basford has frequently said that the government aim is to cut back its direct-lending activity and concentrate its funds on low-income and other social housing. He has said the government should not be a bank for financing conventional housing which should be handled by private lenders.

Mr. Kirkup said the Liberal proposals "are virtually useless." He said Mr. Lewis's interest rate suggestions "are nonsense."

Blair Jackson of Toronto, executive vice-president of the Canadian Real Estate Association, said Liberal policies announced by Prime Minister Trudeau last week "are financial manipulations," and:

"As far as I can see nobody anywhere in Canada will receive any benefits from what he is touting the people."

An Ottawa realtor said Mr. Stanfield's tax deduction proposal for interest rates o... "very disruptive." There would be resentment that some people would benefit from the tax deduction plan while others were still unable to buy because of continuing high house prices.

An Ottawa mortgage lender echoed this view, saying that persons benefitting from the tax deduction must first own a house.

Mr. Kirkup said the average price of detached houses in Toronto Vancouver, Montreal and Ottawa is more than $50,000 for a new house. There were virtually no houses available below $45,000—the area reached by the Liberal policies.

He predicted the amount of mortgage funds available will drop by $4 billion this year, reducing housing starts by 50,000 and costing the Canadian economy $1.3 billion this year.

Mr. Basford told a news conference Monday that housing starts are likely to reach last year's record level of 268,000 or drop slightly below. The extra $200 million to be pumped into the expanded AHOP program announced last week and other government spending would not boost total housing starts.

Stanfield to Blame: Hamilton

ESTEVAN, Sask. (CP) — Alvin Hamilton, former Progressive Conservative agriculture minister, said Monday the Conservative policy on income controls generally "has been misinterpreted, and he suggested party leader Robert Stanfield may be partially to fault.

The Conservative policy went far beyond a temporary freeze on prices and incomes, but Mr. Stanfield was entangled in trying to explain the temporary Opposition spokesmen were all attacking the temporary controls, and the Conservative leader was trying to explain in detail instead of "taking the offensive" and describing the longer-term policy.

Mr. Hamilton said the working people are becoming much more conservative and the longer-term policy is perfectly suited to match that new conservatism.

But he also expressed concern that some Conservative candidates are interpreting the new conservatism in the wrong way and appealing to right-wing social attitudes.

"My concern about the candidates running in Toronto is the right-wing nature of them.

"I feel like a blooming radical. I'm not a radical, I'm a dyed-in-the-wool Tory."

Mr. Hamilton said Conservative incomes policy is mainly a program of incentives for workers to increase productivity.

Companies would be given tax breaks for negotiating contracts with their employees under which employees' salaries would rise with productivity increases.

Other tax breaks would go to companies for encouraging employees to invest in Canadian industry rather than in registered retirement savings plans.

Nominations Close In Remote Ridings

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS.

A total of 74 candidates in the July 8 federal election Monday filed their papers as nominations closed in 21 remote ridings.

Nominations closed at 2 p.m. local standard time in the ridings which stretch across the north of the country from Labrador to the Queen Charlotte Islands.

Regular nominations in the other 303 ridings close Monday, June 17, but in the 21 scattered, distant constituencies an extra week had to be allowed for delivery of election material.

Liberals, Progressive Conservatives and the New Democratic Party had full slates in all the early-filing ridings which cover 10 per cent of Canada but contain only seven per cent of the population and eligible voters.

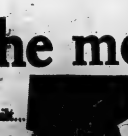
Before nomination day, 62 had either been selected at party conventions or had made their electoral intentions known, but on the final day, an additional 12 got in under the wire.

Communists Nominate 26

TORONTO (CP) — The Communist Party of Canada (Marxist-Leninist) said Monday it has nominated 26 candidates in Ontario for the July 8 federal election.

Ontario has 88 seats in Parliament.

Industrial Maintenance Mechanic



Northern Electric is in the market for talent. Your kind of talent. As we move into new markets around the world, as we build new plants and manufacture new products, the demand for highly skilled mechanics continues to increase.

We're growing fast. And if you want to grow with us, you'll find both opportunity and challenge as an industrial maintenance mechanic. We need a person who will work with sleek, sophisticated electronic technicians to maintain and overhaul all types of production equipment, particularly computer-controlled, high speed machinery used in communications equipment assembly and manufacturing.

If you want to team up with some of the best technicians in the business, and if you have had a four-year apprenticeship as an ... experience in maintaining various types of ... equipment, we'd like to get together with you.

We're paying from $4.66 to $5.31 per hour to start, and we will provide training on specialized equipment for an ambitious, talented mechanic who wants a career — not a dead-end job. You'll be working at our Belleville subscriber switching apparatus plant.

Please send us your complete background in a résumé stating experience and academic qualifications to

York Recycles Metro Garbage

TORONTO (CP) — A $7.5-million experimental plant to recycle Metropolitan Toronto garbage was announced in the legislature Monday by Environment Minister William Newman.

The plant, on which construction is to begin this fall, will be located in the borough of North York.

The cost of the facility will be shared by the province and the Metro government, which will contribute one-third, including land worth about $1 million.

Mr. Newman said that although the federal government participated in waste recovery studies, Ottawa has not yet decided to share in the cost.

The experimental plant is expected to handle about 200 tons of garbage a day, the minister said.

But he didn't hold out much hope for opposition politicians who wanted to know whether it would eventually eliminate the need for transporting Metro garbage by train to nearby Hope Township where it would be buried in landfill sites.

"We will always need landfill sites," Mr. Newman told Donald Deacon (L—Toronto York Centre) while conceding the experimental project will not make much of a dent in Toronto's total garbage tonnage.

Rural Ontario Taxes Twice as Dear

TORONTO (CP) — The rate of property tax in proportion to income in rural Ontario is double than in large urban areas, Michael Cassidy (NDP—Ottawa Centre) told the legislature Monday night.

He made the statement as the legislature gave second and third readings to three bills that increase grants to municipalities under existing government programs.

Smaller municipalities must tax twice as heavily to realize the same per capita income, Mr. Cassidy told Treasurer John White, who also is minister of inter-governmental affairs.

"Where is the equality of opportunity in that?"

He said year rural areas of Ontario continue to elect Progressive Conservatives, but "government by the Big Smoke (for tyhen) except down the young people off to Toronto."

Edward Good (L—Waterloo North) criticized the grants structure because he said it encourages municipalities to spend less in order to qualify for larger grants.

In addition, he said, the grants were not sufficient to combat increased costs due to inflation.

Mr. White told Mr. Cassidy that in saying at his conclusion that rural municipalities have to tax twice as heavily the NDP member forgot to figure in the benefits of the farm tax rebate.

Excessive Lead Levels Pervade Province

TORONTO (CP) — Excessive levels of lead have been found in soil and vegetation in the vicinity of 26 of 45 Ontario orchards monitored by the environment ministry, says a report tabled Monday in the legislature.

Fourteen companies were lead levels were considered to be unacceptable were located in the Toronto area.

The lead-sampling program, conducted during 1972 and 1973, involved lead contents in soil, native vegetation, home-grown fruits and vegetables, street dust and undisturbed dust.

In tabling the report, Environment Minister William Newman said it was originally intended for internal use, but it was released because of public interest.

The survey has been conveyed to the health ministry and local health officials "who will evaluate any potential risk to the health of residents in the area, bearing in mind the location of the residents with respect to the location of the plant."

"Based on this information, they will decide what action is necessary."

Mr. Newman said an interministerial group is preparing a report on lead pollution in the Toronto area.

Packers Reject Offer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Union spokesmen Jim Wells says packinghouse workers in British Columbia and Alberta have overwhelmingly rejected a contract offer from three meat-packing companies.

Mr. Wells declined, however, to release results of the vote on base rates which range from $4.97 to $5.40 an hour.

The union's national policy committee recommended acceptance, but last week Mr. Wells said he was recommending rejection.

Companies involved are Swift Canadian Co. Ltd., Burns Food Ltd. and Canada Packers.

Montreal Dominicans Deported

MONTREAL (CP) — Forty-two citizens of the Dominican Republic were deported to their homeland by immigration officials Sunday for being in the Montreal area without legal status.

They were part of a group of 122 Dominicans who disappeared from their downtown hotel June 1 during a scheduled three-day stay. Visas for the 120 aboard the plane which brought the group to Montreal expired two days later. Only eight showed up for the return flight.

Those deported were arrested Wednesday and Thursday and deportation hearings were held a day after their arrest.

An immigration department spokesman said Monday that although the search for the remaining 76 is centred in the Montreal area, it is felt that many of them may have fled to other parts of the province.

It is believed the persons remaining at large were victims of a "people smuggler" who promised them a new life to Canada and the United States for a price between $200 and $500 each.

OUT OUR WAY — By Hoy Cochran

Olympic Seats $60?

MONTREAL (CP) — Simon St. Pierre, executive vice-president of the Organizing Committee for the Olympic Games (COJO) Monday denied that any decision has been reached on ticket prices for the 1976 Summer Olympic Games.

Mr. St. Pierre was commenting on published reports last week that sold tickets to opening-day ceremonies might cost up to $60.

He told a news conference no decisions on ticket pricing have been made yet and a full report will not be released until October.

Gerry Snyder, vice-president in charge of revenue for the organizing committee, said last week the tickets could cost as much as $60 but added: "I'm not saying for a minute that's going to be the price, though."

Mr. St. Pierre also denied reports that a floating press village would house most of the journalists covering the games. Instead, he said, rooms for newspaper men in Montreal will be used.

MR. AND MRS. STEVEN HODGSON

Hodgson — Christie

The wedding of Joyce Lorraine Christie and Steven Webster Hodgson took place May 18 at St. Mark's United Church, Carrollton. Rev. Jack Morrison officiated at the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Christie, RR 6, Belleville and the groom is the son of Mrs. Kathleen Hodgson of Cor-byville and the late Harry Hodgson.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white polyadour satin with an empire waist. The bodice, long sleeves and train were French chantilly lace. Her head piece, covered in the same lace, held the waist-length tulle veil. She carried a bouquet of white daisies, yellow roses and baby's breath.

The maid of honor, Jean Christie, sister of the bride, attended in a green floral embossed Jacquard gown with long sleeves and an empire waist. She wore a green picture hat and carried a basket of white and yellow daisies, yellow carnations and baby's breath.

The bridesmaids, Nancy Bardy, sister of the bride, and Karen Hodgson, sister of the groom, were gowns the same as the maid of honor only in yellow.

The best man was Michael McHurter and the ushers were Kenneth Hodgson, brother of the groom, and Dexter Harder, cousin of the groom.

The reception took place at Gilead Community Centre.

The couple will reside at 175 Notch Hill Road, Kingston, after they return from their trip West.

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT FORDER

Forder — Ruckstuhl

An afternoon wedding took place at St. Peter's Roman Catholic Church in Trenton May 25, when Kathleen Joanne Ruckstuhl and Robert Charles Forder were married by Rev. J.F. Grainger.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G.R. Ruckstuhl of RR 3 Carrying Place.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a floor length gown of re-embroidered swiss lace with fitted bodice, leg-of-mutton sleeves with self trim, a high mandarin collar and bouffant skirt fashioned into a chapel train accented with embroidered lovered tulle fell from a daisy lace trimmed fitted cap. She carried a traditional bouquet of red roses, pink carnation, baby's breath, corn flowers and white shasta daisies.

The maid of honor, Darlene Davis wore a dress of sheer yellow nylon print with skirt gathered to a wide midriff of plain yellow nylon sheer, long set-in sleeves gathered to wide buttoned cuffs of plain yellow nylon sheer, the high rounded collar and bias neck ruffle and ruffle at bottom of the skirt were of the same material.

The bridesmaids Ruth Dale and Joan Ruckstuhl sister of the bride were dressed the same as the maid of honour. They all carried baskets of white shasta daisies and baby's breath and shasta daisies in their hair.

The flower girl Corinna Kirk, wore a dress of plain yellow nylon sheer with wide midriff, wide buttoned cuffs collar and bias neck and skirt ruffle in yellow nylon sheer flowered print. She carried a basket of shasta daisies and wore daisies in her hair.

The best man was John Pickrell. The ushers were Stan Bigelow and Ron Ruckstuhl, brother of the bride.

After the wedding a dinner took place at the Trenton legion Hall. The couple took a wedding trips to Niagara Falls, and other points of Western Ontario.

They will reside at RR 2, Carrying Place.

WI Meeting

Melrose Women's Institute held its May meeting at the home of Mary Ann Plews. Convener for the program was Val Badgley, leader of the 4-H girls club, who took part in a skit which they performed at Achievement Day earlier in the month. Carol Ann Callaghan spoke about the 4-H Girls Conference, which she attended at Guelph. Reports were given by the ladies who attended the District Annual Meeting at Tweed.

Lois Mcdechan spoke on the Waterloo Conference she attended earlier in the month. A tour of the Memorial district and talk with regard to the 'Institute Handbook' along with several posters with regard to procedure of meetings were in the program. A contest concluded the program and social time followed.

Nutritious Desserts Avoid Empty Calories

High food costs and an endless flood of information about nutrition and the hazards of overweight have conspired to make every conscientious cook mindful of "empty calories."

If your family demands dessert, but you can't afford empty calories — calorically or financially — try some of our nutritious dessert.

They all contain one or more elements of diet required by the Canada Food Guide.

Some people, incidentally, don't consider white sugar a legitimate part of the diet. Liquid honey may be substituted cup for cup in baking breads. ½ cup for one cup sugar — reduce other liquids at the rate of three tbsp. per cup of honey — in other baking. Add a tiny pinch of baking soda to prevent over-quick browning when using honey. You can substitute honey in jam and jellies but a higher heat will be needed in cooking.

Rhubarb Pudding

three cups diced rhubarb
two cups toasted buttered whole wheat bread cubes
one cup sugar
two tsp. cornstarch
½ tsp. cinnamon
one tsp. grated orange rind

Toss all ingredients. Dot with additional butter. Cover and bake at 375 degrees for 15 minutes. Remove cover and bake an additional 15 minutes.

Baked Custard

four eggs
½ cup sugar
½ tsp. vanilla
two cups scalded milk
⅛ tsp. nutmeg

Beat eggs with whisk. Stir in sugar and vanilla. Add a little warm milk, add remaining milk. Pour into a baking dish or one quart mold. Sprinkle with nutmeg. Place in a large container of hot water and bake at 350 degrees for 35 minutes.

Fruit Crisp

four cups cut up fruit (apples, pitted cherries, peach slices, rhuberb) one cup oatmeal
one cup brown sugar
one cup whole wheat or white flour
one cup margarine

Place fruit in shallow baking dish. (If you are using apples or fresh or canned drained peach slices, no additional ingredients are necessary. Sprinkle sour pitted cherries — with their juice — and rhubarb with two tbsp. tapioca and about ¾ cup sugar depending on tartness.) Combine oatmeal, sugar and flour. Cut in margarine and sprinkle over fruit. Bake at 375 for 25 minutes or until fruit is tender and crisp is browned.

Strawberry Souffle

two pkgs. strawberry gelatin
two cups boiling water
16 oz. pkg. frozen strawberry halves, thawed
¾ cup mayonnaise
one-third cup orange juice
8oz. cream cheese, softened
two egg whites
¼ cup sugar

Drain strawberries, reserving syrup. Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Add ¾ cup syrup from strawberries. Blend cheese with mayonnaise and orange juice. Stir in gelatin and chill until slightly thickened. Beat egg whites, adding sugar, until stiff. Fold in gelatin and strawberries. Pour into one quart souffle dish with three inche foil collar. Chill. Serves six to eight.

Dessert Soup

three cups rhubarb in one inch pieces
one cup sugar
two inch cinnamon stick ½ cup dried apricots, cut in pieces
two tbsp. corn starch

Combine sugar, cinnamon stick and apricots with one quart water in a saucepan. Bring to simmer and cook five minutes. Add rhubarb and simmer three more minutes. Do not over cook. Stir cornstarch with one third cup cold water and stir into mixture. Simmer until clear and thick. Remove cinnamon and chill. Serve garnished with fresh strawberries if desired.

Peach Royale

one pkg. raspberry gelatin
one 16 oz. can sliced peaches, drained four ounce container vanilla yogurt

Prepare gelatin according to package. Chill. When nearly set, stir in peaches and spoon into serving dishes. Chill until firm Top each of four servings with yogurt.

People and Events

Lambda Chapter of Alpha Delta Kappa Honorary Sorority for Women Educators held an initiation service for twelve new members in the Bridge St. United Church Monday, under the direction of president Fay Burnett and chairman of expansion committee Phyllis Beatty.

A short business meeting was held after the initiation service and Clara Adams, chaplain, gave the new members a background of the sorority.

Heather Grant performed a piano solo and Jean Scrarrba sang. A dessert lunch was served after.

The May meeting of the Tweed-Chapman Women's Institute was held at the home of Isabel Martin.

Mary Wilson, the new president, welcomed the guests and members. Irene Lyon, district director, gave a full report of the district annual meeting held in Tweed, May 8.

Isabel Martin, Jessie McTaggart and Irene Brough were voted as a committee to look into the making of a Quilt block for the World Craft's Exhibition to be held in the Ontario Science Centre in Toronto from June to September.

A scrap book and photo album was displayed by Caroline Rogers who travelled to England and Scotland last summer with Captain D. May and the Girl Guides.

Valerie Holmes presented an exhibit of dainty desserts from the recently completed club, 'Dainty Fare'.

A lunch was served after the program.

Abortions Outnumber Births

TORONTO (CP) — Abortions now outnumber births in some Metropolitan Toronto hospitals, says the head of the University of Toronto's population unit.

Dr. Marion Powell said in a weekend interview there were 2,300 abortions compared with 2,200 live births at Toronto General Hospital last year. Toronto General is considered to have one of the most liberal abortion policies among Metro hospitals.

Abortions among women aged 26 and under "have just skyrocketed," said Dr. Powell.

Ann Landers

Mom's Fear of Germs Unnatural

Dear Ann Landers: We have a four-month-old baby who is very cute. She has a darling personality, is very friendly and always smiling.

The problem isn't the baby's. It's mine. That is when people try to touch her. Especially if they appear to have a cold. Sometimes they have just coughed into their hands and then they want to put their germy fingers on my child's face. It drives me wild.

Salespeople who handle dirty money all day are the worst offenders. How do they know who was the last one to touch that money? He or she might have had some terrible disease. Please print this letter so the stupid "touchers" can see it. My relatives all know how I feel. It's the strangers I need to reach.—Hands Off

Dear Off: Your preoccupation with germs goes beyond a mother's natural concern. It's sick. Babies build up an immunity to a variety of diseases by normal exposure. The child who is raised under a glass bell will have very little resistance. Please discuss this with your pediatrician and hopefully he can remove the blinker from your thinker.

Dear Ann Landers: If you print this letter I will love you to my dying day.

Dear Mail Advertiser: I am not your "dear friend," and I don't want to be addressed as "Resident" or "Occupant."

Please get lost with your free samples, coupons, bonus gifts and pre-clearance specials.

The answer is simple. If the people were not close enough so that you were moved to send them a sympathy card or drop by the house, when they lost a loved one, they are not close enough to receive a graduation or wedding announcement, or an invitation to a shower. Of course you may "bring a gift."

Have I made myself clear?—Pleeded And Fed Up

Dear Fed. Clear—and then some. Thanks for expressing it yourself.

Dear G.G.: Go ahead and love me to your dying day, but don't count on my trying to change anything. Millions of people like mail offers, and that's what helps keep those cards and letters comin'.

Dear Ann Landers: Please manage, somehow, to get this message into your column as soon as possible. It might be too late for this year's crop of high school graduates, but it's not too late for those who will be getting married within the next year or so.

The question arises: To whom shall we send announcements? The answer is simple. Give Back Love To Mom

By DORIS CLARKE

Dear Doris: I have recently lost my mother and believe me when I say this: I never felt it possible that I would have such an empty feeling. I want to stress with everyone who is lucky enough to have a mom. Cherish her and let her know you love her.

Lacy Crochet

...You see, I have neglected my Mom and even though I lived close I rarely took time to go and see her, yet I have she was lonely since my Daddy died. But I was so thoughtless, or I should be honest and say selfish, and so was my brother and his wife.

So daughter-in-laws, also take heed, your children will grow up one day and the thoughtless acts dished out may come back on us. All you lucky people with a Mom, think now and again of the love and care and endless tenderness she gave to us children and try to give it back.

I do not want anyone else to feel the dreadful feeling of remorse that I have and I know full well I never will. When I have children I hope they are kinder to me than I was to my Mom.

Dear Remorse: Remorse, unless it leads to action, is a useless emotion. Many of us are greatly taken up with the frantic demands of our days that we forget about the older lonely ones who would appreciate the slightest thought—not only that, but your bread would come back buttered.

We can do nothing but grieve for ourselves when we keep our heritage locked inside us. Consider the fact that our children need the love and wisdom of grandparents, and they are lucky enough to have them.

Dear Doris: Thank you once again for all you say about our work.

Let us pray for each other that we may all truly grow in the deep peace and love of God and that we may share this peace and love with those around us, especially the poorest and the lonely.

Dear Dr. Vesber: If, by a paragraph or two I can add the tiniest part to the impact you are making around the world in your homes and programs for retarded adults, I will be thankful.

(Do you wonder why the people you care about act as they do? Let Doris shed light on your particular human problem, by writing to her in care of this newspaper. And enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope.)

'Escort Hostess' Likes Her Work

TORONTO (CP) — Sue Tyan is divorced, lives a double life—and loves it.

By day, she is a journalism student at Ryerson Polytechnical Institute, in Toronto.

But by night Sue dines at the most exclusive restaurants, sees the best shows and meets the most interesting people.

Sue is an employee of a Toronto escort agency—she is called a an escort hostess—and she earns $50 a night, two nights a week.

At Ryerson, Sue was supplementing a student loan by doing occasional supply teaching. She was also donating her time two nights a week to the East General Hospital Crisis Intervention Clinic as a lay psychiatric counselor. But the pace was just a little too fast.

Now she makes good money for spending five hours wining and dining in the company of insurance executives, publishers, investment analysts, engineers and industrial designers.

Sue got the job after reading an article about the escort business and making an appointment for an interview.

"I walked in, she read a list of instructions, and asked when I could start," she said.

The only requirement for a hostess is that she must be unmarried.

But Sue is also attractive, intelligent, well-spoken and "older." She's 27.

And she is genuinely interested in people and believes that everyone has something to offer.

Each hostess is given a list of regulations concerning behavior and dress.

These include such directions as: Alcohol must be consumed in moderation; clothing must be immaculate; she may not give to the client her telephone number or address or place of work; the evening must end at 1 a.m.

Generally, Sue finds the clients to be intelligent, witty, the most interesting people.

Sue can be seen in Toronto and just want companionship.

Clients pay up to $130 not to spend the evening alone. The agency gets $30, the hostess gets $70 and dinner with drinks can cost as much as $30. The client usually also pays Sue's cab fare.

The main hazard is that clients often develop a feeling of involvement with Sue, have spent five hours talking to her and think she has her personal problems and aspirations.

"My natural warmth is interpreted as something more than it really is," she said.

Although suggestions of a sexual relationship with a client is natural, and I rarely have trouble convincing the client that I really mean no."

Fat and Lazy— Or Lazy and Fat?

GENEVA (Reuter) — You don't need to diet to keep your weight down—just take more physical exercise, says a World Health Organization (W.H.O.) expert.

Thirty minutes of exercise by an average adult will use up all the calories contained in a slice of apple pie topped by a scoop of ice cream.

You can eat your cake and still not have it always with you if you walk, swim or play games to burn up the excess calories.

Writing in the W.H.O. magazine World Health, American nutrition expert Jean Mayer of the Harvard School of Public Health said obesity appeared to be mainly a disease of civilization:

Mechanization of work and of transport have cut down physical exercise. Many people, particularly in developed countries, engage in little physical activity but their appetite does not decrease proportionately. So the excess calories accumulate as fat.

Overweight people have only two choices, take more exercise or go through life feeling hungry.

Prof. Mayer said it is a fallacy to think that an increase in physical activity is automatically followed by an increase in appetite, making exercise self-defeating as a weight-control measure.

Recent studies had shown that the mechanism which regulates appetite, to relate the intake of calories to their expenditure, does not operate in a person is inactive to begin with. Below a certain level a decrease in activity is not accompanied by a decrease in appetite.

"Under-exercising rather than overeating as such may well be the most important cause of the prevalence of overweight today," she said.

Experiments in the United States with male rats showed that a group of rats which exercised daily on a treadmill ate no more than a group which remained in cages. Nevertheless the sedentary animals slowly accumulated more weight. A third group of rats kept without movement in small tunnel-like cages became extremely fat.

Another study of overweight high-school girls showed that most of them ate no more than normal-weight girls but spent more time in television watching or other sitting activities at the expense of walking and active sports.

When playing games, obese children were less active than their thinner schoolmates. Films showed that fat young-sters playing volleyball were immobile 80 to 90 per cent of the time, compared with 50 per cent for the others.

In the swimming pool, obese youngsters tended to float or stand in the water, using up only about one-calorie per minute compared with three minutes for the expended five or more.

Research is progressing to find out whether people are fat because they are inactive or inactive because they are fat.

A tendency to overweight apparently shows early in life. Tests on babies showed that fat babies tended to be inactive and have a moderate appetite while active babies ate much more but were thinner.

It is some consolation that the fatter the person, the faster the rate at which he puts up, calories if he does exercise.

An average man will use between 200 and 250 more calories an hour while walking than while sitting. Swimming will consume twice as much.

And since the calorie cost of exercise increases proportionately to body weight, an overweight persons burns up more body fat for the same amount of exercise than a person of normal weight.

Hostess Hunter

WELLINGTON, N.Z. (CP) — In diplomatic circles Mrs. J. A. Dougan, wife of the Canadian high commissioner to New Zealand, is known as a gracious hostess.

But when the duck-shooting season starts, she sheds her elegant gowns in favor of a camouflaged jacket, newly oiled waders and a 12-gauge shotgun.

This year's opening day, the Dougans' fourth since their arrival, found them at their blind on a private lake just outside Wellington before daybreak.

Mrs. Dougan bagged two ducks to her husband's six. A year earlier, she shot three on opening day.

Her women's-model gun is automatic and the feature that appeals to her is the Pecoil pad.

"I know I look a sight when I'm dressed up for shooting," she said, "but I can keep up with the best of them."

That includes a nip back at the car between stands with the other marksmen who have braved the chilly opening-day weather.

It took Mrs. Dougan 39 shots to bring down her two ducks this year but that wasn't the end of her day. Back home, she cooked the ducks for her family.

"I have a special recipe," she said.

IODE 'Diversity Our Weakness'

TORONTO (CP) — Diversity has been the major weakness of the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire (IODE), the group's 76th annual meeting was told Monday.

In a report to 850 delegates attending the two-day meeting, Ann McCartney said the IODE is often taken for "a tea-and-bun" group, "flag-waving organization—not relevant or forward-looking in today's society."

A survey of the order's 19,800 members, across the country, however, indicates a greater interest in community work than ever before, she said.

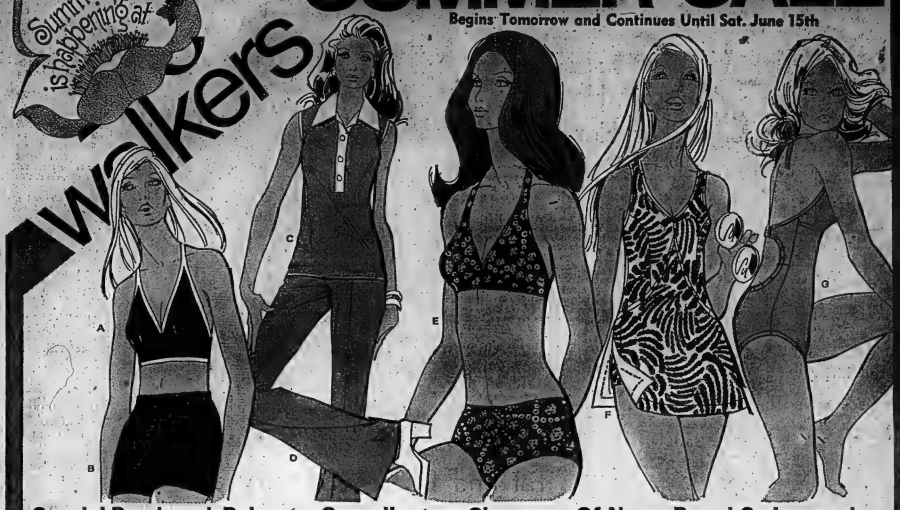
Mrs. McCartney headed the committee which sent out a questionnaire designed to pinpoint the goals of the 770 chapters and to help establish an IODE identity in the public's mind.

IODE members are involved in a wide range of projects—from teaching English to New Canadians to raising money for genetic research, to preparing briefs in government on a variety of social issues.

But the questionnaire are still being tabulated, Mrs. McCartney said, but there are a number of trends which are outstanding, among them "an increasing interest in projects to aid senior citizens."

The results of the questionnaire vary with the geographic area and the size of the community, she said.

And drug programs would probably have to be tailored to community size, she said.



Smaller towns could sponsor coffee houses, educational seminars and dances as a means of getting information to ensure might add, hostels for young people with educational and social problems and a contact service with the addict's family.

The coordinator said "only a first step" towards turning the IODE into more than a commodity, strengthening its image, and boosting its relatively stagnant membership.

Nurses Call Negotiation Meeting

Representatives of Belleville General Hospital's nurses' association will be among those attending a negotiation meeting June 22.

Registered nurses, tired of long delays over contract negotiations, called the meeting with employers.

Miss Donna Thompson, president of the BGH association, said this morning that the present contract here expired Dec. 31, 1973. The local nurses are awaiting an arbitration hearing.

Anne Gothben, director of employment relations for the Registered Nurses Association of Ontario, said in a statement the nurses have been negotiating with individual hospitals since October without settlement.

The only way to achieve contract demands is to get a province-wide settlement, she said. All individual negotiations are a waste of time since no hospital is willing to make the first offer.

There are 48 hospitals and 48 nurses' associations involved. Only three settlements have been heard by the hospital arbitration board and the nurses are not willing to wait what might be more than a year to settle their contracts.

Helen Reddick Compares Notes with New Owner John Bleys.

Front Street Veteran Has Changed Hands

Reddick's Bakery on Front Street has changed hands, but the same products will emerge from its ovens under the new management.

Helen Reddick has handed over her recipes and the special formula for Reddick's bread, to new owner John Bleye. The famous fruit bread, well about a pound of fruit in each loaf, will still be available. In addition to all the familiar products, Mr. Bleys intends to add some specialties of his own.

World War II and Reddick's began at the same time, in September, 1939. Miss Reddick's brother, the late Reg Reddick, took it over from the National System of Baking, a chain of bakeries owned by their uncle, H. A. Heagle. With the shop the Reddicks got the National's bread formula, and the recipes, originated by Mr. Heagle. The name was changed to [illegible] and became a family business and [illegible] brother, Doug, entered the business and was Miss Reddick's partner until he died last September. His wife, Wilma, has assisted Miss Reddick since then.

The new owner comes to Belleville from Oshawa, where he was a supervisor for Dominion Stores. A qualified baker, he has attended a number of them on his own. His wife and three children will move to Belleville at the end of the school year.

The bakery business is a demanding one. A doughman arrives at 11 p.m. to begin preparing the dough for bread. The remainder of the staff comes in at 5:30 a.m. on weekdays, and some arrive at 2 a.m. on weekends.

"The shelves have to be filled by opening time," says Miss Reddick. "In the summer we have tourists lined up outside the door as early as 7:30 a.m. and we like to accommodate them."

Miss Reddick will remain in the shop for the summer to assist the new owner.

Tweed Man Fined $150

A Tweed man was fined $150 in provincial court here yesterday after he was convicted of impaired driving.

John Lee, 45, was arrested by police April 29, after an Ontario Provincial Police constable noticed him driving erratically along Highway 401.

When Lee was taken to the OPP detachment for a breathalyzer test, he had a reading of .230 milligrams of alcohol in 100 millilitres of his blood.

Wind Causes Concern

Winds gusting up to 37 miles an hour from the southwest caused Quinte-area boatowners some concern early this morning as their boats rocked about their moorings in the yacht basin here. Just before work started some boating enthusiasts rushed down to the harbor to make sure their boats were secure. Weather forecasters at Canadian Forces Base Trenton predict that the winds will continue to blow, up to 30 miles an hour, until late afternoon. Tomorrow will be sunny and dry with temperatures in the 70 degree range.

$92,000 Price Tag

City Will Buy PUC Building

City council has authorized purchase of the public utilities commission property on Front Street at a quoted price of $92,000.

But there is still some question as to what use at least part of the property will be put.

Some weeks ago the city recreation and arena committee indicated it was not interested in the PUC building as it located for a senior citizens' drop-in centre, even though the present premises building on Pinnacle Street might be required for construction of a parking garage.

Plans for the proposed parking garage will not be ready until July 1st, Mayor Robin Jeffrey said if the garage construction went ahead, an entrance or exit onto Front Street through part of the PUC property would be required.

In the meantime the recreation committee has plans for entrapment of its present Pinnacle Street building to provide adult accommodation for senior citizens.

It was agreed that action on the proposed renovation should be delayed until the parking garage plans are completed. There was some suggestion that the parking garage could be built "around" the recreation building.

Alderman Ben Corke felt purchase of the PUC property was "unrealistic" unless it was bought for resale.

He said he just couldn't visualize an entrance and exit from the proposed parking garage onto Front Street.

Mayor Jeffrey assured Alderman Corke that it was a "key property" in the garage planning.

She said a right of way o Front Street would be needed, while the rear of the PUC property would be required.

Alderman Joe Cox wondered if purchase of the property might be premature and also asked how the $92,000 purchase price was arrived at.

Mayor Jeffrey said the $92,000 figure was the result of three separate appraisals with the median price being taken, plus 15 per cent.

Sale of the PUC building to the city was suggested earlier in the year by the city parking authority when it announced plans for a parking garage at the present municipal parking lot on which the recreation building stands.

The parking authority suggestion was that the PUC building be renovated for use by the recreation committee and for a senior citizens' drop-in centre.

City Solicitor's Position Eliminated by Council

Belleville city council will discontinue with the services of a full-time city solicitor and instead will consider the advisability of tendering out the city's legal business on a part-time basis.

Council Monday rescinded the bylaw that three and a half years ago saw the appointment of John E. Miller as full-time city solicitor. Mr. Miller will leave his position at city hall at the end of June and is to enter private practice in the city.

Hospital Gets OK To Buy Properties

City council has given approval to a request from the Belleville General Hospital Board of Governors to acquire an additional 25 residential properties in the Bay View Heights area.

The objective of the hospital board is to acquire land for future expansion of the institution.

The proposal is that the properties be purchased as they come on the market and then be removed from the land is acquired for expansion of hospital facilities.

A letter to council from Philip Rickard, executive director of the hospital, said that purchases of the properties on First Street, Second Street and on Bay Drive, as they come on the market, would cause the least possible disruption to the community hospital neighbors and at the same time be financially self-supporting until the time of actual need arises.

The purchase of the properties would be borne by the hospital with funds from the Bay View Estate and no cost would fall to the city or to Hastings county. Approval of the purchase must also be obtained from the county.

Aldermen Ben Corke said purchase of the 25 properties council on the hospital was being recommended by the board to provide for future expansion of the $20,00,00 institution.

Long-range possibilities include the erection of teaching facilities for doctors, extended care or nursing home facilities and health care unit, he said.

Local Deals Best Deals

This district, like every other place, is visited by the itinerant peddler who goes from door to door soliciting articles, which in a majority of instances are purchasable in your own community from your own local merchants. In most cases these fellows receive a large percentage of the money paid for the goods they sell on commission.

To assure a profit for himself and jobber who provides the merchandise most of necessity price the goods accordingly. As a result the housewife who patronizes the itinerant salesman often pays considerably more for that article of dubious value than she would to her hometown merchant, whose stock is reliable and dependable.

If a citizen makes a purchase locally, should the article turn out not to be as represented the dealer is generally quite ready and willing to rectify the mistake, whereas if the purchase is made from a peddler and the goods found unsatisfactory, there is seldom any redress, for the itinerant salesman is here today and gone tomorrow.

Shop your hometown merchants to win prices and good value. Shop Festival of Values section.

Course Introduced In Native Studies

PETERBOROUGH — A two-year diploma program in native studies will be introduced this fall at Trent University.

It is designed for graduates of the four-year secondary school stream and will allow students to enable them to continue their education in a university setting.

Professor Walter Currie, chairman of the native studies department at Trent, said the type of practical training students will receive would make them ideal candidates for employment opportunities in government agencies, native and band council associations and private businesses that deal with native communities.

Formal study at Trent will be preceded by an intensive communications and skills seminar, designed to prepare students for university work. The first year of the diploma program will require the student to take three courses selected from the university's regular native studies prospectus. In the second year, students may undertake practical and research work in native communities as well as a more advanced academic program.

Professor Currie noted that most native students are placed in the four-year-year secondary school stream. In 1972 he said, there were five times as many native students in grade 13 of the four-year stream as in grade 13.

To give them an opportunity to continue their education in a university setting, he said, required a type of program that can bridge any gap in their understanding without lowering the university admission standards.

Students wishing to transfer to Trent's regular degree program will receive credit for courses successfully completed.

Asleep in Car, Found Impaired

A 36-year-old St. Thomas, Ont., man, Arnold Bruce Thompson, was fined $175 in provincial court here yesterday after he was convicted of impaired driving.

Thompson was arrested by police last May 19 when he was found sleeping in his car, with the engine running.

When taken to the police station for a breathalyzer test, Thompson was found to have a breathalyzer reading of 225 [illegible] milligrams per 100 millilitres of his blood.

MAJOR RAY NELSON

Sally Ann Officers Leaving

After a two-year stay in Belleville as corps officers with the Salvation Army, Major and Mrs. Ray Nelson will be returning to Vancouver.

In Vancouver, Major Nelson will become involved in the public relations field. Major and Mrs. Nelson leave at the end of June.

Assuming the new post of corps officers will be Captain and Mrs. Robert Sioux of Regina who take over officially on July 14.

Major Nelson's last Sunday here will be June 23.

Administrators Here Thursday

Chief administrative officers throughout Ontario will be in Belleville on Thursday of this week for the annual conference of the Ontario Municipal Administrators' Association.

The all-day conference will get under way at the Four Seasons Hotel, at 9 a.m. and will conclude with an evening banquet at seven o'clock. Between 50 and 60 persons are expected to attend the conference.

Keynote speaker for the conference is Hon. Donald Irvine, minister without portfolio in the Ontario government.

Following the council meeting, Mayor Robin Jeffrey said two local law firms would be asked to look after the city's legal business until a decision on tendering for a part-time solicitor was made.

This morning Mr. Miller told The Intelligencer that the action taken by council was one he had been recommending for several months.

He said, in his opinion, the city no longer needed a full-time solicitor, although as the city grew it was conceivable that this might be again necessary some time in the future.

Mr. Miller noted that at the present time approximately 30 per cent of his time was spent on city administration rather than in legal work.

When the city tenders for a part-time solicitor, he said he would be bidding on the job, and hoped to get the appointment.

Following last night's meeting, Mayor Jeffrey said finances entered into council's decision to diagnose with a full-time solicitor.

This year's current city budget saw a figure of $48,100 allotted for the solicitor's department. Of this figure $40,-800 was for salaries and $7,300 for office expenses and registry office fees.

The department, in addition to Mr. Miller, has two legal secretaries.

Mayor Jeffrey said council's feeling was that the city's legal business could be done on a lower cost on a tendered part-time basis.

$200 Fine For Careless

An [illegible]-old Trenton youth was fined $200 in provincial court here yesterday after he was convicted of a charge of careless driving that arose from a single car crash May 14 in which four persons were injured.

Donald Wayne McCarran was arrested by police May 14 after the car he was driving south along Highway 33 went out of control, skidded 382 feet, struck two parked cars and finally came to rest against the side of house.

The accident caused a total of $5,000 damage.

Four passengers in the McCarran vehicle were treated at Trenton Memorial Hospital for minor injuries as a result of the accident.

Railway Veterans Retiring

Forty years of employment with the Canadian National Railways ended today for Howard "Bunker" Hill, an issuer for the rail line for the past number of years. His position in the company's Stores Department ended a career during which he also served in the Second World War in a field ambulance unit.

Fellow employees presented Mr. Hill with a cassette to commemorate his retirement.

Retiring from the CNR tomorrow is Gerald Clement, an employee who among other positions held over 44 years of working days as a rail quality control officer. Mr. Clement began work in the CNR railyard when most labor was done by hand as opposed to today, when nearly all operations are mechanized.

Both men were born and raised in Belleville.

Awards Presented for Long Service

Five Ontario Provincial Police officers recently received their long service and good conduct awards from the force's Commissioner, H. H. Graham, in a special ceremony at the Belleville detachment. Commissioner Graham, front centre, was joined by the officers' wives, front row, Mrs. G. I. Widdows, Mrs. J. E. Steinman, Mrs. S. S. J. Raybould and Mrs. J. G. Anderson.

Officers receiving the awards, marking 20 years service with good conduct, were: back row, Cpl. G. I. Widdows, Madoc Detachment; Cpl. J. E. Steinman, No. 8 District, Sgt. F. J. Hatferty, Detachment Commander, Picton, Ideal: Sgt. S. S. J. Raybould, No. 8 District and Cpl. J. G. Anderson, Detachment Commander, Kaladar.

Seven All-stars from Bruins, Flyers

MONTREAL (CP)—For the second straight season, the two divisional champions have gained seven of the 12 berths on the National Hockey League's first and second all-star teams.

Each Division champion Boston Bruins had three players named Monday to the first team—defenceman Bobby Orr, centre Phil Esposito and right winger Ken Hodge. Wayne Cashman, left winger on the Esposito-Hodge line, gained his first all-star berth when he was picked for the second team. Orr was the only unanimous choice.

Philadelphia Flyers, the West Division champions who defeated the Bruins in the Stanley Cup final, had goaltender Bernie Parent on the first team, while defenseman Barry Ashbee and centre Bobby Clarke were on the second squad.

Defenceman Brad Park of New York Rangers and left winger Rick Martin of Buffalo Sabres round out the first team. Goaltender Tony Esposito and defenceman Bill White of Chicago Black Hawks and right winger Mickey Redmond of Detroit complete the second squad.

Players received five points for a first-place choice, three for second and one for third. The team was selected among members of the Professional Hockey Writers' Association in the 16 league cities. A unanimous choice brought the selected player 240 points.

Following is a list of first and second team selections with points received in brackets:

FIRST TEAM

Goal—Parent, Philadelphia (232). Defence — Orr, Boston (240); Park, NY Rangers (196). Centre—Esposito, Boston (238). Right wing—Hodge, Boston (230). Left wing—Martin, Buffalo (198).

With four players selected from post-1967 teams, it doubled the total representation the expansion clubs have had in the previous six seasons.

The only two post-1967 team players named to all-star teams prior to this year were goaltender Glenn Hall of St. Louis Blues to the first team in 1968-69 and Clarke to the second team last year.

Members of the first team each receive $2,000 from the league, with $1,000 apiece awarded to second-team selectees.

Orr's selection to the first team was his seventh straight and thus tied the record set by defenceman Doug Harvey of the Canadiens from 1951-52 through 1957-58 and equalled by Chicago left winger Bobby Hull from 1963-64 through 1968-70.

The selection of Phil Esposito marks his sixth straight appearance on the first team, a record equalled by a centre since the start of all-star teams in 1930-31.

This was Hodge's second selection to the first team. He was the right wing choice in 1970-71. Park is making his third appearance on the first team. He previously was selected to the second team on two other occasions.

Parent, Martin, Ashbee and Cashman all were first-time selectees, but it is the third time Bill White has been chosen for the second team and the second time for Clarke.

Tony Esposito, on the second team this year, has two previous selections to the first team, while Redmond is on the second team for the first time. He was the first team right winger in 1973-73.

This year marks the first time a member of the Sabres or Flyers has been named to the first team.

Orr Top Award Winner

MONTREAL (CP) — Bobby Orr was named winner of the record-setting James Norris Memorial Trophy on the all-star team. He was run from the league, while the runner-up in each case gets 200 points in the Norris voting. Orr's 236 Voting was done on the basis of five points for a first-place choice, three for a second and one for a third.

Only three other players in NHL history have won an award as many times as Orr has won the Norris. Doug Harvey of Montreal Canadiens and New York Rangers was the first to win the Norris seven times; Jacques Plante won the Vezina Trophy as the leading goaltender six times with Montreal and shared the honor once with Glenn Hall while with St. Louis Blues; and Frank Boucher of the Rangers won the Lady Byng seven times.

But none of the three won those awards in seven consecutive years as Orr has.

today as the outstanding defenceman in the National Hockey League during the 1973-74 season.

It was the seventh straight time the 26-year-old native of Parry Sound, Ont., has been named Norris Trophy winner—a record for consecutive claims in the history of the league's trophies. He now has won more individual player awards than anyone in NHL history.

It was the 13th award for Orr in his eight seasons with Boston, surpassing the previous high of 12 received by right winger Gordie Howe during a 22-year career with Detroit Red Wings. Howe won the Hart and Art Ross Trophies six times each as most valuable player and scoring leader respectively.

Orr's selection for the Norris followed his win as the league's most selection to the league's first all-star team. He was the only unanimous pick for the all-stars. Brad Park of New York Rangers, Orr's defence partner

The league also announced its individual trophy winners. NHL players voted for by members of the Professional Hockey Writers' Association (PHWA) in the 16 league cities.

Centre Phil Esposito of Boston, league scoring champion, was named Hart Trophy winner as the player most valuable to his team. He was followed in the voting by goaltender Bernie Parent of Philadelphia Flyers—champion of the Western Division Stanley Cup winners—and Esposito's co-holder of the Vezina Trophy with Tony Esposito of Chicago Black Hawks.

Another member of the Bruins, left winger John Bucyk, won the Lady Byng Trophy for best combining sportsmanship and a high standard of playing ability. Bucyk was followed by forward Lowell MacDonald of Pittsburgh Penguins in the voting.

The outstanding rookie award, represented by the Calder Memorial Trophy, went to defenceman Denis Potvin of New York Islanders, with centre Tom Lysiak of Atlanta Flames second.

Each winner receives $1,500

Masterson To Richard

MONTREAL (CP) — Henri Richard, 38, captain of Montreal Canadiens, was named today recipient of the Bill Masterson Memorial Trophy awarded annually by the Professional Hockey Writers' Association.

Richard has completed his 19th National Hockey League season and easily outdistanced forwards Ed Westfall of New York Islanders and Rod Gilbert of New York Rangers in voting for the trophy.

The Masterson Trophy was established in 1968 in honor of Bill Masterson of Minnesota North Stars who died Jan. 15 of that year of injuries sustained in a game. It is given to "the National Hockey League player who best exemplifies the qualities of perseverance, sportsmanship, and dedication to hockey."

Richard's 1973-74 statistics were 19 goals and 36 assists for 55 points in 73 regular-season games as centre. In his 19 seasons in the NHL, Richard has become the league's 16th leading goal scorer and its 10th leading point producer.

Move to Speed Up Game

MONTREAL (CP) — The National Hockey League's rules committee took drastic steps Monday to get rid of game-delaying tactics employed by some of its clubs.

"Our main objective was to get back to the two-hour-and-30-minute hockey game," referee-in-chief Scotty Morrison said.

Some games last season ran well over three hours.

Morrison said the committee agreed that any player who is an injured starting goalie does not proceed directly to the penalty box after being tagged for icing or for any infractions, subject to five-minute major penalties. They will also cost the offender $50.

In the past the offending player was handed a 10-minute misconduct penalty if he did not leave directly to the penalty box. However, the penalized team was allowed to substitute for the player during the 10 minutes.

Morrison said the amendment

Goaltenders will no longer be allowed time-outs to move to the bench for equipment repairs. A goalie who runs into playing equipment trouble during play must go to the bench and be replaced by the substitute goaltender.

And the substitute netminder must begin play immediately without the warmup period he was allowed in the past. The same will apply if he is replaced by another goalie.

The committee also elevated penalty box time-keeping and bench-minding to major infractions, subject to five-minute major penalties. They will also cost the offender $50.

Any player wearing tape "or any foreign material that could be considered illegal" will be assessed a match penalty as in the past, but his team now must also play one man short for the duration of the penalty.

Morrison said the amendment is designed to prevent players from wearing gloves with tape inserted because some players wear goal gloves to protect their hands against their hockey gloves and the golf glove is as dangerous as taped hands.

Returning to the subject of speeded-up games, Morrison said linesmen will be instructed to drop the puck on faceoffs even if one centre—after prior warning—continues to delay getting set.

RHEIMS DROP BRAVES

MONTREAL (CP) — Boston Bruins have been granted permission to suspend operation of their American Hockey League club—Boston Braves—for the 1974-75 season, it was announced Monday. The Bruins will have a working agreement with Rochester Americans of the AHL next season. The Braves had been in operation for the last three seasons.

Triple Play for Juniors

Rollins, Auger's Get Wins

Despite hitting what was one of the strangest triple plays ever, the Ellis Juniors still fell to league leading Rollins Construction 4-1 in one of the two Quinte Football League games played last night. In the other game Auger Men's Wear recorded its second win of the season, a 4-0 pasting of Bardon Supplies.

The triple play was the highlight of the nightcap. It occurred after Rollins' batters Ken Donnelly and Randy Lambert had vrenched base on back to back base hits.

Denville was stationed on second, with Lambert holding down first. Carl Boomhower hit a slow roller to shortstop, which he apparently lost or thought had gone out of play.

Ellis shortstop Grant McKenzie fired to third, forcing Denville with Lambert attempting to second. Boomhower, still at the plate, was thrown out at first base. Lambert was then caught napping, trying to steal second base, and was picked off when Dave Dolan, the Ellis first baseman fired to McKenna, finishing off the triple out, and the third inning for the Octavius loomen.

The fourth was not so easy for Ellis hurler John Sprachett, with the boys in red collecting two runs.

Ralph Plane started a cool six single, followed by a three-bagger by Dale Duvall and another base hit, this one by Paul Goodfellow.

Other runs were scored by Rollins in the first and sixth innings.

The Juniors scored their only run in the top of the first inning, when Dave Horwood singled, went to second on a passed ball, and scored on Pete Stafkovich's base hit.

Winning pitcher Ken Denville ended the game with a nice two-hitter, striking out eight hits to the powerful Rollins.

Loser Sprachett gave up eight hits in three powerful innings stints, fanning three and issuing two free passes.

Plane paced Rollins with two singles, with Duvall adding a triple and Wayne McTaggart a double. Other hits went to Boomhower, Goodfellow, Denville, and Lambert.

Horwood and Stafkovich were the only batter to reach Denville.

In the first game of the night at the Alemite, Auger's banged out 18 hits in shutting out Bardon, jumping on starter Jamie Bardon for five of the six runs in the first inning.

Jim Clement started the rally, leading off with a base hit. Steve Barker popped out to short, followed by Ian Shaw's base hits and a walk. Jack Jury, Al Ferguson, and Skip Belch all stroked safeties, with George Ferguson drawing a walk.

Roger Drake then did his job of advancing the base runners with a sacrifice, with Art Barker driving in another pair with a base hit.

Bardon had their best chance to score in the game in the first inning, leaving the bases filled after leaving them with only one out.

Auger's added another run in the top of the seventh frame, with Clement once again leading off with a hit, this time a three bagger. Al Ferguson tripled to score him.

Included in the Trenton team's total of hits were four for extra bases. Clement had a triple and single, as did Al Ferguson and Barker, with George Ferguson doubling in the fifth inning. Drake had his went to Jury, Belch, and Dave Hess.

Bardon could only manage four hits off Ferguson, all singles. They were by Mark Coates, Bill Harrison, Ted Wadlowski, and Gary Johnson.

Ferguson picked up his second win of the season with the victory, fanning 11 and giving up no walks.

Bardon was tagged with the loss, allowing five of the Auger runs over five hits. He walked one. Harrison with two out in the second inning threw and walking one over the rest of the way.

The loss dropped Bardon to the basement of the league, 11 points back of Rollins Construction, who have 14. The win for Auger's left them one point out of the fourth and final playoff spot.

In tonight's action, the Juniors take on Howard and Robert Pringle at the Alemite, while Auger's meets Devolin Motors in the Ellis Field game of the doubleheader starts at 7 p.m.

Belleville's Sandy Waterson lays a check on Oshawa forward Pete Robertson in last night's SCLA midget game at the Dick Ellis Rink. Despite efforts like this one by Waterson, the visitors still managed to come up with a convincing 17-5 win over the locals, with Robertson potting four of his team's markers.

Kingston Entry Is Tops

Miller Winner

Two Belleville Lawn Bowling Club members risks met in a sudden death playoff for the District 15 Championship, Sunday.

Bruce Miller and his rink of Ken Ashley, Frank Morrell, and Mel Caverly defeated Gorden Picken for the right to proceed to the June 29th playoffs in Oshawa in July.

Picken's rink consisted of Bill Venhola, Lead; Ken Noble, 2nd, and Austin Watkin, Vice.

A Kingston rink skipped by Ned Symons won the District Cal Trebles and will also see action in Oshawa.

TIGERS DROP ROOKIE

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit Tigers of baseball's American League said Friday they sent rookie infielder Ron Cash to its Evansville Triple A farm club and called up outfielder Marvin Lane from the American Association team. Cash, batting from April 14 to May 11 with nervous exhaustion, batted .236 in 16 games with the Tigers.

Brawl Mars SCLA Contest

By ALAN TEGWORTH
Sports Staff

What started to be a well-played game of lacrosse, and certainly an exhibition of the skills of the game by the visiting Oshawa team turned into a bench clearing brawl last night at the Dick Ellis Rink.

The match between the Belleville Midgets and Oshawa in South Central Lacrosse Association play was won eventually by Mohawk Motor City team by a 17-5 count.

The visitors dominated play throughout, the penalty-filled contest, scoring almost at will to embarrass the Belleville goaltenders Joey Bourette and Dune Boyce.

The Oshawa squad used a tight precision passing attack, netted with a sharp but break o embarrass the Belleville defence many times, catching them with no men defending on two or three attackers.

Robert Peterson paced the winners' attack with five goals and an assist, with Pete Robertson begging four and a pair of assists. Ralph Murphy had two markers with singles going to Mark obb, Ed Keenan, Brian Crowley, John Hogarth and Steve Kashul.

Five different players shared at in the Belleville scoring. Joe Charlebois, Sandy Waterson, Chris Rutledge, Brent Walmsley, and John Geen each had one goal for the locals.

The brawl broke out with only about four minutes left in the game. The match had been a choppy one throughout, with 53 penalties called by referees Darryl Donelly and Joe Weymark in that point.

The original contestants in the fight which incited the outbreak were Oshawa's Glen Goulding and Belleville's Terry Thompson, going at it right in front of the locals' bench. Comments by both sides during the scuffle led to the bench clearing. Some spectators came onto the playing area.

Four major penalties were called as a result of the fight.

The total penalty minutes in the game added up to 155, with the Belleville team drawing 96 of them, including three majors and three two-minute misconducts. Oshawa's total of 65 minutes included four five-minute major penalties.

CTC Comeback Subdues Intell

In Industrial Softball League action Monday night, Canadian Tire scored six runs in the last two innings of their game to defeat The Intelligencer 9-5 and the Post Office and Maud Johnson battled their way to a 12 tie,

John Freund was on the mound for Canadian Tire, fanning eight and walking one.

John Edwards, Reg Pearson and Ron. Culloden toiled for the losers, striking out seven and issuing a pair of walks.

Bruce Clark led the way at the plate for the winners, blasting a home run and a single. Jack McArthur had a triple and a single, Dave Fox a triple, and Wayne Price a double and a single. Ken Price, Larry Oulngshine, John Freund and Andy Prudden each punched a pair of singles and Peter McBride, and Eric Asselstine added one each.

Fred Sickle dropped in three singles to lead The Intell, while Ron Culboden punched a pair. Tony Goncalves had a double. Glynn Reynolds a double and a single and Bill Cooney a single to round out the hitting for the losers.

Norm Lockhart went the distance for Post Office, giving up two runs, two walks allowing just five hits and fanning seven.

For Mead's, Gary Genereaux and Larry Webb combined to strike out one, walk four, allow five hits and two runs.

Tim O'Connell led the way for Mead's with a pair of doubles, Larry Wake had a double and Gary Genereaux and Vern Whalen added singles.

Soup Campbell was the only Post Office hitter to get an extra-base hit, a double. John Boban, Harry Reid, Ron Marriott and Norm Lockhart all singled.

Making Sure

Lynn Lucas, pitcher for Quinte Dryden, glances at third as she rounds the bag and heads for home. Lynn had good reason to watch all the bases and make sure she touched every one since she belted the first home run of the season in Belleville Girl's Softball Association Monday night. Lynn's team lost to Belleville Conductor's 15-5 in the opening game of the intermediate division.

Realtors Shaded By Peterborough

Thirlow representatives in the Eastern Ontario Baseball Association didn't have much luck against Peterborough Realtors in the midget division, Thurlow Keith Rankors were shaded by Peterborough while in tyke, it was Lindsay over the Shack squad 20-5.

The Realtors wasted a strong relief performance by Terry Holgate who took over from starter Bryan Brown in the fourth inning. Holgate blanked Peterborough in that one run over the final six innings.

Brown got off to a rough start and four miscues by his mates didn't help matters.

Al Goody and Bill Peters shared the pitching for the winners, striking out 10 while fashioning a five-hitter.

The winners were unable to do much in the hitting department either. Hold to six safeties, they managed only one for extra bases, a double by Don Rogers.

For the Thurlow squad, Bill Arthurs banged a double while Kevin Solmes, Rodney Parlee, Robert DeJong and Varley Vader each connected for a single.

It was a case of too much Ken Drinkwalter as far as the Thurlow tykes were concerned. The winning pitcher fanned Lindsay with a nine-strikeout, five-hitter and helped his own cause at the plate with a triple and two singles.

Mike Blakely took the loss.

Perfect Five Innings For Shirley Gulliver

Belleville Yardmen Benefit Fund trounced Simpson-Sears 20-0 Monday night behind the perfect pitching of Shirley Gulliver in a Belleville and District Ladies Softball League game.

Gilliver went five innings, fanning nine, issuing no walks and allowing no hits.

She got more than enough help from her teammates at the plate as BYBF came up with a 25 hit attack.

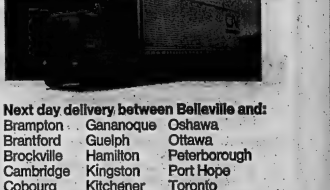
Sheila Smith led the Yardmen attack with two homers and a double. May Reid was next with a home run, a double and a single. Penny Hughes punched out three singles, and Judy Pults Judy Woodley, Gulliver, and Joyce McFarlane each had two singles. Wendy Corkery doubled and Donna Lucas, Judy Rappell, Sue Morton and Donna Preston each singled.

Heather Sinclair took the loss for Simpson-Sears.

The Yardmen weren't quite as fortunate Saturday at the Port Colborne Ladies' Tournament.

In their first encounter, Oshawa got three runs in the first inning off before the Yardmen 3-0.

The Yardmen lost their second game in the seventh inning to Scarborough. Belleville was ahead 3-2 until the seventh when Scarborough scored two runs and won 4-3.



Elliott of Belleville.

Livingston's efforts were not unrewarded as he won the high west to Errol Moses and Lollie Mckdoo who edged Frank Benson and Myrtle Smith of Belleville in the first game.

Entries from Campbellford, Trenton, Kingston and Belleville found the greens a little slow as may be expected early in the season.

The Draw was managed by Frank Morrell assisted by Jack Avery of the local Club.

Billy Returns To an Ovation

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Billy Martin learned Monday night that yes, you can go home again.

Martin, crowd-pleaser in Detroit during his three years as manager of the Tigers, made his first appearance in Detroit as skipper of Texas Rangers Monday night and walked away with a 5-3 victory.

He received an ovation from the Tiger Stadium crowd of 25,- 690 when he took his lineup card to home plate before the game, and was also cheered loudly when he argued a pickoff call in the third inning. But in the eighth, when he went to the mound to make a pitching change, there were a few boos mixed in with the cheers.

Martin said he was pleased by the reaction he received from the Tiger fans.

"I don't know how other managers would feel," Martin said. "But when you come back to the town you managed in and they cheer, you like that. It really made me feel good."

Elsewhere in the American League, Boston Red Sox beat Oakland 9-6, 4-1, New York Yankees trimmed California Angels 7-5 and Minnesota Twins routed Baltimore Orioles 9-1.

After leading the Tigers to the American League East pennant in 1972, Martin was fired by Detroit general manager Jim Campbell last September. Shortly thereafter, he signed a five-year contract to manage the Rangers, a young team which he has spurred into second place in the AL West, just two games behind Oakland.

Martin contended that beating the Tigers meant nothing special to him.

"We've got to catch Oakland, and we've got to win games to do that," he said.

Jim Spencer and Duke Sims drove in two runs apiece for Texas while Jackie Brown, 5-2, and Steve Foucault combined to pitch the Rangers to their eighth victory in their last 11 games.

The Rangers jumped on Joe Coleman, 6-7, for three runs in the first inning and two more in the fourth. Spencer singled to two runs in the first while former Tiger Sims belted a two-run homer in the fourth. The 17 hits by the Rangers was their most in one game this year.

Dwight Evans' three-run homer and Luis Tiant's seven-out pitching carried the Red Sox past the A's 18 4 battle of division leaders.

Evans lofted a fastball from Vida Blue down the right-field line in the fifth inning and it just curled inside the foul pole for the homer, capping the decisive four-run inning.

Tiant pitched his eighth consecutive complete game and retained his record to 8-5 by outdueling Blue.

Lou Piniella drove in the winning run with an eighth-inning double and then scored on an insurance tally in the Yankees' triumph over California.

Elliott Maddox walked and scored on Piniella's double into the left field corner. Bobby Murcer then knocked in Piniella home with a single. Murcer also drove in two runs in the second with a single.

Minnesota scored five runs in the second inning and coasted to victory over the Orioles. Rod Olive laced a two-run single and Bobby Darwin smacked a two-run triple in the inning.

Minnesota starting pitcher Ray Corbin was removed from the game in the first inning after being struck on the pitching hand by a line drive. He was taken to hospital where x-rays revealed a break at the base of the right thumb.

Steve Renko — Sparks Expos

Speaker Robs Phils' Schmidt

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

One of those days someone is going to hit the roof at the Houston Astrodome. Mike Schmidt did Monday night in a manner of speaking.

The Philadelphia Phillies infielder hit a ball to the first inning that cleared the left field home run territory in centre field before it bounced off a speaker hanging from the Astrodome roof.

The ball fell back on the field and Schmidt got only a single. He was angry, though the Phillies won 12-0.

"If I'm one short of winding the National League home run title, I'll think back to this one that I didn't get," said Schmidt.

There's no doubt in my mind that it would have been a home run except for that speaker."

His hit loaded the bases before Bill Robinson's two-run double. A sacrifice fly by Mike Anderson staked Jim Lonborg to an early three-run lead and it was no contest after that.

In other National League games Monday night, Montreal Expos trimmed Cincinnati Reds 3-1, St. Louis Cardinals beat Los Angeles Dodgers 4-2 in 11 innings, and San Diego Padres stopped Pittsburgh Pirates 9-2.

Pitcher Steve Renko tripled home one run and scored another to lead Montreal over Cincinnati in a game called after eight innings because of rain.

Rookie Barry Foote led off the third inning against Jack Billingham, 6-4, with his third homer of the year.

Renko followed with a walk, moved to second on a sacrifice bunt by Ron Hunt and took third on Tim Foli's single. Willie Davis then lofted a shallow drive to centre field that Cesar Geronimo dropped in left hands to make a throw to the plate. Geronimo recovered to get Foli at second as the ex-Expo coast, but Renko scored on the play.

Geronimo hit his first homer of the year in the fifth inning to make it 3-1, but the Expos scored an insurance run in the seventh on a double by Mike Bailey and a two-out triple by Renko, the first triple of his career.

Renko, 4-6, lasted until the eighth inning when he walked Pete Rose, Joe Morgan followed with a long drive that sent Ken Singleton back to the right field fence, but Singleton leaped and caught the ball above the fence, robbing Morgan of a homer.

Chuck Taylor then came on to pitch for the Expos and, after a rain delay of 51 minutes, retired the Reds in the eighth. Dan Isabel play again in the top of the ninth, and the game was finally called.

Joe Torre led off the 11th inning with a home run into the left field pavilion at Dodger Stadium, helping St. Louis beat Los Angeles.

First Draft Choice, Halsall Joins Argos

TORONTO (CP) — Randy Halsall, first draft choice of Toronto Argonauts, has joined the club after a stint with Chicago Fire of the World Football League.

Argos traded Canadian veteran Tony Moro to Hamilton Tiger-Cats to make Halsall their first pick in this year's Canadian college draft.

However, Halsall, a guard who played at Wake Forest in the United States, decided not to play in the Canadian Football League, going instead to the WFL.

The Chicago team had about 150 players in camp and Halsall says Jim Spavital, former head coach of Winnipeg Blue Bombers, apparently was intent on going with veteran offensive linemen and these had been pre-picked.

When Spavital couldn't guarantee Halsall a spot on the club, although he received a signing bonus, he decided to move to the Argos.

McGraw Comes Back

ATLANTA (AP) — Left-handed relief pitcher Tug McGraw, who had been on the disabled list since May 17, was reinstated to the roster Monday by New York Mets. In 10 appearances this season, the controversial star of the Mets' bullpen had an 0-3 record and a 9.00 earned run average. He had suffered a muscle tear below the left shoulder blade.

Slim Pickings for New Teams

MONTREAL (CP)—Washington Capitals and Kansas City Scouts learned Monday night what meagre talent will be available to them in Wednesday's National Hockey League expansion draft.

Meanwhile, Punch Imlach, general manager of Buffalo Sabres, is concerned about the draft that got away from him in Monday's Intra-league draft.

The 18 retained NHL franchises filled their protected lists of 15 skaters and two goaltenders for Wednesday's proceedings which will help stock the Scouts and Capitals for the 1974-75 season.

The Scouts and Capitals will each be permitted to select two goaltenders and 12 skaters and none of the veteran clubs will be able to lose more than three players each.

Montreal Canadiens, Chicago Black Hawks, Boston Bruins and Los Angeles Kings will have the option of being exempt from the goalkeepers' draft through it appears that Montreal, for one, will forego that assumption Monday.

The Canadiens have a surplus of goalkeepers and it is felt Ken Dryden, who has been pick in the goalie draft, will choose Michel Plasse, Montreal's starting netminder this season.

This would enable the Canadiens to fill with one of the players they left unprotected—most likely defenceman John Van Boxmeer.

Van Boxmeer, Claude Larose and Frank Mahovlich were the Canadiens cut adrift. Mahovlich is protected from selection by Toronto Toros of the World Hockey Association.

Kitchener Takes a Pair

WOODSTOCK, Ont. (CP) — Kitchener took both ends of an Ontario Football Conference doubleheader Monday, beating Woodstock 1-0 in the first game, which went extra innings and winning the second 42. No other games were scheduled.

forwards Bobby Rousseau and Bruce MacGregor and defenceman Ron Harris, a hero in the Stanley Cup Playoffs.

But the Scouts and Capitals are not likely to get much out of Wednesday's proceedings as most of the players available are either in the twilight of their careers or minor leaguers.

Imlach attempted to select Wak McKechnie as Buffalo's first choice in the minor league proceedings. McKechnie had been picked up by New York Rangers from California Golden Seals after the Seals had chosen defenceman Jim Nelson from New York.

Imlach's claim was disallowed by NHL president Clarence Campbell but Imlach has decided to appeal Campbell's decision to the board of governors.

"Why should New York be allowed to protect 15 guys," Imlach said.

Due to the expansion draft, this year's intra-league proceedings were conducted on a modified basis. No club could lose more than one player and the Rangers already had lost Nelson.

It is unlikely that McKechnie and the Sabres will be together long. He is reported bound for Boston after he carries Derek Sanderson to Rangers elected to take the latter complete a three-way deal for goalies.

Fergie Says No

MONTREAL (CP) — John Ferguson, former left winger with Montreal Canadiens, said Monday he has asked that his name be deleted from the list of those seeking the vacant coaching position with Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League.

The Bruins, who lost the Stanley Cup final last month to Philadelphia Flyers, have been without a coach since the resignation of Bep Guidolin May 27.

No-Cut, No Trade Contract for Paul

TORONTO (CP) — Paul Henderson ended months of speculation Monday when he announced he had signed to play The 31-year-old veteran of 11 National Hockey League seasons with Detroit Red Wings and Toronto Maple Leafs refused to disclose the financial terms of the contract but admitted: "I'm not making a million dollars."

Henderson said the no-trade no-cut contract also included a clause that stipulated should the Toros move their franchise more than 50 miles from Toronto he would become a free agent.

"Money was secondary in the negotiations," said the Kincardine, Ont.-born left winger. "The main issue is the no-trade contract.

"I'll be well paid," he said. "But there wasn't much difference in the money."

Henderson said the Leafs offered him a two-year no-trade contract but that he was looking for security that would enable him to continue living in the Toronto area.

He said the Toros contract was signed "about April 30" and that he had informed Leafs president Harold Ballard and general manager Jim Gregory of his decision to join the WHA team a week after the NHL season ended.

During the news conference, Toros general manager Buck Houle also announced the signing of Jim Shaw, the American hockey League's outstanding goaltender with Nova Scotia Voyageurs, and George Konetzki, all-American defenceman at Cornell University.

Shaw, 28, of Saskatoon had a 2.28 goals-against mark in 39 games with the Voyageurs, best among regular AHL goalies.

Konetzki, 21, is a Montreal native who played Junior hockey with North York Rangers.

Henderson, hero of a Team Canada '72's victory over the Soviet Union with three series ending game-winning goals, had signed a no-trade contract with the Leafs just prior to the historic 1972 meeting.

Still No Decision Reached

TORONTO (CP) — George Reed, president of the Canadian Football League Players' Association, was expected at league headquarters Monday, but he did not arrive.

Unconfirmed reports said he was on his way to his home in Regina from Chicago where he talked to National Football League player representatives, Bob McKeown of Ottawa Rough Riders said Sunday that Reed had retirement notices of most of the CFL's veteran players who have been playing out their options.

Jake Gaudaur, commissioner of the CFL, at 5 p.m. Monday if certain monetary demands were not met.

But Reed didn't show up at the CFL office and neither were the monetary demands met.

The players want an increase of $7 a day—to $17—for training camps and more bonuses for pre-season and post-season games. They're also looking for a minimum salary of $11,000 a year and better pension benefits.

The clubs have said the demands are excessive and they can't afford them.

By retiring the players could stay away from training camps without violating their contracts, which require them to show up.

McKeown, the Rough Rider player representative said the retirement notices Reed has represent almost every CFL veteran.

To substantiate their claim that they can't afford the players' demands the nine CFL clubs opened their books to auditors. The players' association then asked independent auditors to verify the statements. The report is due Thursday, with players and the league's bargaining committee scheduled to meet Friday.

However, John Agro, representing the players' association, said Monday that the auditors' report probably will not be completed for at least another week.

"We're hoping to have the report by June 13, but the clubs are not committed to a completion date."

Agro predicted veteran players would miss a week's training camp and "much longer than that" if an agreement is not reached.

He said it is doubtful whether players will cease their propose als after seeing the auditor's report.

Noting that pressure from Health Minister Marc Lalonde had forced the World Football League out of Canada and has helped the CFL, Agro said:

"The league may have sold Lalonde a bill of goods, but they're not going to sell the players a bill of goods. We're not going to buckle."

He estimated the proposals of the players, if met, would cost each CFL club an additional $40,000 to $60,000.

MYRE SIGNS PACT

ATLANTA (AP) — Goaltender Phil Myre signed a new contract Friday with Atlanta Flames of the National Hockey League. Myre, who shares goal tending duties with Dan Bouchard, played in 36 games for the Flames last season and had a 3.33 goals-against average.

MONTREAL (CP) — Describing President Nixon's administration as weak and susceptible as a result of Watergate, actress Jane Fonda urged Friday continuation of the campaign against United States involvement in Vietnam.

"Watergate has given us a unique opportunity to end this war. The American government is weak. Its policy [illegible] weak. Now is the time to not only protest the war but to 'fix' it," she told a news conference.

Miss Fonda said President Nixon's handling of the Watergate has made him susceptible to public pressure to end the U.S. role in Vietnam.

"The Kissinger-Nixon policy is based on the premise that the American people will forget Vietnam. Kissinger calls this the policy of the averted gaze," she said, referring to U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

Miss Fonda, who recently returned from a 34-day visit to North Vietnam and areas of South Vietnam controlled by the National Liberation Front (NLF), said Canadians should press their government to end all ties with the South Vietnamese government.

"The more countries that recognize the provisional revolutionary government of South Vietnam, the more pressure is created for the implementation of the Paris peace agreement which says there are two administrations in South Vietnam."

BRIDGEPORT, Calif. (AP) — Scott Newman, son of actor Paul Newman, has been fined $1,500 and placed on two years' probation for kicking a law officer who was transporting him to jail after a Feb. 5 arrest for drunkenness.

The judge who handed down the sentence also outlined a punitive settlement of $1,500 to the officer for injuries he may have suffered.

A charge of public drunkenness and other charges are pending against Newman, 23.

LONDON (Reuter) — The Jackson Five pop group has canceled a planned tour of Britain for fear of a repeat of riotous scenes at a recent David Cassidy concert which resulted in the death of a 14-year-old girl.

Promoter Danny O'Donovan, who had arranged the tour, said the Jacksons are "extremely concerned and disturbed by" the tragic at Cassidy's concert.

SEATTLE (AP) — Someone in the registrar's office got into the spirit of things when William Peter Blatty, author of The Exorcist, was the principal speaker at Seattle University's commencement exercises.

The result was a program brochure distributed among dignitaries and school officials entitled: Seattle University 1974 Commencement Exercises.

All the pages of the program for last Sunday's exercises were blank, except the last one, which handprinted on the back page was the message: "The devil made me do it."

LONDON (Reuter) — As an theatrical audience gave the European premiere of Los Angeles composer William Kraft's new concerto for piano and orchestra a rapturous reception at London's Festival Hall Thursday night.

John Mehta conducted the new Philharmonica Orchestra.

Mona Golabek, making her solo debut in Britain, was at the piano.

The three-movement concerto is largely a vehicle for Miss Golabek who commissioned the composer to write the concerto with money supplied by the Ford Foundation.

MOSCOW (Reuter) — The Soviet Union has denounced as "malicious slander" Western reports that famous Soviet musicians are seeking to leave the country.

The news agency Tass said Friday reports that conductor Gennadi Rozhdestvensky and pianist Svyatoslav Richter intend to leave the country were started by opponents of East-West detente.

Both the musicians are due to leave on long foreign tours in the near future, Tass said.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — Clarence (Hustler) Crabbe, who portrayed Tarzan and Flash Gordon in acting roles, was in fair condition Saturday at St. Vincent's Hospital, hospital officials said Sunday.

Crabbe, 65, was admitted to hospital Friday after becoming ill while on a promotional tour here.

GRENWICH, Conn. (AP) — The creator of the Beetle Bailey comic strip is hoping too pen in July a museum devoted entirely to the art of the cartoon.

The proposal by Mort Walker has first to be approved by the town Planning and Zoning Board of Appeals June 18 for its approval.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (Reuter) — Irish-born actor Richard Harris, 43, and actress-model Ann Turkel, 27, were married Friday in a civil ceremony.

Harris and his bride met while filming Ninety Nine and Forty Five One Hundred Per Cent Dead in which he portrays a killer for a crime syndicate.

Miss Turkel played opposite him in the role of a school teacher.

It is his second marriage and her first.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Wednesday, June 12

Aries (March 21-April 19) You will want to withdraw a generous gesture you made after you have given the matter second thoughts.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) It looks like you will have to hold up the heavy end in a situation you are involved in with a friend. It is because conditions weren't spelled out properly.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) In your dealings today try not to use self-glorifying statements to call attention to yourself. They won't produce the effect you desire.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) A plan of some importance to you will be temporarily blocked by a condition you have no control over. Don't become upset.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) You may have to settle for less than you expected in something you have been hoping for. The values you anticipated are a bit too high.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your decisions will be swayed today by a strong personality. He insists upon having his way. However, he's not always right.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Your wish of accomplishing something will conflict with the boss's way. It is best that you comply as he will not modify his orders.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You will be lucky with things as long as they are based on accuracy. Situations still in the idea stage are another matter.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) To maintain peace on the home front be sure to let your mate be all of today's plant. Springing a surprise spells problems.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Before you begin projects, be certain you think them through thoroughly else once you are involved you may wish you hadn't started.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You will tend to be too extravagant in material affairs. If you follow this course it will soon lighten your purse.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) Your self-interests are best served today if you are not overly impulsive. You will need to retrace some steps if you jump the starting blocks too soon.

Midcycle Pain Not Uncommon

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 25. Why would I get a pain on the left side of the lower abdomen midway in the menstrual cycle? There is no bleeding, but sometimes I have a bad pain in this part until the period begins.

I had a checkup several months ago and the doctor said something about cysts on the ovary. Can this be expected to persist? — Mrs. S. G.

One possible explanation—and not an uncommon one—of midcycle pain is "mittelschmerz," which is due to a leaking of blood when an ovum is being released from the ovary. That is, when the ovum is released—approximately mid-cycle.

Some women experience this; others don't. When it does happen, the discomfort usually lasts only a few days and ordinary pain medication is all that is necessary.

When the discomfort persists over a longer period, then it would be wise to look for some other condition. The diagnosing of endometriosis is one possibility that comes to mind. So I would suggest that periodic pelvic examinations are in order until you pin down the cause.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I would like to know how fattening an egg is. I would much appreciate it if you would tell me how many calories. I chew it often and am hoping it is not too fattening.—M. L.

The sugar in a stick of gum represents a few calories, but you can also buy sugarless gum, in which case you don't get about even those few calories. The gum itself is not digested and represents no calories even if you swallow it. In other words, worrying about chewing gum is a waste of time. At a trivially small addition to the diet items that make you take on weight.

If have strong reservations about using a drug like that in a child since I've read many contradictory statements about it. The whole idea is repugnant to me but I feel I have to cooperate with the school as he has passed somewhat of a problem. Since he isn't the easiest child to manage. I do understand their position. He isn't a drug a ruther drastic measure to take?—J.M.J.

Maybe I can make you feel better about it.

I agree that blindly giving Ritalin to any child who is having difficulty in school does not make sense. There are probably other than hyperactivity which aren't going to be helped by it.

But when a child is hyperactive—and you have a psychiatrist's diagnosis—Ritalin is one of several drugs which have proved to be extremely helpful. Sometimes one drug is effective, sometimes another, and it is very good sense to use whichever one does the job. I must say that I have known young sters who have benefitted greatly over a period of years from treatment accordi n Ritalin.

I say "measured amounts" because that drug is one of a number of useful ones which until the past few years, have been abused by people who take excessive amounts of them. Sometimes the drug abusers me are vastly larger than the amount needed by hyperactive youngsters.

So I offer you two thoughts: first, why not you give up being so fearful, or at least put your reservations in aoeyance. Second, see whether the progress of medication doesn't bring some good results?

Second, I can readily understand your wishing to "co-operate with the school"—because your son gives them problems—but the decision about medication is one which is best made by the parents. If they feel strongly against it, it is entirely probable that, as his nervous system stabilizes, he will get along well on gradually diminished doses. And, of course, eventually not need it any more.

Win at Bridge

Poor play insures slam set

By Oswald and James Jacoby

Inability to see the forest because of all the trees is a common fault of many bridge players.

North wanted to know why South made such a light vulnerable opening bid. South wanted to know why North hadn't doubled four clubs and taken a sure profit. Neither one noticed that South had a cinch way to bid game.

West opened the ace of clubs and continued with the queen. The king was played from dummy. East ruffed and led back a heart whereupon South had to lose a finesse in that suit and one diamonds, to wind up one trick short.

All South had to do was set to play dummy's lead of clubs when he did. If East ruffed the second club to lead a heart South would win; draw trumps and discard his queen of hearts on the low club king.

If East didn't ruff, West's best play would be to lead a third club. East would ruff; South would overruff and draw trumps. Then he would lose the diamond finesse but would not have to take a heart finesse because dummy's fourth diamond would be a parking place for the heart queen.

CARD Service 40

The bidding has been:

West	North	East	South
1 ♦	Double	Pass	?

You, South, hold:
♠ 5 4 ♥ 3 7 6 5 2 ♦ A Q 9 7 ♣ K 8 3
What do you do now?

A—Bid three hearts. Your distribution and seven high-card points call for a strong hand, bordering on a game-forcing one. Besides, this particular jump is not an invitation to game.

TODAY'S QUESTION

West bids three spades. North and East pass. What do you do now?

IN MEMORIAM

IRWIN — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Ernest Irwin, who passed away June 11, 1973.
Time may make the wound less painful
But it cannot fill the hearts
Where memories of you are kept
With daily thoughts of you.
And the smile may hide the tear
But beneath keep the secret still over-
Memories are a keepsake
Treasured memories of you.
Sadly missed and remembered by wife and Dad.

ARMOUR — In loving memory of a dear husband and father Fred who passed away 3 years today, June 11, 1971.
Dear husband and always remembered,
Dear father, well remembered,
Loved and missed by all.
Sadly missed by wife Linda, daughters Doris, Gwen and Patty.

FOLEY — In loving memory of a dear husband and father who passed away four years ago, June 11, 1970.
Those we love don't go away,
They walk beside us every day,
Unseen, unheard, but always near,
Still loved, still missed and very dear.
Sadly missed by wife Linda, daughters Doris, Gwen and Patty.

CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to thank all our friends, relatives and neighbors for their kindness and support while we were in hospital and since our return home. Special thanks to Dr. Ross and Dr. Jo Evans, Dr. Hayward and the nurses in Emergency and Ward 2 for their care, we received. — Norris and Jean Trevenen.

LETS TALK MONEY!

Sooner or later in buying a home you are faced with hard cash. And if summer, Lucy start there. If the mortgage you need is a conventional one, we're pretty well up to date. Our mortgage commitments is at what lenders are charging these days. But if you're looking for a second mortgage, that's where we come in. We're specialists in second mortgages, and we can usually arrange them quickly and at a fair rate. Suppose you've found a half-fair bungalow priced at $30,000. You've got $6,000 saved, and a first mortgage for $18,000 is available at 9%. But you need $6,000 more to swing the deal. Well, we can arrange that second mortgage for you at 12% interest, for five years, and amortized over ten years. Sounds good, doesn't it? Then come to see us. We're easy to find.

Living Cost Hike Worst Since '51

OTTAWA (CP) — A three-per-cent jump in May food prices contributed to the highest one-month gain in the consumer prices index in 23 years, Statistics Canada reported today.

The May increase of 1.7 per cent in the consumer price index was the largest monthly gain since the Korean War period, when the index rose at the same rate in March 1951.

The May all-items index was 11.9 per cent higher than its level of the previous May and the food index was up 18.2 per cent during the 12-month period.

About half the May increase in the consumer price index was due to higher food costs and about one-quarter due to high prices for petroleum products.

The Statistics Canada report said higher prices for fresh produce accounted for about 40 per cent of the gain in the food index. Among product price increases in May were meats, up 40 per cent; tomatoes, 30 per cent; potatoes, 18 per cent; and lettuce 15 per cent.

The index for food consumed at home had the largest gain in May, up 3.3 per cent, while the index for restaurant meals rose 1.5 per cent. Since the previous May the index for food eaten at home has gone up 18.1 per cent and the restaurant index 19 per cent.

During the 12-month period the price level for fresh vegetables was up 16.4 per cent and for fresh fruit 8.2 per cent.

The beef index gained 3.9 per cent in May to a level 17 per cent above a year earlier.

Pork prices, however, were down 1.5 per cent in May and almost 26 per cent less than the peak level reached in September, 1973.

Food product indexes showing declines included poultry, 1.8 per cent and eggs, 1.1 per cent. Flour and bread price levels were about steady.

The clothing index was up seven-tenths of one per cent during the month as there were increases in most product groups.

Tap Stories Don't Jibe

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressman says he has seen proof that State Secretary Henry Kissinger, despite his sworn denial, ordered national security wiretaps.

Representative Joshua Eilberg (Dem. Pa.), a member of the House of Representatives judiciary committee, said Tuesday: "Materials have been supplied to us which constitute positive proof that Kissinger did institute those taps."

The Senate foreign relations committee decided earlier Tuesday to take another look at Kissinger's testimony concerning wiretaps last September during his confirmation hearings.

Kissinger, at a news conference at Salzburg, Austria, Thursday, to begin if controversy over his role in the wiretapping is not cleared up. He asked for the committee's review and denied that he lied to the committee.

At issue is the extent of Kissinger's involvement in the wiretapping of government officials and four journalists between May, 1969, and February, 1971.

Last September Kissinger testified that he never recommended the wiretapping, but supplied names of persons who had access to sensitive documents that were leaked to the news media.

However, recent press reports have described a larger Kissinger role in the wiretapping. The New York Times says an FBI report says that either Kissinger or his former deputy ordered some of the wiretaps.

Eilberg, in a telephone interview, told The Associated Press: "I can say categorically there is a direct conflict between what we have and what he said to the foreign relations committee."

In a television interview Tuesday, Eilberg was asked, by reporter Martin Agronsky whether he was saying that Kissinger did not tell the truth. Eilberg replied: "I'm saying that."

However, he told The AP: "There's a clear conflict as it appears to me. I wouldn't say he lied."

He said the information he has seen shows that Kissinger received more than 30 logs of wiretapped conversations.

"It was quite clear that he initiated those wiretaps," Eilberg said.

News Briefs

CAIRO (AP) — President Nixon arrived in Cairo today under extremely tight security to a warm welcome for the first visit to Egypt by a United States chief executive in more than 20 years. Nixon, Mrs. Nixon and State Secretary Henry Kissinger were received by Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and his wife.

Gold Price Slips

LONDON (AP) — The price of gold fell more than $4 an ounce in London today in the wake of a report that industrial countries may soon sell their holding of the metal on the free market. The price fell an $13.30 an ounce today down $127.70.

Hostages on Trial

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Ethiopian guerrillas holding four Americans and two Canadians are planning to put three of their hostages on trial, informed sources in the Ethiopian capital, Addis Ababa, said today. The three, all oil prospectors, will be charged with "exploiting the natural resources" of Ethiopia's northern Eritrea province, said the sources, reached from here by telephone. One of those to be tried is a Canadian.

Extra Month for Rose

MONTREAL (CP) — Jacques Rose, convicted last July 17 as an accessory after the fact in the kidnapping of Labor Minister Pierre Laporte, was sentenced Tuesday to an extra month in prison after being found guilty of a bail violation charge. Judge D. Reilly Watson of sessions court added the one-month sentence to the eight years Rose is currently serving for the kidnapping.

Quebec Conflict Policy

Mrs. Bourassa May Sell

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Robert Bourassa announced new conflict-of-interest rules for his cabinet Tuesday that could force his wife and brother-in-law to sell their shares in a business forms firm that has received more than $1 million in government contracts since 1970.

The directives, tabled at a committee hearing Tuesday night, will require all cabinet ministers to provide a public list of their land and financial holdings and those of their spouse and minor children, every April.

They also forbid private companies in which ministers or their immediate families hold shares from selling to the government or receiving government loans or subsidies and forbid ministers from engaging in real estate speculation.

With the combined disclosure and ban on business, Bourassa said, ministers will be in no more conflict-of-interest rules or legislation in Canada, Mr. Bourassa said.

An immediate effect of the directives will be that Treasury Minister Claude Simard, the premier's brother-in-law, will have to sell his shares in Paragon Business Forms, a company controlled by a Montreal family holding company, if it is to continue receiving government contracts.

Mrs. Bourassa, the premier's wife, her brother Claude and two other members of their family, hold equal shares in a holding company which controls Paragon.

The premier said under Quebec law he could not force his wife to sell her shares "as if she says no, I'll have to order that no more contracts be granted."

As for his brother-in-law, the premier said he could not force his wife to sell her shares "as if she says no, I'll have to order that no more contracts be granted."

As for his brother-in-law, the directives set no time limits to get rid of his shares because "we need to leave the minister enough time to sell his shares at a reasonable price."

The premier said the directives were only a first step in conflict-of-interest policy that could eventually cover, through legislation, members of the national assembly and senior civil servants.

Although no time limit except "at least April" is set for ministers to conform to the directives, in future ministers who become shareholders through marriage, gifts or inheritances in private firms capable of dealing with the government will have 13 months to conform to the directives.

The rules forbid private firms in which cabinet or their immediate families hold shares from dealing with government departments, but such firms could deal with government agencies—such as Hydro-Quebec—so long as the minister revealed five per cent or less of the company or the contract was worth less than five per cent of the company's annual sales the year before.

Denturists Meet Miller

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Health Minister Frank Miller said Tuesday he will meet with the Denturist Society of Ontario Sunday to discuss the implications of the provincial government's new regulations for denturists.

He said in an interview that his decision was the result of talks with Society President Benjamin Sweet, who told him that several denturists feared the new regulations contained in Bill 70.

The new legislation would allow denturists who pass qualifying examinations in July and August to sell full dentures directly to the public, but require them to refer partial dentures under the supervision of a dentist.

Knights of Columbus Drop Circus Promotion

TORONTO (CP) — The Knights of Columbus are dropping their annual circus promotion in order to keep clear of professional fund-raising firms.

The Knights are the second service club within weeks to drop a circus promotion for the same reason. Earlier, the Kinsmen Club dropped the Garden Brothers circus.

Wilfred Judge Grand Knight for the Toronto council of the Knights of Columbus, said the council netted $6,100 for its charities out of gross ticket sales of $37,000 by the Hannaford Circus held last month in the North York arena.

A provincial council of Knights of Columbus councils in Ottawa later decided that the member groups could no longer delegate their fund-raising to professional promoters.

Stanfield Claims PM Two-faced on Freezes

By PETER LLOYD
The CANADIAN PRESS

Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield charged Tuesday that Prime Minister Trudeau is two-faced on income and price controls while Mr. Trudeau indicated he will not get bogged down in criticism over the cost of living.

In the major campaign offensive of the day, Mr. Stanfield said about 1,000 people in Guelph, Ont., the prime minister is "playing the worst kind of politics" with the inflation issue.

He accused Mr. Trudeau of contradicting his own controversy plans for controls to fight inflation by criticizing Conservative house-and-price control proposals.

The prime minister had announced his Liberal government's contingency plan consisted of such controls but now he "is stumping the country creating horror stories about his own contingency plan."

"He is on both sides of the question . . . and he is no more credible now than he was before. . . ."

As for Mr. Trudeau's statement that leadership is the main issue in the campaign for the July 8 election, "that's like an arsonist saying that fire prevention is the issue," Mr. Stanfield said.

Earlier, he visited a London, Ont., hospital and said a Conservative government would beef up aid to medical research.

Mr. Stanfield's economic controls proposals came in for harsh criticism from Quebec Labor Minister Jean Cournoyer who said they are unconstitutional and would be contested by Quebec on that basis if implemented.

Meanwhile, Mr. Trudeau moved by plane through northern Quebec, saying in Val d'Or that the May cost-of-living figures released today might not be low enough to satisfy everyone.

However, he indicated that criticism of the government over living costs will not preoccupy him. The need for improved transportation systems will be a major Liberal campaign topic during the next few days, he told a rally of about 400 persons.

Minimum Boosted To $2.25

TORONTO (CP) — An increase of 25 cents an hour in the general minimum wage to $2.25 from $2, effective Oct. 1, was announced Tuesday by Labor Minister John MacBeth.

The minimum for construction workers will rise to $2.50 from $2.35 and for students under 18 to $1.90 from $1.85.

Students who qualify for the minimum student rate are those who work 28 hours a week, or during vacations, during elementary-secondary school holiday. Students who work more than 28 hours a week would qualify for the $2.25 minimum as they would be considered members of the regular work force.

Minimum wage rate laws do not apply in several areas, including the fishing and agricultural industries, professional workers and taxi drivers.

Leger Gains Ground

SHERBROOKE, Que. (CP) — Governor-General Jules Leger spoke to members of his family Tuesday, and an aide said later that the 81-year-old head of state had made "remarkable progress" in the last 24 hours.

Roger Nantel said he visited the Governor-General and noticed "remarkable progress—although I'm not a doctor."

He said Mr. Leger was seated on a couch when he saw him and was able to feed himself.

Mr. Nantel said that "it is too difficult and too early" for doctors to determine whether Mr. Leger will recover completely from a stroke suffered Saturday, but he described him as being "in fighting spirit."

"As it frequently happens in this sort of case, there is some speech difficulty but there has been progress with this difficulty in regard to the Governor-General."

Aides have indicated he suffered some paralysis of his left hand.

Mr. Nantel said Mr. Leger spoke to his wife and to his daughter, Mme. Hien Fre-chette of Trois-Rivieres, Que.

Earlier in the day Mme. Leger smiled at a photographer as she was leaving the medical centre at the University of Sherbrooke, following a visit with her husband.

She permitted the photographer to take her picture but admonished that it should wait "until I've had my hair done."

She then entered her limousine and said something to the chauffeur which prompted more smiles.

The Governor-General fell ill Saturday night at a dinner following the University of Sherbrooke convocation at which he and his brother Paul-Emile Cardinal Leger were awarded honorary degrees.

Moving Day

Senior administrators with Hastings county board of education moved Tuesday from 308 Bridge St. East to the new education centre in the former Queen Alexandra School. When the media centre moves from Trenton, all departments of board management will be under one roof. Eric Runacres, right, director of education, settles in with an assist from Dale Denyes, manager of staff services. By converting the school, the board got 44,000 square feet of space at $14 a square foot. Having all operations under one roof will save $30,000 a year previously spent on operating and maintaining five separate administration buildings.

Rescue Boat Kept Busy

Members of the LaSalle Ambulance rescue squad had a busy day out on the Bay of Quinte yesterday as high winds beat the waters and at one point forced four sea tows to ground their boat on Cow Island after they had lost their rudder.

Around 8 p.m. yesterday, the Ontario Provincial Police in Picton were informed that the four cadets from RCSCC Quinte were stranded on the island.

The cadets, who had been out sailing, had lost their rudder and, after posting ashore on Cow Island, had called out for help.

A man who had been working on the roof of his home in the Massassaga Road area heard the boys' cries for help and called the OPP, who dispatched the LaSalle rescue boat to help the boys.

The four cadets were taken aboard the rescue boat and their boat was towed into Belleville harbor.

In addition to rescuing the stranded sailors, the LaSalle rescue team answered a total of seven calls for assistance yesterday.

In three cases boats had broken loose from their moorings in Belleville harbor; two boats had pulled loose and ran ashore; one sailboat had lost a sail in the 37-mile-an-hour winds and one canoe was found drifting in the Bay.

Condominium Land for Sale

Sharply increased construction costs during the past year, together with higher interest rates, are causing principals of Lamplighter Realty to reconsider their proposal to erect a nine-story, 72 - unit condominium apartment building in the city's waterfront.

A building permit for $1,666,000 was taken out at city hall in March of this year and plans were to commence construction, but increased costs have forced a second look.

Jack Sills one of the Lamplighter principals said today that the four-acre South Front Street property had been put up for sale.

Hopefully the waterfront property across from the south end of Victoria Park will be sold to a developer who will proceed with the same type of structure as planned by Lamplighter.

"We feel that the building we planned would be the closest form of building for that area," said Mr. Sills.

Plans for the nine-storey structure were completed about a year ago at which time it was estimated construction costs would be between $1.8 and $2 million dollars.

However, there was delay in getting the necessary rezoning approval from the Ontario Municipal Board and in the meantime construction and mortgage interests costs, have risen dramatically.

"We felt it wise to allow for a cooling off period to give us time for a little more research," said Mr. Sills.

If the property is not sold and mortgage money becomes available at better than present rates, Mr. Sills suggested his firm could still go ahead with construction

$4,000 for Television Project

OFY Grant for Students

PICTON — A $4,000 Opportunities for Youth grant will be used to fund Project SVAP (Student Video Action Project) involving students of Prince Edward County students.

Students participating in the projects which will give community members an opportunity to comment on television programming are Rick Nelson, Bob Barley, Debbie Greer and Bill Madden, graduates of grade 11. Also involved in the program are Susan McKenzie, who will graduate from Prince Edward Collegiate Institute this year, and Jim Montogomery, a post-secondary school student.

The students plan to produce several hour-long specials in addition to one-half hour program per week. Two nights a week a workshop will be run on use of audio-visual and television equipment for community groups.

Project SVAP now is researching subject matter that interests local residents as the basis for television programs. Written suggestions are invited and can be submitted to Box 606, Picton. The students will open an office here next week and concerned viewers then can call in their suggestions.

Canvas City: Servicemen Raise Tents at CFB

Tent City Sprouting For Cadets at CFB

TRENTON — Canadian Armed Forces Base Trenton this week began gearing up for more than 500 air cadets expected to arrive at the end of the month.

Major chore underway presently is the construction of Tent City, annual home away from home for two-to-six weeks periods for cadets.

Work crews have been busy all week preparing the tents and pads, supplied and maintained by the base.

In all, 65 tents will accommodate the cadets, arriving from all parts of the province for summer training.

Once completed will be a self-contained community within the base, offering everything from sleeping quarters to the Padre's Pad, a drop-in centre and recreation hall under canvas.

Young cadets on their first trip to the base will spend about two weeks there, while older boys taking specialized training will have stays lasting up to six weeks, total annual operating time of the camp.

All facets of cadet work, sports and recreation, sailing, flying and orienteering will be among the programs. A special program is also scheduled for bandsmen.

A small group of cadets from Lehr, Germany, will be the first to arrive sometime in the last weeks of June. They will be mixed with Ontario cadets hired on for the summer as camp staff.

These 65 cadets will take a two-week crash course in "human management techniques," developing the necessary skills to handle the cadets.

CFB Trenton is one of three armed forces bases in Ontario which provide facilities for summer camps.

Posterity To Honor Female Foe of Liquor

PICTON — A spirited attacker of the evils of "demon rum", Letitia Youmans will be added here posthumously on June 18.

An historical plaque will be erected near her grave at Glenwood Cemetery to mark the Centennial of the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

A pioneer of the White Ribbon Movement in Canada, Mrs. Youmans was a organizer and one of the first promoters of the WCTU in Ontario. Formerly Letha Creighton, she was born near Cobourg and at the age of 33, married and moved to Picton.

She arrived here in October, 1840, and joined the staff of the Picton Ladies' Academy. Later, the young Mrs. Youmans decided that liquor traffic represented" the gigantic crime of crimes" and began a crusade against demon rum.

Today only one chapter of the WCTU remains active in Prince Edward — in the township of South Marysburgh. In earlier days there were active organizations in Cherry Valley, Wellington and Picton.

Picton's strong connections with the organization are detailed in Mrs. Youmans's autobiography "Campaign Echoes" published by William Briggs of Toronto in 1893.

Agreement Questioned

MARMORA—Is the present agreement between the Village of Marmora and the Marmora Agricultural Society unfair to the Village?

At least one councillor feels so. In his report arena and parks committee chairman Leo Provost Jr. said the rink committee to date has been unable to find any other solution than to ruy plywood to place over the arena's refrigeration pipes to accommodate Marmora Agricultural Society's fiddle contest and the Labor Day fall fair.

The alternative to a temporary floor would be to lift all the pipes. This could be expensive for the village if the pipes were damaged.

Mr. Provost said he felt the agreement between the village and the society should be re-examined in light of this additional expense.

Consider Ice Violence

MARMORA — Marmora Council has been asked to endorse a resolution from Peel Region asking Ontario Hockey Association for action against violence on and off the ice at hockey arenas. The resolution was prompted by the death of a 17-year-old Mississauga youth following a midget Bramalea-Hamilton game.

As a referee at many hockey games, clerk-treasurer William Shannon said he has noticed a growing lack of respect for authority. He said he felt that parents are too involved with teams. Mr. Shannon said he felt hockey was going to ruin itself.

At the suggestion of Councillor Bert Grey the resolution was turned over to the local minor hockey association for consideration. Council will act on its recommendation.

Honor School Staffers

PICTON — The Prince Edward County board of education has saluted seven teachers and a bus custodian.

Guests of honor at a retirement dinner were Picton mayor James Bird, Queen Elizabeth public school; Mrs. Ida Brumwell, Massassaga public school; Miss Ethel Caughey, North Marysburgh Centennial school; Mrs. Bernice Crawford, Pinecrest Memorial school; Mrs. Florence Kerr, Pinecrest school; Mrs. Kathleen Trumble, Athol Central school; Mrs. Ruth Ketchabaw, Sophiasburgh Central School and William Reeks, head custodian at North Marysburgh Central School. Mrs. Ketchapaw was unable to attend the dinner held at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute.

The teachers were presented with retirement pins and those employed by the board for 25 years or more received silver trays.

Representatives of the board of education attending the dinner included chairman Mrs. Ruth Hart, vice-chairman Douglas Caley, director of education John McNeil and business administrator Ernest Shortt.

Drivers Hurt

PICTON — Two motorists were treated for cuts and bruises at Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital Tuesday night following a two-car collision on County Road 4 near here.

Injured were drivers of the vehicles Le-Roy Cole, 23, of 362 Main Street, and Elmo both Lalonde, 30, of 44 Highland Ave., Belleville.

Damage to the Cole car was reported at $1,500 and damage to the Lalonde vehicle was estimated at $2,000.

Cottages Burgled

TWEED (Special) — Three Oshawa area youths, each charged on eight counts of breaking, entering and theft from cottages on the Moira River south of Shoco Lake, pleaded guilty in Madoc court Tuesday.

Charged with entering the cottages were David Alexander Bovay, 17; Terry Allen Aylward, 18 and David William Bacon, 18. The youths were released to await sentencing June 25 by Judge R. C. Jackson.

Evidence was that the youths entered the cottages on May 22 and stole quantities of alcohol, some of which was recovered.

Deloro's Taxes Up

Village council has approved a budget giving ratepayers of this village a slight mill-rate rise.

Overall increase amounted to 14.00 mills on public residential and farm assessment; 7.94 mills on separate residential and farm assessment; 19.86 mills on public commercial and business assessment.

The councillors considered it a good budget. Ratepayers have had small increases in property taxes during the past few years, when comparing mill levies to other municipalities.

Government grants, especially increased provincial unconditional grants have helped largely to keep the general levy within the lower percentage rise as reformed by the Ministry.

The village has a fire protection agreement with Marmora village and Marmora Lake Township. Street lighting, animal control, conservation, weed and pest control are among other protections.

Although Main Street is maintained by Hastings County, there are still private roads and lanes to be looked after as well as sidewalks to be kept in condition.

The corporation maintains a waste site, has garbage collection once weekly, and the majority of residents have serviced municipal water and sewage facilities.

The New Community Hall will soon be available for use and the public library has been operating since December in the basement of the new hall.

Valued Growth

Building permits to the value of $909,220 for Marmora—Lake Townships were issued last month by Hastings Building Inspector George Cases. Some 49 permits being issued for Marmora township and 5 for Lake Township.

Foster Bailey and sales machine

Pedals to Peddle

Future of Arena Boosted by Biker

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

WELLINGTON — Foster Bailey, has a standing date with Miss May this summer every Saturday at Gleneco.

One of the strongest supporter of the Wellington arena building fund, Mr. Bailey peddles approximately 18 miles from the village to the ferry landing each weekend to sell draw tickets.

His steady, Miss May is a 1941 model bicycle, has more than 1,380 miles on her odometer, but the interests of draw ticket sales for the arena fund.

Mr. Bailey began selling tickets last January, shortly after Wellington arena was destroyed by fire. He began by visiting potential buyers in his home community, then branched out to canvass the Napanee area. He rode frequently with a milk truck driver to Napanee, pushing sales away from home.

When winter weather gave way to spring, Foster Bailey began to peddle Miss May through Ameliasburgh, Rossmills, Cherry Valley and other areas of Prince Edward County.

To date he has sold 55 books of tickets or approximately 550 chances on the grand prize — a 1974 sports coupe. Second prize is a 19-inch portable color television.

Construction began Monday on the new Wellington District Arena and Foster Bailey is eager to sell as many tickets as possible before the arena building fund draw on August 5.

Record number of miles in one day from Miss May on the ticket-selling circuit is 70, says Mr. Bailey. He says that on a recent trip to Gleneco he peddled about 40 miles in one outing.

Arena building fund members consider Foster one of their biggest boosters. They invited him to be among the first to view a scale model of the new arena. The model will go on display in Lavender's furniture store on Wellington's Main Street this week.

Parties Enfold Plans To Ease Home Ownership Costs

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Families want decent housing, more than almost anything else in life. But inflation is getting that ideal further and further beyond the reach of many Canadian families.

Politicians, however inept they may be in economic affairs, all recognize this basic fact. All of the front-running parties now have inserted a housing plank in their campaign platforms.

Too bad that they had to leave their policy announcements until the midst of an election campaign. Overblown speeches and highly partisan rhetoric don't contribute much to the study needed to alleviate such a basic and widespread human problem.

But that's the nature of the political beast—and if the current debate should ever lead to a way to make better housing accessible to more Canadians, then let's hear more of it.

Here are the parties' proposals:

—The New Democrats would try to make residential mortgage loans cheaper by limiting the interest rate to six per cent—roughly half the rate currently charged by major financial institutions.

Critics say that no lender would—or should—lend money for so much less than its own cost of borrowing that money. And if institutional lenders were subsidized by government so that they could lend at six per cent, the net result would be a handout from all Canadians to those who borrow—and the loss of their own money that they put up, the bigger the handout they would receive.

—The Conservatives would allow home-owners to deduct from their taxable income any interest in excess of eight per cent on a first mortgage on their principal residences, up to $1,000 a year.

They would also try to reduce housing costs by abolishing the 11 per cent federal sales tax on building materials, and they would assist the provinces in financing the purchase of raw land for residential purposes.

Opponents say that the eight per cent cutoff is an illogical guideline; if mortgage interest ought to be tax-deductible, then go all the way) and that such legislation would be discriminatorily charged by major financial institutions.

Critics say that no lender would—or should—lend money for so much less than its own cost of borrowing that money. And if institutional lenders were subsidized by government so that they could lend at six per cent, the net result would be a handout from all Canadians to those who borrow—and the loss of their own money that they put up, the bigger the handout they would receive.

—The Liberals would allow a tax credit of 25 per cent—up to a maximum of $1,000 a year—on the interest paid on mortgages for new homes. The credit would be available for the first three years of ownership.

—The Creditistes would allow a tax credit of 50 per cent—up to a maximum of $1,000 a year—on the interest paid on mortgages for new homes. The credit would be available for the first three years of ownership.

—The Progressive Conservatives would allow a tax credit of 50 per cent—up to a maximum of $1,000 a year—on the interest paid on mortgages for new homes. The credit would be available for the first three years of ownership.

—The Social Credit Party would allow a tax credit of 50 per cent—up to a maximum of $1,000 a year—on the interest paid on mortgages for new homes. The credit would be available for the first three years of ownership.

—The Union Party would allow a tax credit of 50 per cent—up to a maximum of $1,000 a year—on the interest paid on mortgages for new homes. The credit would be available for the first three years of ownership.

—The Green Party would allow a tax credit of 50 per cent—up to a maximum of $1,000 a year—on the interest paid on mortgages for new homes. The credit would be available for the first three years of ownership.

—The Reform Party would allow a tax credit of 50 per cent—up to a maximum of $1,000 a year—on the interest paid on mortgages for new homes. The credit would be available for the first three years of ownership.

—The Independent Party would allow a tax credit of 50 per cent—up to a maximum of $1,000 a year—on the interest paid on mortgages for new homes. The credit would be available for the first three years of ownership.

—The Libertarian Party would allow a tax credit of 50 per cent—up to a maximum of $1,000 a year—on the interest paid on mortgages for new homes. The credit would be available for the first three years of ownership.

—The Communist Party would allow a tax credit of 50 per cent—up to a maximum of $1,000 a year—on the interest paid on mortgages for new homes. The credit would be available for the first three years of ownership.

—The Socialist Party would allow a tax credit of 50 per cent—up to a maximum of $1,000 a year—on the interest paid on mortgages for new homes. The credit would be available for the first three years of ownership.

—The Anarchist Party would allow a tax credit of 50 per cent—up to a maximum of $1,000 a year—on the interest paid on mortgages for new homes. The credit would be available for the first three years of ownership.

—The Monarchist Party would allow a tax credit of 50 per cent—up to a maximum of $1,000 a year—on the interest paid on mortgages for new homes. The credit would be available for the first three years of ownership.

—The Republican Party would allow a tax credit of 50 per cent—up to a maximum of $1,000 a year—on the interest paid on mortgages for new homes. The credit would be available for the first three years of ownership.

—The Democratic Party would allow a tax credit of 50 per cent—up to a maximum of $1,000 a year—on the interest paid on mortgages for new homes. The credit would be available for the first three years of ownership.

—The Whig Party would allow a tax credit of 50 per cent—up to a maximum of $1,000 a year—on the interest paid on mortgages for new homes. The credit would be available for the first three years of ownership.

—The Federalist Party would allow a tax credit of 50 per cent—up to a maximum of $1,000 a year—on the interest paid on mortgages for new homes. The credit would be available for the first three years of ownership.

—The Anti-Federalist Party would allow a tax credit of 50 per cent—up to a maximum of $1,000 a year—on the interest paid on mortgages for new homes. The credit would be available for the first three years of ownership.

—The Nationalist Party would allow a tax credit of 50 per cent—up to a maximum of $1,000 a year—on the interest paid on mortgages for new homes. The credit would be available for the first three years of ownership.

—The Internationalist Party would allow a tax credit of 50 per cent—up to a maximum of $1,000 a year—on the interest paid on mortgages for new homes. The credit would be available for the first three years of ownership.

—The Universalist Party would allow a tax credit of 50 per cent—up to a maximum of $1,000 a year—on the interest paid on mortgages for new homes. The credit would be available for the first three years of ownership.

—The Particularist Party would allow a tax credit of 50 per cent—up to a maximum of $1,000 a year—on the interest paid on mortgages for new homes. The credit would be available for the first three years of ownership.

—The Localist Party would allow a tax credit of 50 per cent—up to a maximum of $1,000 a year—on the interest paid on mortgages for new homes. The credit would be available for the first three years of ownership.

Chiefs Have Day in Court

TORONTO (CP) — A three-July, Mr. Justice John Osler of man Ontario Court of Appeal the Ontario Supreme Court begins hearings Tuesday into a ruled in favor of the historic case which has thrown wide Council of Hereditary Chiefs to open the issue of Indian rights rightful controllers of the re in Canada.

Mr. Justice W. F. Schroeder serve instead of the elected Six Nations council imposed by the federal government in 1924.

heads the tribunal hearing the His judgment was based on appeal by the elected council precedent established in official for control of the Six Nation Indian Reserve near Brantford. land dealings between the Indians and colonial governors, In a 34-page judgment last Sir Frederick Haldimand and John Graves Simcoe in the late 1700s.

Mr. Justice Osler said those documents showed that the 64,000-acre territory of the Six Nations is not a reserve but land given outright to the Indians.

He further said the Indian Act which established the elected council is nullified by virtue of its discrimination by reason of race.

Ann Landers

He May Be a Real Slob —But He's Still Her Dad

Dear Ann Landers: Why my mother and father got married in the first place is beyond me. How they stuck it out for 16 years is even a bigger mystery. I am the product of that unhappy marriage.

Two years ago my mother met and married a widower. He is a fabulous person and he and Mom are crazy about each other. My friends love to come to our house and listen to him play the guitar. Everyone thinks he's the greatest.

I should be happy, but I'm terribly mixed up about my feelings regarding my real father. I love him, I think—or am I just saying I do because I'm ashamed that I don't?

Whenever I go to visit him he still cheats on his wife, wears a beard, dirty shirt and a can of beer in his hand. All he can talk about is how poor and broke he has had it, yet sick to my stomach. All that I can do is feel pity. Actually he disgusts me.

Am I a bad daughter because I don't love my father? Or should I make myself go because I know I'll feel guilty if I don't?

Is it normal to feel disgust for your own flesh and blood? Or should I act like I really want to be with him? I stopped seeing the self-pitying routine years ago. Straighten me out, Ann. I'm confused.—Mixed Up Kid

Dear Kid: You are torn by conflicting emotions. Your feelings of loyalty for your dad are mixed against the disgust you have which is understandable. When there's the guilt that haunts you because you feel deep down that children should love their parents.

The candor with which you write indicates you are an honest girl who wants to do the right thing. My advice is to keep seeing your father even though he disgusts you. Try to substitute some of your negative feelings with compassion and understanding. He knows he's a slob and a weakling and I'm sure his life is empty and he's leading a miserable existence.

It might help you to reconcile your conflicting emotions if you had a little counselling. I recommend it.

Dear Ann Landers: My boyfriend and I plan to get married soon. We've been dating steady for two years. Some serious problems have come up about our wedding ceremony.

Roy believes in God, but he doesn't believe in preachers. He thinks we should go to a church and be married by God. We would each have a witness and write our own marriage vows. There would be no license or legal papers signed, but God would know we were married.

When I told Roy I didn't think it would be comfortable with this sort of marriage, he said we would have a legal ceremony three months later if I still felt the same way. Usually Roy's the guy, but I'm beginning to wonder about his love for me.

Roy's friends think he is a jerk and that he just wants to shack up for awhile. What do you think, Ann Landers?—Doubtful In Davenport

Dear Doubtful: I think your best friend has things pretty well figured out. I hope you will listen to her. God has nothing against legal ceremonies, and believe me, those are the best kind.

Diamonds-Traditional, Contemporary

NEW YORK (AP) — Diamonds are getting a different look, from young designers who are using them in new ways.

Such disparate types as a Coty Award-winner who dotes on cowrie shells and beetles' wings in jewelry, a designing state team and a poetic humanoids and mother who designs what she calls "human sculpture" have discovered diamonds.

The diamond, long considered the symbol of love and still favored by 75 per cent of brides, has taken on jewelry fashion accessory. This is meaning as a contemporary mainly due to increased use of small diamonds, which are adaptable to many exciting designs and are more affordable than the larger stones.

Clint Nicholson, young curtare-loving designer who uses petrified beetles, natural cowries shells and slabs of mother-of-pearl as the basis for his sculpture-like necklaces, has just unveiled his first diamond collection.

Nicholson began designing jewelry in 1970, and fashion pundits were in time to recognizing his talent with a Coty Award.

His first diamond collection features pieces combining gold and diamonds or just a few stones in shades that pick up the subtle colorings of "molded gold or mother-of-pearl that form the base of his designs.

Because he uses relatively small amounts of gold, employing shells and other materials and suspending his diamonded sculptures from dyed-to-match woven neck ropes, Nicholson's one-of-a-kind designs are relatively easy on the bank account.

The other designing team of Michelle and Janis Savitt, sisters who have been developing sleek contemporary jewelry in their own luxury, organized under the name MJS. Michelle is 23 and Janis is 19. They have gained national attention in fashion magazines and all their lines of modern, art-deco-inflected gold and silver jewelry in many top stores.

The Savitts launched their first diamond collection starting with classic designs, sprinkled liberally with small diamonds in circular or diagonal patterns or an extensive assortment of gold bangles, cuffs and pendants, earrings and rings with round and square shapes.

Alice Abrams, seen and designs jewelry 'as journalistic, touchable human statement. A poetic mother of two, she has been designing and exhibiting her distinctive jewelry in and around Denver, where she moved with her surgeon husband 11 years ago.

She began designing jewelry on commission about five years ago, working with her collection of diamonds and sterling then in neutral settings.

Her pendants and rings combine the molded look of sculpture with the practicality and comfort of fine jewelry. They also feature small diamonds.

Successful Living

Laughter Is Best Medicine

By DORIS CLARK

"Learn to laugh. A good laugh is better than medicine. Learn how to tell a story. A good story is as welcome as a sunbeam in a sick room. Learn to keep your troubles to yourself. The world is too busy to care for your ills or sorrows.

"Learn not to croak. If you cannot see any good in the world, keep the bad to yourself. Learn to hide your aches and pains under a pleasant smile. Learn to meet your friends with a smile."

—Writer Unknown.

The above words were gleaned from an old exercise book of poems and wise sayings shared with me by Miss Katherine Plumer, a retired teacher in Belleville Ontario. She writes: "Poems seem part of me after teaching them to memory work for over forty years."

Dear Doris: Please read this letter on to "Drugs and Drinks" the poor child who is having such a tragic life.

Dear Doris: I'm worried about drinking what you can do to help others rather than brooding about your own very real problems? I've been there, and can say that it works wonders.

I pulled myself out of a nervous breakdown I had five years ago, with a 19-year-old daughter. At 41, I have just come out of the hospital after nearly six weeks of treatment for Hodgkins Disease (a form of cancer), with many more treatments to go. Things financially are frequently not rosy, and yes —it gets lonely often.

My marriage has ended, both financially and physically, but I do what I can for those less fortunate — and my dear, there are always those less fortunate than we! I find it gives me comfort and makes me forget my own problems to help others.

In addition, you must learn to enjoy something in life. Be it music, art, nature, sewing, cooking — whatever turns you on. I know that at times it seems life just isn't worth living, but we have to hang on and try. Life is worth living.

Dear Doris: Thank you. I have printed your entire letter on Tues. because I know you will find help here. I have, too, this condensed version in the column.

Dear Doris: I am a 17 year-old girl with a boy problem. I like boys a lot but only the really cute ones turn me on. When it comes to going out with other guys I can't go through with it. The thought of going out with someone less than the best is really revolting. How can anyone be as narrow-minded as I am?

Dear I Can't Help It,: Sure you can! Now that you've realized that you're narrow-minded, start broadening your scope.

When you get to know a wider variety of people, you'll soon discover that the best ones aren't always the cutest!

Don't let good looks throw you; try finding some of the hidden, sterling qualities that last. How do you know you aren't a person is "less than the best" before you have had a few conversations with him?

(Doris welcomes your comments and ideas. Write to her, care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.)

Family's Back-To-The-Land Move Not Easy For Educated Eskimo

EMIL'S CAMP, N.W.T. (CP) — Bernadette Immaroituq stood in front of her family's igloo and tent home, more than 1,000 miles from the cozy Quebec City apartment she left last July.

While she had been working at Laval University as a research assistant, her family had exchanged their life in Igloolik, an Arctic settlement of 600, for an isolated camp on the Fox Basin.

The family was in the vanguard of a native back-to-the-land movement which is trying to escape the urban social problems creeping into northern communities.

For Bernadette, who returned north because her mother needed help, the adjustment has not been easy:

"I'm not used to staying with my family," the 19-year-old Eskimo said in near-perfect English. "It gets pretty cold sometimes."

She and three families were beginning to appreciate their new life as carved from the frozen barrenlands with only the bare necessities of the modern age.

"I like the quiet here. We all have to be close in order to live together here. We have to share everything — you know, to be a whole family. Otherwise it doesn't work.

"We share everything, fuel, and if somebody runs out of a certain food the other families always share."

She said the camp, 600 miles above the Arctic Circle on the west coast of Baffin Island, had its own little energy crisis last winter when they ran short of oil to burn in seal-oil lamps. "We haven't run out yet, but we nearly did and it was pretty cold in the tent, but now we have plenty."

The camp also has plenty of food. About 100 feet from the dwellings is, the community larder. Fenced off with ice blocks five feet high to keep out sled dogs and wolves. It is loaded with seal meat, caribou and hundreds of arctic char, some weighing more than 20 pounds.

The only concessions to the outside world are rifles, ammunition, an oil stove for cooking, tea, flour, sugar—

One thing particularly missed by Bernadette, who in her four years in southern Canada learned to enjoy the better of civilized life and music, is books. She is an avid reader and said she's always out of books.

Another problem is the lack of accessible medical facilities. A young woman recently had complications in pregnancy and a visiting nurse had to be sent on a nine-hour journey across Fox Basin by snowmobile to reach medical personnel in Igloolik.

The next day an airplane arrived and the woman was evacuated to the Frobisher Bay General Hospital.

Despite the problems, Bernadette said "there are a lot of people in Igloolik who would wish to come here." Interest in going back to the land is so strong that Igloolik's settlement council has asked Territorial Commissioner Stuart Hodgson for two local co-ordinators to help families wanting to make the move.

Native Peoples' Progress Needs Support

"Indians are no longer voiceless. They've become organized in the last few years and are now a power to be listened to," according to Diane MacKay executive director of the Canadian Association in Support of the Native Peoples.

"It's one of the most exciting developments in Canada's history."

Speaking to the public attending the program sponsored by the Beta Sigma Phi Sorority at the Four Seasons Hotel last evening Ms. MacKay explained what her association does to assist Native peoples.

"We are a citizen organization not a Native organization," she said. "We try to bridge the gap between Indian and Inuit (Eskimo) groups and the rest of society, helping them accomplish change by giving support, both with funds and information."

Ms. MacKay said that many current problems that plague Native people are grounded in the outdated Indian Act, enacted before Confederation.

"But if the Indian Act is destroyed before there's some other legislation to take its place, the situation wouldn't be any better." The government has to study the Aboriginal Rights Native People carefully to avoid future injustice.

The National Indian Brotherhood is the organization of Status, or treaty Indians, (governed by the Indian Act) and the Native Council of Canada serves the non-status and Metis people. Both these groups are active at federal and provincial levels, achieving new recognition for Native peoples' rights.

The issues that need attention across the country have a wide range, said Ms. MacKay, because the Native Peoples' problems are so varied.

"James Bay and the Mackenzie River projects have brought to public attention that much of Canada's land is still unceded by Native peoples and their rights have been ignored.

"Indians in isolated areas have problems of survival completely different than those who move to urban areas and at life-style for which they are suited after life on a 'reserve,'" she said. "Much more work must be done in the cities by Indians, for Indians. And they need help."

Education is the key to solving most difficulties, according to Ms. MacKay. Education of the Canadian public will increase awareness of Native peoples' needs, and proper education of Indian and Inuit people will better prepare them for dealing with Canadian Society.

The Canadian Association in Support of Native Peoples is based in Ottawa, but has an information branch in Toronto where a library of material about Native Peoples' history and struggle is available to the public.

"One of our biggest jobs is to re-educate Canadians about their own country's history. Also, we now have a reading program for Indian children for Indians. And they need help."

Ms. MacKay.

During the discussion period which followed Ms. MacKay's talk, Chief William Brant of the Tyendinaga reserve told the audience that the best way they could support Native people in the Belleville area is to keep informed.

"If you hear that there is some issue that we are dealing with that needs force behind it, then you can help by writing to our members of parliament."

Ottawa Gives Flood Aid

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau announced Tuesday that Ottawa will help Quebec pay for damage caused by spring flooding.

No figures were disclosed but Mr. Trudeau said in a news release that assistance would be given on the basis of an established federal formula for disaster relief.

The formula obligates individual provinces to pay losses up to $1 per capita, about $6 million in Quebec's case. Beyond that, Ottawa will pay 50 per cent of the next $12 million damage, 75 per cent of the next $12 million and 90 per cent of any remaining damages covered by the formula.

Mr. Trudeau said similar assistance to offset flood damage also has been offered to the Prairie provinces, where severe floods swept some areas, and Ontario.

Costs eligible for federal assistance include those for repairs to public works, private homes, farms and small businesses.

The Quebec floods occurred when the Gatineau and Ottawa rivers overflowed. Particularly hard hit were the communities of Maniwaki, Wakefield and Pointe-Gatineau.

Recreation Land Earns Tax Rebate

VICTORIA (CP) — The British Columbia government moved Tuesday to allow owners of recreational land to enter into agreements with the government which would allow owners to enter into an agreement that would keep land designated as recreational land in perpetuity.

A statement from the premier said that included in the recreational land category would be such things as golf courses, tennis clubs, rod and gun clubs, sailing clubs, ski and game trails and similar recreational lands.

Such property once designated recreational, would be assessed and taxed normally, but the government, once it has arrangements will be made that only part of the taxes had received notice that the taxes had been paid would reimburse the original depositor for this year's taxes.

A spokesman for the finance department said in some cases

GM Getting Lead Out

OSHAWA (CP) — General Motors of Canada Ltd. reported Tuesday it has taken steps during the last two years to reduce the amount of lead coming from its Oshawa north plant, one of 16 plants where excessive levels of lead have been found in surrounding soil and vegetation.

Nick Hall, GM public relations officer, said the company had soil and vegetation checks "done for the last two years and, in fact, we had to ask for them this year."

GM does constant smoke stack sampling, Mr. Hall said, and the amount of lead from the stacks is one-quarter of the maximum allowed by government regulations.

A report tabled Monday in the legislature indicated that excessive levels of lead have been found in soil and vegetation in the vicinity of 35 of 45 Ontario companies monitored by the environment ministry during 1972 and 1973.

Knowledge Helps Cure

OTTAWA (CP) — Well-informed patients are most likely to recover quickly from disease or surgery, says Dr. Charles Fletcher, an expert on patient communication.

Dr. Fletcher, of London, England, told the annual meeting of the Canadian Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association Tuesday that the biggest complaints patients have about doctors and nurses is "they never tell them anything."

He said advising patients about their illness helps to relieve anxiety and to increase confidence in medicine.

But, he said, many doctors feel that communicating with patients takes too much time and trouble.

"Some of them (doctors) just want to get on with what they're doing and feel that patients who ask questions are damned nuisances."

Claims 'Private, Property Right'

MONTREAL (CP) — The native peoples of James Bay have a "private, property right" to the land in north-western Quebec and the provincial government cannot interfere with that right, the Quebec Court of Appeal was told Tuesday.

James O'Reilly, lawyer for Cree Indians and Inuits, told an appeal hearing on an interlocutory injunction that the land is under federal jurisdiction and federal legislation is needed to develop the James Bay area.

The James Bay Development Corp. (JBDC) is appealing the injunction granted last fall which halted the 10-billion James Bay hydroelectric project for a week.

The injunction, granted Nov. 13 by Mr. Justice Albert MacKay of Quebec Superior Court on behalf of the native peoples, was suspended a week later by the Court of Appeal until a decision is rendered on the JBDC appeal.

Mr. O'Reilly said the Indians have an aboriginal title to the land which has been recognized by executive acts and federal legislation.

Citing Canadian jurisprudence and legislation, he said the Indian title is essentially a right or interest in the land or real property, not a right of ownership.

Farm Land Under Pressure

KINGSTON (CP) — Within the next century, Toronto's population may reach 7.5 million, resulting in enormous pressure on agricultural land in the area, the manager of Halton Region's policy division said Tuesday.

Richard Meakal, whose region is 20 miles west of Toronto, told planners from across Canada meeting at Queen's University that people coming into urban areas may want second homes, "and industries will want land for purposes other than agriculture."

Health Care Aide Program

This one semester program qualifies graduates to work in nursing homes and homes for the aged. Emphasis will be on practical training in working with the aged and patients with psychiatric disabilities.

Entrance Requirements:

Applicants must have grade 10 standing. Mature students (19 years of age at date of registration) may be accepted with grade 8.

Commencing September, 1974

Peter Principle's Author Says Solutions Need System

VANCOUVER (CP) — The author of The Peter Principle wants people to think in terms of solutions instead of in terms of escalating problems.

Dr. Laurence Peter says urban problems, from transit to pollution to over-population, escalate because there is no system in the methods used to try to solve them.

"If we look at transportation in Vancouver," he says, "we see that there is no transportation system. We have a railway system, a highway system, an airline system, a shipping system, we may eventually have a rapid transit system, but there is no transportation system.

"How do you get from a plane to a train? The solution is to deal with it now, with a total systems approach. Get it all hooked up so that transportation is the issue—not trains and boats and planes."

Dr. Peter's first book, The Peter Principle, has sold five million copies in 19 languages and was a best-seller in the United States, Britain, France, Germany, Japan and Finland. Essentially, the principle is that in a hierarchy every employed tends to rise to his level of incompetence.

His second book, The Peter Prescription, sub-titled How to Make Things Go Right, was a logical successor and his third book, The Peter Plan, will be published shortly.

Dr. Peter is really a teacher and writing best-sellers merely a sideline.

"I taught in B.C. for 25 years," he says. "We only went to the U.S. because they kept offering me great jobs at rodney which would give me the chance to do the things I wanted to do in education.

"In eight years, we have never put down roots there. We live in an apartment. We never think of it as home. Los Angeles is 'down there'."

Dr. Peter is director of the Evelyn Frieden Centre for Prescriptive Teaching in Los Angeles, and co-ordinator of programs for emotionally disturbed children at the University of Southern California.

He has spent the last 10 years working on a new systems approach to improve teacher education. The result is a massive work, "Compendium for Teaching, soon to be published in four volumes.

"A lot of people much better equipped than I am are working on the future, but they are unable to communicate to the average reader.

"The purpose of my books is not to proclaim that I know all the answers, or plan to save the world but by writing these stories, the idea is to turn people on to thinking in terms of solutions rather than in terms of escalating problems.

"The Peter Plan takes the best thinking on this subject, and puts it in an entertaining way. The alternate solution is to move back, to drop out, to go back to living off the land—and when it comes to reality, few people want to exist that way."

Dr. Peter sees the world's resources as so much capital available to the system. "To survive, mankind must learn to survive off the interest, the yield.

"If we use our technology to find more ways of exploiting natural resources, ultimately we will destroy the capital. The only real, viable solution is to use our technology to sustain and improve the yield.

"We can do it. That's what I mean by moving forward, rather than escalating upwards."

But he says only a few people, above his line of thinking.

"The majority of people are turned on by at least a degree of hedonism, to the 'I'm all right Jack' style in the 'eating mine' kind of attitude.

"Everyone can see it in the way they drive, by the way they use throw-away produce, with little or no regard for the make things last.

"Unfortunately, more and more people are thinking along the lines we have been discussing. This is the race, isn't it? The race against oblivion."

India Struggling To Beat Smallpox

NEW DELHI (AP) — Health authorities have suffered a critical setback in their struggle to wipe out smallpox in India.

Their goal was to eradicate the disease on the subcontinent by this summer. Now an unexpected upsurge in reported cases has forced them to push back their timetable to 1975.

Detection teams turned up 83,727 smallpox cases between Jan. 1 and mid-April, more than half the reported cases in all of 1973 and twice as high as the 1972 total.

Doctors for the World Health Organization (W.H.O.) waging the anti-pox battle along with the Indian government, pinpoint Bihar state in eastern India as the most infested area, with half the world's smallpox cases.

"The trouble in Bihar is that we are finding so much smallpox that we are not containing it as fast as we are finding it," said a W.H.O. official in New Delhi, the body's southeast Asian headquarters.

"If we could just quarantine Bihar, we could eradicate it in India in two months."

The struggle to wipe out smallpox on the subcontinent is vital to the goal of eliminating the disease everywhere in the world. Of the 132,329 cases reported worldwide last year, about 87 per cent were in India, Bangladesh and Pakistan—85 per cent in India alone.

With Ethiopia, the three subcontinent countries are the only areas in the world where small pox still is considered endemic. The last case in North America was reported in 1952, W.H.O. records show.

But doctors fear that with jet travel spreading disease from mission, smallpox-free areas as many again fall victim to the disfiguring scourge unless it is wiped out in India.

The sharp increase in cases this spring convinced officials that previous anti-smallpox programs relying only on Indian health officers were grossly inadequate.

"Now we really know the smallpox," said Dr. N. C. Grassett of the W.H.O. "Last year, they just weren't saying anything and were reporting no smallpox."

Business Not Quite As Usual

EDMONTON (CP) — Klaus Hoffman and Associates employees can go to work when they please, leave when they want, do yoga as they please, and eat six hours for lunch.

The office, 18 miles from downtown, has "stereo-in music, static plants, a 20-acre yard surrounded by trees and a relaxed atmosphere in which employees can have an outdoor barbecue for lunch, pick berries or pussy willows or shoot the cats off fence posts.

Klaus Hoffman and Associates, design specialist, call their country offices retreat Aspen West Design Centre. There is a kitchen where everyone pitches in to do the domestic chores in "feeds" and a large relaxation room complete with reclining chairs and a muted hi-fi. The grounds are artistically landscaped, a specialty of the firm.

The unique office is the brainchild of Klaus Hoffman, 33, the founder of the firm who two years ago hired 10 of the employee offices. He came by the conviction that he and his staff would be happier and more productive in relaxed working conditions.

"It is a type of symbolism," Mr. Hoffman said. "We have succeeded in putting the personal element into the business world."

"It's a new experience for us. The staff (two associates and nine employees) enjoys going to work and we are more in tune with life."

For the convenience of clients, the firm has a second office—downtown.

Ancient Engravings Dug Up

ATHENS (AP) — Life-size ivory relief engravings of human figures dating to Roman times have been discovered by the American School of Classical Studies excavating in ancient Corinth, the school announced here.

The engravings, the latest of a series of important finds in the area, were described as "unprecedented in ancient Corinth."

A marble column was uncarthed showing the detailed figures of a bearded man and two women.

The excavations, begun by the American school on April 1 near the ancient Agora, also has covered two tombs dating between the 4th and 6th centuries B.C. The skeletons were intact.

A total of 405 bronze coins showing the busts of various Roman and Byzantine emperors were also found, the announcement said. Most date do the years 883-1203. The most significant was a silver Constantian coin from the 5th century B.C. depicting Pegasus, the winged horse.

The American School of Classical Studies struck a major find 18 months ago when it unearthed a spring dating to 540 B.C.

Advertising Seminar Topic

How advertising can work for businessmen will be the subject of a seminar to be held at Loyalist College June 19.

During the morning session, a panel of retailers will discuss their approach to advertising and what they expect from it.

In the afternoon the advertising manager of the Kingston Whig-Standard, Fred Madden, will give a keynote address on what the businessman should expect from advertising. A panel of representatives from the media will discuss the merits of their respective medium. Panelists will be Bob Stewart of Canada Neon, Frank Murray of CJRG, Eric Williams of The Intelligencer, Pat Hacking of CKWS and Joe Crosbie of Quinte Advertising Agency.

The sessions will begin at 9:30 a.m. and 2:15 p.m. Luncheon is available at the college and all businessmen and women are invited to attend.

Snowmobiles Make It Tough To Be Sled Dog in North

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — It's never been easy being a sled dog in the North, and snowmobiles have made it even tougher.

"I hate those damn snowmobiles," said RCMP Insp. Hugh Feagan of Yellowknife. "Dogs have personalities. Even when they'd look back at you, you knew what they were saying."

But even Insp. Feagan had to go along when the force cut out its dogs and joined the swing to snowmobiles.

In many Eskimo communities, the snowmobile has assumed the importance of the car in the South. Two-and three-snowmobile families can be found in settlements such as Hall Beach, population 300.

Many younger natives don't care about hunting and trapping and would rather race snowmobiles than drive dog teams.

In addition, many sled dogs have been inherited with pets brought north by white settlement workers and the sled dog's performance has suffered as a result.

So huskies, whose life expectancy in the Arctic seems has never been long, are being tied to trees and left to starve. Or they're being dumped on islands during the summer when they are of no use.

In the Mackenzie delta communities of Fort MacPherson and Inuvik, it bylaw enforcement officers aren't able to apprehend stray dogs they carry rifles to kill them.

In Yellowknife, a city of 7,000, there is no veterinarian, no humane society. While residents have as grand and exotic a collection of pet dogs as in any southern city, there's a kennel but no dog club.

At Frobisher Bay, the largest community in the Eastern Arctic, there hadn't been a dog team for five years until Paramount Pictures purchased a team in Igloolik to film in the Baffin region.

The movie company later sold the team to a Frobisher Bay resident and now the predominantly-Eskimo community of 2,500 has one dog team.

Throughout the North, there are only a handful of settlements that have more than a half-dozen working dog teams. These are communities such as Igloolik (with an estimated 75 sled dogs), Baker Lake (50 sled dogs) and Coral Harbor (16 dogs).

Some communities have only one or two teams because polar bear-sport hunting regulations—where southerners visit settlements to bag a bear—require that the hunt be carried out with a dog sled.

In terms of the ratio of snowmobiles to dogs, at Repulse Bay there are 60 snowmobiles and 65 sled dogs.

Some individuals, such as Thomas Kalinuk, a trapper in the Keewatin, are using both the snowmobile and the dog team in their work. Kalinuk uses the machine to get to his base camp, then relies on his dogs, without barning expensive gas, to get him around to his traplines.

He also has the security of knowing that if his snowmobile breaks down, in the barren—as machines are prone to do—he has the dogs for transportation.

There was talk last spring in Grise Fiord, the most northerly settlement in Canada, of returning to dogs because of the expenses incurred with snowmobiles. It cost about $900 a year for upkeep plus depreciation, and some Eskimos needed a new snowmobile every year.

Sailors Circle Globe

HALIFAX (CP) — David Allardice wants to sail around the world and by the time he reaches his home port of Vancouver sometime next year, he will have seen a lot of it.

Mr. Allardice and John Rytter, also of Vancouver, brought the 41-foot sailing yacht Rebel Inlet, the Dartmouth Yacht Club recently.

He had sailed from Europe via the West Indies. The six-year-old English-built vessel was bought about a year ago by Mr. Allardice.

He studied navigation, learned how to sail the vessel and practised with a six-month sailing tour of Western European ports before setting out for North America.

Mr. Rytter joked at Las Palmas. Next on the visiting list was Moncton before arriving in the Canary Islands to make final preparations for the Atlantic crossing.

They stocked up about $300 worth of canned goods but used only about half of it in the crossing.

The scary moment of the voyage came Feb. 7 when a number of killer whales "which were nearly as long as the ship" moved up to the yacht. The engine was started up to scare them away.

Blindness One Hurdle For Student

TORONTO (CP) — Although Michael Yale, 30, is blind, it has not prevented him from earning his bachelor of arts degree, getting through three years of law studies and working for others who are physically handicapped.

Mr. Yale knows from his own experience the the handicapped don't want help but a chance to help themselves.

They need to be given an even chance to prove themselves in the job market, despite their disability, Mr. Yale said in an interview. For this reason, he said, he works as director of an $18,520 Local Initiative Program grant.

Under the program, Mr. Yale compiles research in the area of employment possibilities for the physically handicapped.

"We want those who've had trouble getting a job because of their handicap," Mr. Yale said. "But we also want to hear success stories from people who have managed to land and hold a good job on the open market."

Mr. Yale said research already completed shows there is a lack of imagination in job placement for the physically handicapped.

Checking It Out

Budapest To Boast A Hilton

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Workmen have begun laying the foundation for the Budapest Hilton, a new 359-room hotel in the old style.

The hotel, which is being fitted into an historic site on the Buda Castle Hill, is expected to be completed during the first half of 1976. Extensive research of Budapest and the Danube west into plans for the Gothic-River. Flanking the hotel will be ornate Matthias Corvinus Church.

The hotel is being built and will be operated by the state-owned Danubius Hotel and Spa Company, which will pay the International Hilton chain commissions for bookings received through the latter's facilities.

The Budapest Hilton will have three restaurants, five bars and a rooftop night club.

Hats Stolen

Belleville police are looking for a group of thieves or a thief who likes to play tennis.

Yesterday morning police were informed that someone broke into the factory warehouse complex at G. T. Lansing's Ltd. on Coleman Street during the weekend and stole 24 tennis hats and eight grey Ascot hats.

Police say that the thieves entered the building by climbing onto the roof of an annex and forcing open a second floor window.

The stolen hats were valued at approximately $40.

Land-based Sealers Find Ice Stays Too Far at Sea

ST. JOHN', Nfld. (CP) — It was a slow season for Newfoundland's land-based sealers.

Last year, with ice close in shore until early April, the inshore fishermen had good hunting, but this year the ice went off and only scattered seals were taken.

With clear waters in most areas the fishermen have abandoned the hunt in favor of lobster, salmon and cod.

Despite a dwindling tradition, the spirit of the seal hunt is still alive in many Newfoundland settlements, especially the northern areas of the province.

However, fishermen who do sail to the Front off Newfoundland and Labrador now do so on board sealing vessels sailing out of Nova Scotia ports such as Halifax. The sealing ships call at St. John's en route to the Ice Fields and pick up Newfoundland crews. One veteran sealing captain reported a crew of 80, but said he could easily have had twice that number.

The five Nova Scotia ships taking part in the hunt this year carried about 100 Newfoundlanders. The offshore sealers had better luck than their land-based counterparts and earnings were reported to be as high as $2,500 per man for the five or six weeks on the Front.

Up to half the earnings came from seal carcasses and flippers which the hunters sold to the native population when the ships called at local ports to land crew members.

The five Canadian vessels were allowed to take a quota of 69,000 seals but their combined take fell short by some 10,000. The vessels quit the hunt several days before the season ended because the ice began to break up and the ships became hemmed in and took to the water.

An unknown number of Norwegian sealing ships also took part in the hunt. Like the Canadians, many of their quota was 69,000 seals, but their total take has not been disclosed.

Once, several thousand sealers gathered in St. John's each spring to join local ships sailing to the Front, but the province hasn't sent a vessel out for the last two years.

The number of inshore fishermen this season has not been disclosed, but last year about 8,000 licences were issued to local hunters.

Russian sealing vessels were reported to have planned participation in the hunt off Newfoundland this year, but none were sighted.

Sealing regulations signed by the International Commission for the Northwest Atlantic Fisheries about two years ago leave little hunting for countries other than Canada and Norway.

The regulations set the quota of seals at the Front at 50,000 each for Canada and Norway. Any other country participating can take only 100 seals. For instance, the quota in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, north of the Magdalen Islands, is 20,000.

The annual birth of young seals usually starts off Newfoundland and Labrador during the first week of March. They grow rapidly, even by daily measurements and within three weeks are considered in their prime for hunting.

Grits Forecast 300,000 Jobs

GEORGETOWN, Ont. (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner said Tuesday that the federal government's economic projections for 1974 included at least another 300,000 new jobs in Canada.

In Georgetown to support Dr. Frank Philbrook, Liberal candidate in Halton riding, Mr. Turner said at a luncheon meeting to Liberal supporters that the federal policy in economics has been to "increase the supply and protect those who are least able to protect themselves."

He said that the inflation problems of 1972 and 1973 were caused by expanding countries, which had large demands but faced a shortage of supply.

"We did prices right through the roof," he said. "We doubled the price of wool, cotton and nickel of the metals along with foods like coffee, tea and sugar."

Mr. Turner also said that the oil-producing countries "quadrupled the price from $3 to $10 a barrel."

"To eliminate the trouble we have to get to its root and the government has to balance the two forces of supply and demand," he said. "Any other suggested cure is just cosmetic."

Liberals Fill Election Slate

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

With the nomination Tuesday night of a candidate in Vancouver East, the Liberal party became the first to have a full slate of 264 hominees for the July 8 federal election.

So far, 248 are known to be running under the Progressive Conservative banner - the NDP has 211 and 64 Social Creditors are known to be in the running.

Nomination day is five days away, and at this point at least 900 candidates have either been selected at party conventions or otherwise made known their intentions to run. They will have to make it official by 2 p.m. local standard time Monday, June 17.

At the same stage in the 1972 election campaign, more than 900 candidates had announced themselves. And when the nomination deadline for the contest had passed, 1,117 had filed their papers, a Canadian record.

One of the surprises of the current campaign has been the emergence of the Communist party and the Marxist-Leninists as parties registered under the Elections Act.

They were able to achieve this, thus enabling their candidates' party designations to be placed on the July 8 ballot, by fielding enough candidates—at least 50 are required—by the 28th day of the campaign.

The Conservatives and New Democrats have full, or nearly full, slates in all provinces but Quebec. By Tuesday night, the Conservatives had named 54 to run in Quebec's 74 ridings while the NDP had 53.

The candidate who enabled the Liberals to complete their roster is Arthur Lee, a 36-year-old Vancouver lawyer taking his first fling at politics.

Commission Member Quits Over Conflict of Interest

TORONTO (CP) — John Keneely, a member of the Ontario Northland Transportation Commission (ONTC), has resigned in an alleged conflict-of-interest situation, ONTC chairman James Jessiman said in an interview Tuesday night.

Mr. Keneely's resignation was contained in a letter dated June 6 which Mr. Jessiman said he received Tuesday.

Earlier in the day, the legislature's public accounts committee decided to draft an interim report on the ONTC, including Mr. Keneely's alleged conflict-of-interest, for submission to the Ontario legislature next week.

The committee examined documents showing Mr. Keneely was listed as president of Pinewood Village Ltd., which operates the Pinewood Court Motel in North Bay.

Over the last 11 years the ONTC has spent more than $15,000 for use of the motel facilities.

The Ontario Northland Transportation Commission Act prohibits members or employees of the commission from entering into financial transactions connected with the commission.

F. J. Callaghan, deputy attorney-general, said in a written opinion, May 29 that if the ONTC is charged by the motel for use of its facilities, then Mr. Kennedy "is at least indirectly involved and would therefore, in my opinion be in contravention . . . of the act."

During the meeting of the public accounts committee, which was not aware Mr. Keneely already had resigned, Ted German, NDP member for Sudbury, said Mr. Kennedy should be removed from the ONTC and steps taken to recover the money.

Kerr Seeks Police Grant

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario will join Quebec in further efforts to obtain compensation from the federal government for the operation of provincial police forces, Solicitor-general Georgy Kerr said in an interview Tuesday.

Mr. Kerr said Ontario attended a meeting in Ottawa last fall, at which Quebec and federal Solicitor-General Warren Allmand discussed the matter of federal payments towards the upkeep of the Quebec provincial force.

"We were mostly there as an observer," he said. "The meeting was set up by Quebec."

Mr. Kerr said the two provinces—the only two with independent provincial police operations—feel they should get some federal compensation because they are saving Ottawa considerable expense.

The federal government supplies RCMP forces as provincial police agencies in the other eight provinces and the territories.

Quebec has long been seeking a federal contribution towards provincial police forces. In the past the province has asked for up to $80 million a year.

Mr. Kerr said Ontario would ask for about the same amount as Quebec, but he offered a percapita payment as an alternative.

No Control For Rents

TORONTO (CP) — The government has no intention of introducing rent-control legislation at this time, Housing Minister Sidney Handleman said Tuesday.

Replying to questions in the legislature, Mr. Handleman said rent controls would have an adverse effect on the housing situation. They would reduce the present low vacancy rate even further.

Lewis Depressed by Skid-road Visit

VANCOUVER (CP) — "I don't know why I have to go through this sort of thing." David Lewis, federal New Democratic Party leader, said Tuesday as he boarded his campaign bus after a brief tour of the city's skid-road area.

"It's most depressing."

But local party organizers were unperturbed by his reaction.

Ron Johnson, the 22-year-old New Democrat running against Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford in Vancouver Centre, said Mr. Lewis had intended to meet people who live in poverty.

"That's the whole point of this tour. The prime minister and Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield also have been invited . . . but David is the one who has come down here.

"Some people are saying it wasn't a fun campaign thing. It wasn't meant to be."

Mr. Lewis was accompanied on the walking tour, which included the restored Gastown area near the waterfront, by his wife, Sophie, a.nd a flock of reporters and photographers. They entered a couple of hotel beer parlors that were nearly deserted.

Mr. Lewis heard several tales of woe, about Aboriginal living conditions in the area and about the problems of having to exist on almost pennies a day.

The NDP leader started his day with a visit to a high school in nearby Coquitlam, where he replied to students' questions about his party's policies on defence, drugs and inflation.

On defence, he restated his contention that Canada is wasting $100 million annually on participation in NORAD. He rejected a student's suggestion, however, that the Canadian Forces be disbanded, saying they played a vital international peacekeeping role.

On marijuana use, Mr. Lewis said: "The New Democratic Party believes that this particular kind of behavior does not belong in the Criminal Code."

Speaking personally, he said he does not favor legalization of marijuana.

BELLEVILLE ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 12, 1974

Substation No Eyesore

Mayor Robin in Jeffrey indicated her pleasure in the treatment given the recently completed enclosed substation on Church St., just north of Dundas St., during the Belleville Utilities Commission meeting Wednesday. It cannot be considered an eyesore, she said.

Plans for the 40-foot-wide property on the east side of Church St. are not entirely complete.

General manager Neil Britton told commissioners an agreement will be made with the city's parks board for landscaping and the installation of benches.

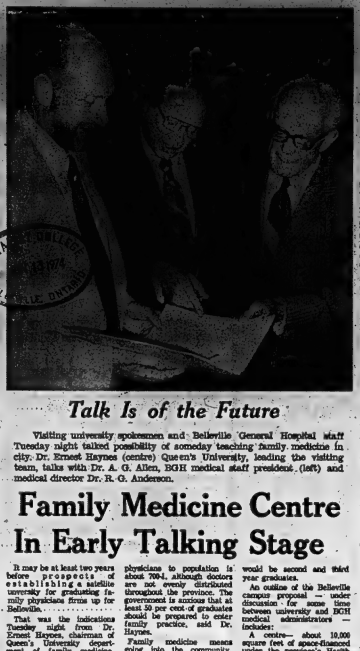
A walkway will also extend through the property from Church to Turnbull St., the vicinity of the existing senior citizens housing.

BUC Offices On Schedule

Construction of the new $230,000 offices at College and Bleecker Sts. is proceeding on schedule and all indications point to an occupancy date around September 15 this year, Belleville Utilities Commission general manager Neil Britton told commissioners Tuesday.

The single-storey structure, built by Miron-Wiggers Construction Ltd. of Trenton, was begun earlier this year. At that time, a 30-week construction schedule was projected.

Furnishings for the new offices, subject to the existing service building, have not been decided to date. A final decision is expected within the month.



Area Students Win Degrees

More than 440 Trent University students received degrees in spring convocation exercises Friday.

In Bachelor of Arts, Honors program: Winnifred Jane Foster, Hillier; Brian Lockyer, Picton; Wendy Tate, Bayside; David Weaver and Wendy Ransom, Trenton; Martin Bond, Picton; Susan Fielding, Carrying Place; Edmund Fleming, Stirling; Teresa Lacey, Minden; Dorothy Peter, Eldorado; Mary Rush, Tweed; Lynda Manthorpe, John Street; Linda Thompson and Jacqueline Whitby of Belleville.

Area Bachelor of Science graduates: Jeffrey Wayne Scott Cadenberlain, Milner Poirier of Trenton; Janice Bornhaldt, Picton; Deborah Schrieder, Belleville and Ann Slater, Madoc.

Honorary degrees were conferred on Harry Boyle, vice-chairman of the Canadian Radio and Television Commission, John Gray, chairman of the board of MacMillan Co., of Canada and Ross Matthews of Peterborough, former president of both the Canadian Medical Association and the Ontario Medical Association.

Talk Is of the Future

Family Medicine Centre In Early Talking Stage

It may be at least two years before prospects of establishing a satellite university for graduating family physicians firms up for Belleville.

That was the indications Tuesday night from Dr. Ernest Haynes, chairman of Queen's University department of family medicine, which is sponsoring the proposal.

Dr. Haynes headed a panel of already-involved experts from other major teaching centres who discussed the proposed project with Belleville General Hospital medical staff and administrators at the hospital's Education Hall.

The session reviewed details of the extended campus concept— a scheme that locates learning facilities outside the major teaching centres to step up the number of graduating doctors entering community and family practice in Ontario.

The concept — already at work in other Ontario medical teaching communities — stems from government concern about the number of graduates entering family practice. The ratio of physicians to population is about 700-1, although doctors are not evenly distributed throughout the province. The government is anxious that at least 30 per cent of graduates should be prepared to enter family practice, said Dr. Haynes.

Family medicine means going into the community, Queen's, although one of the country's larger medical centre, is located in a community with a small population relative to its size. It graduates about 70 students a year, and can mount an "excellent program" in family medicine for 12-15 graduate doctors.

A centre about 10,000 square feet of space-financed going into the community, Resources Development Program. This would be an academic focus using conferences, seminars and case presentations. Concurrently teaching practices would be conducted with family physicians acting as preceptors, or teachers.

Questioned if a corps of teaching physicians might be organized to launch the program before a building is contemplated, Dr. Haynes said there were hopes to involve some Belleville-area physicians as preceptors in the coming year.

Carl Bateman, BGH board chairman, said the hospital board is keen but "has been an interested observer with no direct involvement or "vested interest."

"But, perhaps, this might change," he added.

The hospital's medical staff some time ago passed a resolution "signifies its interest" in the proposal and asked to be informed of any further developments.

Other visiting physicians included Dr. Frank Paul, University of Western Ontario assistant professor of family medicine; John Anderson, assistant professor, Queen's family medicine department; John Semma University Ottawa, director of the Ottawa Civic Hospital Family Medical Centre; John Hay, McMaster University chairman of family medicine; Dick Barry McMaster assistant professor of family medicine.

Ottawa Man Fined $200

A 59-year-old Ottawa man, Philippe Oscar Binette, was fined $200 and ordered to pay $25 in court costs in provincial court here yesterday after he was convicted of careless driving.

Binette was the driver of a car that was involved in a single-car accident on Highway 401 last April 26 in which a Brockville man broke his back.

Court was told yesterday that Harold John Ferguson of Brockville, broke his back when he was thrown from Binette's car as it spun out of control and skidded for a distance of 255 feet before rolling along the eastbound passing lane on Highway 401, just west of Wallbridge Road.

Ferguson, who had been hitchhiking from Brockville to Brockville when Binette picked him up told the court that Binette had been driving at speeds approaching 100 miles an hour and had wandered off the roadway several times before he lost control of his car near Belleville.

The police officer who investigated the accident, told the court that Binette's car sustained an estimated $1,800 worth of damage in the accident.

Ready for the Silent Flight

The new commanding officer of Belleville 608 Squadron Air Cadets, Lieut. Tom Riley, is checked out by Instructor Rick Gippill for a familiarization flight, in glider piloted by Air Cadet W/O David Town. About 20 members of 418 Wing RCAF Association were taken aloft by Air Cadet League of Canada glider flight co-ordinator, Captain J. B. FcFarlane and crew on Sunday, at Mountain View Airport. Lieut. Riley will officially take command of the Duke of Edinburgh Squadron Air Cadets July 1 and is also vice-president of the Air Force Association. The pilot, Dave Towers, recently received national recognition for obtaining highest marks in the 1973 Air Cadet pilot training program, as a member of Trenton High School Squadron.

Three Cars Crash At Intersection

A Thomasburg woman, Reta Walker, 68, is listed in "fair" condition with head injuries at Kingston General Hospital this morning following a three-vehicle collision at the intersection of Highway 14 and County Road 4 late yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Walker was a passenger in the car driven by her sister, Hilda Carriere, 61, of Lachute, Quebec, when it collided with a car driven by Janice Glendinning, 17, of the Frankford Rd., Stirling.

PC. Larry Farrar, of the Belleville detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police, said that the Glendinning vehicle was southbound on Highway 14 when the Carriere car passed through the intersection, eastbound on County Road 4, and drove into the path of the Glendinning car.

A third vehicle, a truck driven by Harry Gaebel, of RR 1 Marysville, was stopped at the intersection facing east when the other two cars collided and was struck in the front by the Glendinning vehicle as it spun around.

Mrs. Glendinning and her 14-year-old daughter, Heather Julia Glendinning, received minor injuries in the accident and were treated and released from Belleville General Hospital.

Hilda Carriere also received head cuts and was treated and released from hospital.

Mrs. Walker was rushed by ambulance to the Belleville General Hospital and was later transferred to the Kingston General where she is being treated for an injured right ankle and head injuries.

Total damage from the accident was estimated at approximately $2,600.

Volunteer firefighters from the Corbyville rescue squad were on hand at the accident scene when police arrived, and freed Mrs. Walker from the wreckage of her car.

Juveniles Arrested

Belleville police arrested three Oshawa juveniles early this morning in the Pine Street area of Belleville.

The arrests came to the attention of The Intelligencer after it received reports of increased police activity in the East Hill area around 4.30 a.m.

Police would only confirm that they had arrested three juveniles who were alleged to have stolen a car and had $20 in cash that had been stolen from an Oshawa store.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie would not release any more details of the incident.

Licence Switch Fine $150

A Peterborough man, Donald Edward Brant, 20, was fined $150 in provincial court here yesterday after he was convicted of stolen motor vehicle.

Brant was convicted of giving an Ontario Provincial Police officer another man's driver's licence when he was stopped for speeding along Highway 401 last April 28.

Brady was stopped by the officer at 1.30 a.m. and admitted when he was caught speeding at 90 miles an hour in a 70 mile an hour zone along Highway 401.

Instead of giving the police his own driver's licence for identification purposes, Brady gave the officer a friend's licence.

Explosion Cause Remains Mystery

Last year's explosion of a bad St. substation circuit breaker that Ontario Hydro employee has been called a "freak" accident by Belleville Utilities Commission general manager Neil Britton.

In reply to a question from commissioner Chairman Gerald O'Connor Tuesday, Mr. Britton said a satisfactory answer to the explosion has not been found.

A utility employee sustained first-degree burns to his face and third-degree burns to both arms while attempting to close the open circuit breaker after an August 31 electrical storm.

General Electric Co. Ltd., the manufacturer, has looked at the machinery, said Mr. Britton. The company could not provide a satisfactory answer.

The Electric Utility Safety Association has also been over the equipment, but again, a firm cause for the explosion could not be tacked down.

Mr. Britton said it is difficult to pin down the sequence of events leading to the explosion. He speculated that a combination of humid air and dust on equipment may have act a spark flying.

No violation of proper procedures by the work crew was discovered at the time the accident was investigated. "You can't point to carelessness," said Mr. Britton.

In the hope of preventing a reoccurrence, BUC crews have been instructed to increase the frequency of maintenance. Tolerances of various electrical equipment and procedures used have been reviewed with the manufacturer.

Shrubbery Trim Poses Problem

The removal of obstructing shrubbery and fencing from around city fire hydrants is a double-edged sword, manager Neil Britton told the Belleville Utilities Commission Tuesday.

A city request for the removal of obstructing foliage might be countered by a request from a homeowner to remove the utility's fire hydrant from his property.

In explaining the situation, Mr. Britton said it is likely that some city hydrants are located on private property, and not on city street allowances. Any request by city officials to remove the leafy camouflage could meet with refusal.

In previous years, he said people were only too glad to have services brought into their areas, and quickly granted permission for the location of fire hydrants on private property.

Today distinctions between what is privately-owned land and what is owned by the city is unclear in many areas of older Belleville. Surveys would be needed to determine lot lines.

Any push by municipal authorities to give city firefighters a clearer line of vision and action could complicate the issue.

He said he was unaware of an official fire department request for removal of obstructions from around hydrants.

"If we ask for bushes to be cleared away, an owner may survey and discover that the hydrant is on his property," said Mr. Britton.

He could then ask for the hydrant's removal from his property.

Agency Will Provide Counselling Services

The final draft of a brief outlining an eight-point proposal for the establishment of a new family and marital counselling agency in Belleville is within a week of completion, following a special steering committee meeting Tuesday.

The brief, drafted by committee chairman Norman Slater, consists of an explanation of terms of reference the proposed agency would work under. It also provides statistical data illustrating the number of clients a proposed agency would serve.

No single agency in the Belleville area currently counsels couples with marital problems. This situation prompted the United Community Services to set the wheels in motion for formation of the committee late last year.

Tuesday, the first draft of a brief was reviewed.

The eight-point proposal calls for the formation of a family counselling service in Belleville. Funding would be provided by the provincial Ministry of Health through Belleville General Hospital.

Individuals in need of counselling could freely come to the agency, or be referred by any one of the numerous social welfare groups now operating in the Belleville area.

Counselling staff would all be qualified professionals, jointly hired by the agency advisory committee and the hospital director of psychiatric services.

Over-all administration and policy decisions, plus control of funding, would remain in the hands of the hospital director.

The advisory committee would provide the administrative layer, as well as outlining the function and service, of the agency to the community.

From a satellite facility, outside the hospital, the agency would work closely with other existing groups, whether volunteer or governmental, in the city.

Family counselling now done by various existing agencies would thus be brought together under one roof.

A continuous evaluation program for agency personnel and its operation would be built into the new service.

Norman Slater, a social worker with the hospital mental health unit, explained, "Any funding source wants evaluation and social services have traditionally avoided it."

It would be a method for the staff and the agency to evaluate its own success or failure, he added.

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded to the following call for assistance during the 24-hour period ending at 8 a.m. Wednesday:

Tuesday, June 11, 6:33 p.m., garbage fire at the Royal Canadian Legion, Pinnacle Street, no damage.

Walloping Willie Powers Expos To 16-6 Victory

MONTREAL (CP) — Willie Davis capped a seven-run rally in the seventh inning with a three-run homer and then added a grand slam shot in an eight-run eighth to give Montreal a thirteen-a 16-6 victory over Cincinnati Reds Tuesday night in National League baseball play.

The Expos entered the seventh inning losing 5-4 to loser Nelson, who had given up just four hits to that point.

With one out, Ron Fairly singled to right but he was forced at second by Bob Bailey. Then Nelson walked Jim Cox and gave up a single to Barry Foote which scored Bailey from second with Montreal's second run.

Reliever Tom Hall came in to face pinch hitter Ron Woods and walked him to load the bases and then gave up an infield hit to Mike Jorgensen.

Pedro Borbon was then brought in to face Tim Foli who promptly bashed a two-run single to right, setting the stage for Davis' game-winning blast.

The Expos took an early 1-0 lead in the first inning when Mike Jorgensen led off the inning with his first home run of the season.

Cincinnati came back to take a 2-1 lead in the third on John Bench's two-run double and Nelson singled home Geronimo with the Reds' third run in the fourth inning.

Reds added their fourth run in the fifth, taking advantage of two Montreal errors and made it 5-1 in the seventh with a solitary run.

Tony Perez led off the inning with a single and scored when Dan Driessen's sinking fly ball bounced in front of left fielder Mike Jorgensen and bounced to the fence.

Jorgensen made a good throw from the outfield and it appeared the relay throw had nabbed Perez at the plate. But plate umpire Terry Tata, who was involved in three other disputes during the game, called Perez safe, sparking a vigorous protest by the Expos.

Ruthven Gets to Cedeno And That Spells Trouble

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Houston manager Preston Gomez says a little electronic gadgetry snapped Cesar Cedeno's batting slump, but from the sound of Cedeno, all he needed was a swift kick in the pride.

"We took shots of last night's game and replayed them in slow motion," said Gomez, whose Astros rode a 10-run seventh inning to a 16-1 National League romp over Philadelphia Phillies Tuesday night. "We knew that Cedeno was not hitting, so we took pictures of him and other players. This seemed to help us tonight."

But Cedeno credits Philadelphia pitcher Dick Ruthven.

"He didn't show any respect for me," Cedeno said of Ruthven, who intentionally walked Roger Metzger in the seventh, filling the bases for Cedeno.

"He got me mad. He had no respect for me as a hitter."

Cedeno showed even less respect for Ruthven's pitching, whacking a grand-slam home run into the left field seats.

"That was the first time that anyone has walked a man to pitch to me in the big leagues," said Cedeno.

Elsewhere in the league, Atlanta Braves outlasted New York Mets 4-3 in 11 innings; Montreal Expos bombed Cincinnati Reds 16-6; Pittsburgh Pirates downed San Diego Padres 5-2; St. Louis Cardinals blanked Los Angeles Dodgers 1-0 and Chicago Cubs beat San Francisco Giants 7-4.

Ruthven was coasting on a three-hit shutout until the seventh inning.

Fourteen Astros went to bat in the inning, with Lee May's double tying the score and Doug Rader's single putting Houston ahead 5-4.

The Astros collected eight hits in the inning and stayed at bat 30 minutes.

Ex-Met pitcher Buzz Capra's pitches and emotions were too high to be very effective against his former team-mates, so catcher Johnny Oates delivered the victory to another former Met, Danny Frisella.

"He (Capra) was too emotional," said Oates, who scored the winning run in the 11th inning. "It's natural for someone in that situation to want very badly to beat his former team-mates. And Buzz was sky-high for the game.

So were his pitches, and he was given the night off after giving up two runs and four hits in the second inning.

Willie Stargell and Al Oliver stroked consecutive two-out singles in the eighth, sending Richie Zisk home with the tie-breaking run.

Nothing Fancy, Fastball Will Do

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Al Fitzmorris has a selection of three pitches in his repertoire—fast, faster and fastest.

Using only fastballs may be a controversial baseball theory, but it's certainly working for the Kansas City Royals' pitcher.

Except for one experimental slider Tuesday night, Fitzmorris threw only hard stuff at his mates Tuesday night and clinched his second straight shutout with a 1-0 decision.

"Kansas City manager Jack McKeon told me seven years ago that pitchers you have to learn to get the guys out," Fitzmorris said after his eight-hitter. "It took almost seven years to find out that's true."

The Royals had lost three in a row before Tuesday night's victory.

In other American League games, Detroit Tigers beat Texas Rangers 4-3 Cleveland Indians blanked Chicago White Sox 6-0; Baltimore Orioles beat Minnesota Twins 4-2; California Angels nipped New York Yankees 5-4 and Boston Red Sox trounced Oakland A's 10-3.

While Fitzmorris was doing his thing, Amos Otis drove in the game's only run with a single in the Kansas City third.

Mickey Stanley slugged a three-run homer and Gary Sutherland and Willie Horton each drove in two runs to pace Detroit over Texas.

Horton led off the Tiger second inning with his 19th home run of the season, tying him with Oakland's Reggie Jackson for the league lead. Horton added an RBI in the fifth on a sacrifice fly as Detroit scored three times off Texas starter David Clyde.

Jim Perry hurled a seven-hitter and Cleveland took advantage of errors by Chicago to beat the White Sox easily.

Perry boosted his record to 5-1 and, coupled with brother Gaylord's 10 victories, the two pitchers are 15 of Cleveland's 28 triumphs.

San Bahnsen, 5-7, failed in his sixth bid to post his 100th major league triumph.

Jim Palmer, aided by Brooks Robinson's second-inning home run and relief help from Grant Jackson and Bob Reynolds, snapped a personal seven-game losing streak in Baltimore's victory over Minnesota.

Palmer, 5-7, who has been plagued by arm trouble, survived brief struggles with his control to earn his first victory since April 17.

Mickey Rivers picked up two hits on a passed ball and scored on Denny Doyle's seventh-inning single to snap a tie and give California its victory over New York.

Richest Purse Ever

Sires Stakes Attracts 27 3-year-olds

By ALAN TEEWORTH
Sports Staff

What the Quinte Exhibition and Raceway was expecting to be terrific shot in the arm to begin with has turned into an even bigger bonanza to the local track.

The event is the running of the first of four division of the Ontario Sires' Stakes, to be held Friday night at the Fairgrounds oval.

The division is for three year old pacing colts and geldings, and was expected to draw a good field for a purse of about $8,000.

The reason for the good news — some 27 horses broken into three races, and nearly $13,000 in purses in the three heats.

The exact total of purses is $12,871.77 with $4,471.77 for each of the three races.

The winner of each race will take home $2,236.38, exactly 17 per cent of the money — nothing to be total purse. Second place money is 10 per cent of the second at either with the 7-3-2-1-up schedule in $1,118.19.

Track manager Ev Caswell expects three records to be broken at Friday night's card of 10 races, one to the track, and two off.

A new track record is anticipated, with the help of the three year olds in the country coming to the Sires' Stakes. Many of the pacers have marks of around 2:02 at some of the lesser tracks in the province.

With the speed rating of the Belleville track standing at 2:06 compared with the larger track ratings of one to five, faster horses could endanger the existing mark of 2:05.4.

That mark is held by Early Lake John owned by Earl Lake, set in the 1965 version of the Black Diamond Stakes.

The two other marks are expected in the attendance figures, and part-mutuels.

Other than a fair night crowd, top attendance has been in the neighborhood of 1150 people, while the highest mutuel figure ever arrived at was a little over $43,000 both set two years ago when Peterborough's Kawartha Downs was first operating.

Extra mutuel machines are being brought in to handle the expected large Friday night crowd.

The three races Friday night will feature nine horses in each. Six horses will line up directly behind the starting gate, with three trailers.

In addition to the three heats in the Sakes, the regular harness race card also be included in the 10 race card.

The eighth race will see Dominion Lad, Tender Country, Rusty Pete, Harry Song, Kurt's Tuxedo, Charity Mc, and Vegas Bob all go to the post for a purse of $300.

Mr. Chick is the also eligible horse for the seven horse field.

Post time for the best card of racing ever presented at the Fairgrounds track will be 8 p.m. with qualifying races being run at 7 p.m.

Bullets Defeat Thurlow

Cobourg Bullets were in the mood for extra-base hitting in Canifton, Tuesday, hammering a pair of triples and four doubles on the way to a 9-6 Eastern Ontario Baseball Association bustain win over Thurlow Yardmen.

Allan Davidson fired five-hit ball to get the win. He retired an even dozen on strikes and walked seven.

Sharing the pitching for Thurlow were Gary Badgley and Barry Beer. They surrendered nine safeties.

Rick Ekebalh hammered a pair of triples for Cobourg while Gary Hope and Greg Redmond each doubled twice.

Tom for Thurlow was Terry Jarrell with two doubles. Accounting for one single each were Terry Gray, Rick Woodward and Beer.

TITLE FIGHT SET

MELBOURNE (AP) — Australian middleweight boxing champion Tony Mundine will fight Argentina's Carlos Mocon for the world title in Buenos Aires September 7, Mundine's trainer-manager Ern McQuillie said Tuesday.

Jumpers in Action At Orangeville Show

Canada's only jumping Derby, the Courvoisier Classic, will be a major event at the Orangeville Horse Show in Orangeville, Friday, June 21. It is the second year of competition for a royal Perpetual Trophy won last year by veteran rider Tom Gayford on Dreamy Joe.

The 1,000 yard Orangeville Derby course is one of the toughest anywhere. Jumping derbies are unusual in equestrian competition. They have been run only in three other countries — Britain, West Germany and Italy.

The Courvoisier Classic competition accounts for $1,000 in prize money in eight events at the Orangeville show. Much of it goes to support the Canadian equestrian team in their training for the 1976 Olympics at Montreal.

Caught off first after a base hit, Dwottin Motors' Bruce Riddle rushes back safely, but has to dive to do it, after the pick-off throw from Angler catcher Larry Mavety to first baseman Roger Drake ekdes the first sacker. Auger's eventually won the Quinte Fastball League game by a tight 14 count.

A Pair of Tight Fits in QFL

Both games in the Quinte Fastball League on Monday night were so close, one could bear a squeak coming from the Alamite field. In the first contest, Howard and Robert edged the Ellis Junior 12 in the battle of the Printers, while Angler Men's Wear nipped Dwotin Motors 3-1 in the nightcap.

The Juniors opened the night on the right foot, scoring their first run in the top of the first inning. Dave Grigsby singled to lead off, going to third on Larry Potter's throwing error, and scoring when Steve Campbell stroked a base hit to centre field.

Howard and Robert also got off on the right foot, even a little better than the Juniors, scoring two runs in their half of the inning.

Ken Genereaux led off with a walk given up by Ellis starter Dave Horwood and stole second. John Carmichael knocked him in with a base hit, followed by a three base hit by Jack Rodger which scored Campbell.

The Juniors scored again in the third, with Ken Vos crossing the plate, despite a total of 17 hits being crunked out by the two teams.

Dewolin got their only run of the game in the first frame. Jim Horwood stroked a three-bagger to deep right centre field, scoring when the throw to the base got past all three of the Angler defenders covering on the play, with the ball going into the bench area.

The ball did not roll Devolin's way the rest of the night, however, with the Motormen leaving the bases loaded twice, once in the second and once in the fourth inning.

Auger's came back with a marker in the second inning. Larry Mavety opened with a bad bounce single over the shortstop of Rick Rosebush at shortstop. Back to back singles by Art Barker and Roger Drake put Millsook second the Auger catcher.

Their winning run came in the very next inning, with Jim Clement leading off with his second hit of the evening. He was sacrificed to second by Barker, and scored on Mavety's double to left field.

Auger's had their share of baserunners as well, leaving a total of eight men stranded on bases.

Bob Swan got credit for the victory, although he needed fifth inning relieve help from George Ferguson. Each pitcher recorded one strikeout and one walk.

Don Hollowey absorbed the loss for the Motormen, giving up eight hits. He walked but one and set 11 batters down on third strikes.

Mavety had a double and single to lead the winners, with Clement contributing his pair of base hits. Ober singles went to Joe Theriault, Drake, and George Ferguson.

For Devolin, it was Eric Maher and Rosebush with two singles each, with Horwood adding a triple. Base hits were collected by Bruce Siebie, Ray Lumsden, Lyle Thompson and Tom MacDonald.

Unbeaten Streak Extended

Black Diamond stretched their undefeated string to five games last night in the Industrial Softball League, this time their victims Canadian Tire, falling by a 14-4 count to one of three games played in the league last night. The game was played at Sir Mackenzie Bowell School.

In the other games played last night, CNR edged Contentsion 3-2, while Brooks Bond was victorious over Stewart Warner by a 4-1 margin.

Jack Francis started for Black Diamond, allowing four runs, on eight hits, striking out four and not walking a man.

Fred Ross came on to pitch the final inning for the winners, giving up two hits, fanned one.

Gene Francis had a triple and two singles for the winners with Ralph Francis, 1 Jack Francis collecting two base hits. Howie Meeks stroked a double, with singles going to Bob Henderson, Bob Jones, Ron Bateman, Jack Gilbey, and Miles McDonald.

Andy Prudden picked up the Canadian Tire loss, allowing 11 hits, walking five and fanning three.

Andy Prudden had three base hits to pace the CTC attack, with Dave Fox and Larry Ostrodzka each gaining a double and single. Other singles went to Wayne Price, Ken Trice, Pete McBride, Eric Asselstine, and Alec Reid.

CNR connected for six doubles in their contest with Contentsion, with Milt Bell and Jerry Rid each picking up a pair.

Ron Mitchell and Steve Gatchem each had two singles in a losing cause, with Tom Bells stroking a double and single.

Perry Soule picked up the win on the CNR rubber, allowing nine hits, striking out five and walking a pair.

Jim Thompson was the losing hurler, striking out none and walking four.

Tom St. Jules allowed only four hits in picking up the Brooke Bond win, striking out five and walking none.

Ken Stratton had a whiffs, walking one, giving up six hits in taking the loss.

Ron Stration led the Brooks Bond hitting with a double and single, with Don Goodfellow, Al Calder, Ron Whaley, and St. Jules each stroking a base hit.

Dominic Lentini had a pair of singles for Stewart Warner, with Craig Adams adding a double and Doug McKay a single.

Quinte Antenna Nips Broadloom

When Quinte Antenna and Belleville Broadloom meet in Belleville Intermediate and Belleville and District Ladies' Softball League action, the two teams generally come up with a well-played, close contest.

Tuesday evening at Centennial Park the squads followed the script as the Kitchen team squeezed out a 9-8 decision.

Antenna coach Jack Zrsten was extremely happy with the win.

"Last time, we outhit Broadloom 19-13 and lost 11-10. This time, we did it right," he enthused.

Broadloom's loss was tempered by the fact the squad pulled off the first triple play of the season, getting out of a bases loaded situation in the process.

Antenna twice came from behind in the late innings to pull it out. Trailing 4-3 after four frames, the club rallied for a pair in the fifth but fell behind again in the top of the seventh when Broadloom hit for four runs.

In the bottom of the seventh, Cheryl Kelly's two-run triple sparked a four-run Antenna outburst which pulled it out. Cheryl also supplied a run-scoring double and a single.

Bonnie McKeown belted a home run and a single for the winners while Liz Reid connected for a double. Nina Wright and Sandy Bell each had a single.

Rossanne Bowlage led Broadloom with a pair of singles. Norma Fuller belted a double while Janet Smith, Helen Sills and Chris Smith supplied on single each.

Aileen Barr worked six innings for the winners, allowing six runs off as many hits. She walked seven and fanned four. In a one-inning stint, Liz Reid surrendered two runs off one, hit. She struck out one and walked two.

Mary Anne Sills took the loss on an eight-hitter. She got third strikes past four batters and issued six free trips to first base.

First Point for Panelas

It took a long time to finish, but Monday night in the Bay of Quinte Soccer Association, Trenton Panelas and Golden Mile Olympics played to a 2-2 tie, at OSD.

The game was one which had been started last Wednesday and canned by the referee. It was then rescheduled for last night and with the deadlocked score neither team finished that much farther ahead than when they started except that the single point received for ties in Panelas' first of the season.

The Olympics controlled the first half of the game, but were unable to put the ball behind Panelas' goalie, Angelo Hagiliandis.

In he second half each team booted two goals.

The Olympics got first with a tally from Nick Del Grosso, on a pass from Charlie Nesbitt.

Panelas came back with a pair of markers to take a 2-1 lead. Mat Graber and Ted Adams were the scorers.

Golden Mile applied the pressure and their efforts paid off as Nesborvski tallied on a penalty kick after Keith Lawday had been pushed in the penalty area.

Panelas had a pair of players ejected fro mthe game by referee Harold Hildebrand. They were ejected for disputing the official's calls.

Saturday at OSD the tryouts for the Under 21 team of BQSA players was completed and the following are the players who made the squad.

Terry Hore, Dennis Woodcock, Mike Roach, and Jim McDonald from Trenton Wanderer's. Pats DaSylva from Cooney's Haulage and Brian Preston from Parsons' Soccer Club. Rick Vandertoorn and Bruce Mohr from the Bridge on Soccer Club and Steve Preston, Peter Hittler, Keith Lawday, Charlie Nesborvski, Tommy Maxwell, Dario C'Ansa, Steven Edwards, and Dennis Wright all from the Olympics Soccer Club.

The team is chosen to represent the Bay of Quinte region in a tournament at OSD field on Saturday.

Other representative teams will be from Kingston, Peterborough, and Ottawa.

Out of the tournament at OSD an Eastern Ontario Select team will be chosen to play in a tournament being held in Hamilton later this month.

The Bay of Quinte under 21 team will play an exhibition game Thursday against the Belleville, Olympics of the Premier Soccer League at 6.30 at the OSD field.

The Eastern Ontario Tournament at OSD will go from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday.

Players — Yes But Home Ice Is the Problem

MONTREAL (CP) — Some time late today Kansas City Scouts and Washington Capitals will know what they should have for their initial training camp, but it may be some time before the Scouts know where they are going to play the first few home games of their maiden National Hockey League season.

The Scouts and Capitals will be stocked today with two goaltenders and 22 players from the existing NHL clubs in the third expansion draft in seven years. Following the expansion proceedings, the Capitals and Scouts will draw from N H L-affiliated minor-league clubs in the inter-league draft.

But once the Scouts get their players, the biggest question facing the club is where in Kansas City they are going to perform.

Owners of the Scouts submitted a progress report to the league governors showing their building is more than half complete. Construction or the new arena has been plagued by a series of labor difficulties.

N H L president Clarence Campbell said Kansas City has requested that their home scheduling be done on the basis of a Nov. 1 start, adding that Vancouver would play their first seven to nine games during a three-week road trip.

There still is no guarantee the Scouts' 16,000-seat rink will be ready by Nov. 1 and negotiations are under way with municipal authorities in Kansas City to rent the 9,000-seat Municipal Auditorium.

The existing 16 NHL clubs have made extremely little available for today's expansion draft.

The Scouts have first pick in the goalkeeper draft and are expected to pick Michel Plasse, third-string netminder with Montreal Canadiens last season. The Canadiens, Boston Bruins, Chicago Black Hawks and Los Angeles Kings have the option of being exempt from the goaltender draft. All teams were permitted to protect two goalkeepers and may not lose more than one in the proceedings.

If the Scouts select Plasse, it would permit Montreal to fill they can of the players left off their 15-man protected list—most likely defenceman John Wensmee. Each club can add a player to its protected list after a claim has been made against it. No club can lose more than three players, including goalies.

Van Boxmeer was one of three members of the 1972-74 Canadiens left unprotected. The others were veterans forwards Claude Larose and Frank Mahovlich. The latter is reported bound for Toronto Toros of the WHA, so it is unlikely either of the two new clubs will take a chance on him.

The Capitals have indicated interest in goalie Ron Low, left unprotected by Toronto Maple Leafs. Low, a regular with the Leafs in 1972-73, was with the CHL's Tulsa Oilers in 1973-74.

Philadelphia Flyers dropped defenceman Joe Watson and forwards Simon Nolet and Terry Crisp from their Stanley Cup winners.

Among other players available are Ron Harris, a playoff hero for the Rangers, Eddie Shack, a colorful forward who skated for Toronto Maple Leafs this past season, and defenceman Ted Harris and fourth-line centre John Wright, chopped from the St. Louis Blues' list.

Bruce MacGregor and Bobby Rousseau, who played for the Rangers this year, are also available but, like Mahovlich, they are reported bound for the WHA.

BILL SYMONS

Fun Gone, Argo Star Retires

TORONTO (CP) — Veteran fullback Bill Symons of Toronto Argonauts announced Tuesday his retirement after eight years in the Canadian Football League.

"I've been kicking it around since the end of last season," said Symons, who will be 31 Friday. "I finally decided not to go to camp this year.

"Football has lost much of its fun for me. That's when it's time to pack it in."

Symons, used only sparingly as a ball carrier in recent years, joined the Argos from Columbia Lions in 1966 and was traded to Argos for Dick Poole.

In 1968, when he rushed for 1,107 yards, Symons became not only the first Argonaut to rush for 1,000 yards or more, he also was the first Toronto player named outstanding player in Canadian football.

Symons and his family are preparing to move into their new home in the Rockley Valley north of Toronto before the Argonauts native has 30 head of Black Angus cattle.

Quebecois Slip Past Tomahawks

TORONTO (CP) — A goal by John Davis with 12 seconds remaining gave Montreal Les Quebecois a 17-16 victory over Toronto Tomahawks in a National Lacrosse League game Tuesday.

Jim Lynch and Gord Olinchuk paced Montreal with three goals each. Rick Boesler added a pair, with singles going to Davis, Dave Tasker, Dave Ellenbereger, Dale McKenzie, Gord Floyd, Bill Sheehan, Bill Bradley, Wayne Sutherland and Bill Nonn.

Stan Cor led the Tomahawks with three goals. Duffy McCarthy, Brian Thompson, Joe Nieuwendyk and Jim Hickson each scored two goals. Rob Shaw, Chuck Li, Jeff Hicks, Sandy Lynch and Jack Chisholm had one each.

A crowd of 2,300 saw Cor and McCrea score for Toronto in the last two minutes to tie the score 16-16. Davis's goal, his 30th of the season, gave his 64 points, three behind Paul Sargent of Maryland Arrows who leads the NLL scoring race with 67.

Ernie Mitchell faced 64 shots in the Quebecois goal, Bob McCready, Tomahawks' net, was the target for 54 Montreal drives.

The victory moved Montreal into a three-way tie for second place in the NLL standings. Les Quebecois, Toronto and Philadelphia Wings each have 12 points.

Camps May Start Late

REGINA (CP) — George Reed, president of the Canadian Football League Players' Association, said Tuesday night he expects the start of training camp for all nine clubs will be delayed because of the current dispute over payments and playing contracts.

"I can't see how we can settle it 48 hours when we couldn't do it in three months," said the Saskatchewan Roughriders fullback, who has an appointment with the CFL's negotiating committee Friday in Toronto.

At that time, the skidders' report on financial statements prepared by the nine league clubs will be studied.

Reed said the players' position has not changed in recent days and reaffirmed that the players are prepared to go ahead with the annual all-star game, scheduled for June 26 in Ottawa.

He also said suggestions he raised a meeting with commissioner Jake Gaudaur earlier this week were incorrect.

"I wasn't supposed to be in Toronto," he said. "I don't know where that statement got started."

Burlington Produces

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

A single by pitch-hitter Gino Marcotti drove in a ninth-inning run to give Burlington a 4-4 tie with London Tuesday night in Ontario Football League action.

Making no mistake in the extra inning, Burlington leaders of the league's East Division, scored two runs to take the game 6-4. London is last in the league's West Division.

In other OFL games Tuesday, St. Catharines whipped Niagara Falls 9-3 and Hamilton edged Oshawa 2-1.

League action resumes Thursday when St. Catharines, at the top of the West Division, plays a doubleheader in Newmarket and Burlington is at home to Woodstock.

In London Tuesday night, Joe O'Neill hit two triples and two singles for Burlington and Bill Freeman, who took over pitching duties in the ninth, was credited with the victory. Bob Stewart was the loser.

Pitcher Tom Clark gave up five hits and struck out 11 in St. Catharines' win over Niagara Falls. Walt Sapilwski was the Niagara Falls loser as his team committed four errors.

Jim Thompson scored both Hamilton runs in the victory over Oshawa, and each time he was driven in by hits of Dick Boelker.

Winning pitcher Reg Martin gave up two hits and struck out five. Paul Wannamaker, the Oshawa loser, allowed five hits and struck out six.

40 Cars Are Entered In Challenge Race

GIMLI, Man. — The entry of two more racing teams from the United States brings the total number of teams to five for this Sunday's 100-mile Player's Manitoba Formula Atlantic race.

In announcing a record entry of 40 cars for this third leg in the seven-race Player's Challenge Series, Mr. David E. Marshall, regional sales manager for Player's Cigarettes, said that the field should be "the best in Molson Rivers and Chip Mead of Dayton, Ohio, form a partnership on the Dean Siliernor Racing Team from Adrian, Michigan, one of five teams now entered in the series. They both compete in identical blue-and-yellow Chevron B21 Formula Atlantic cars.

Other teams include the Fred Opert Racing Team, which boasts Sweden's Bertil Roos as the No. 1 driver with Wink Bancroft of Costa Mesa, Calif. as No. 2 man; the Charlie Williams Racing Team with David Loring of Clarence Mission, Kansas and Glenn Cooper of Lake Lotawana, Mo., as drivers; the DBC Racing Team with Bruce MacInnes of Forest Hills, N.Y. and Ron Cohn of Modena, N.Y. in twin March 735's; and the Traylee Engineering Team, featuring experienced Canadian Bill O'Connor from Chicago and Tom Klausler of Palatine, Ill. in brand-new identical Lola T296's.

Sunday's 75-lap race will be worth $2,500 to the winner, with a total of $10,000 in prize money and $5,000 in contingency money available to the top 15 finishers.

Race time is 2:30 p.m. Series points leader is Bobby Brown of Hicksville, N.Y. with 36, followed by Brack and Leder with 30 each. Bruce Jensen of Toronto holds fourth place with 24 points, while rookies Dave Harris of Edmonton and Gilles Villeneuve of Montreal are fifth and sixth respectively.

"For years, young couples have known our meat men for the friendly, helpful advice they offer when buying meat. They can count on us to show them how to get the most out of their meat dollar with economical cuts of meat.
Of course, your mother could probably tell you about the meat quality which has made Dominion famous.
Helpful meat men and the finest quality—just two of many reasons why new brides and older ones like your mother shop Dominion week after week. Or our name isn't Dominion."

Margaret Laurence Writes Last Novel

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Margaret Laurence, internationally Canadian author who has written six novels, says her latest work, The Diviners, will be her last.

The Ontario-born fictional character, Morag, is a writer who recalls growing up in a Prairie town as she pioneers her daughter head out in search of an identity.

Presented in a series of flashbacks interwoven with the writer's life in rural Ontario, it presents only the Canadian theme—a long look for buried cultural identities in various parts of Canada.

Its storyline touches on isolation, poverty and discrimination, neatly laced with repressive Protestantism. Outstanding is her treatment of the Metis.

A childhood companion and later the father of Morag's illegitimate child, Jules Tonnerre is a descendant of the Metis who repeatedly enters and withdraws from Morag's search for identity which takes her from the Prairies to Ontario, to Vancouver and London and finally to homestead in Ontario.

The several vehicles in which the simple story is told—flashbacks, folktales, poems and songs—at first seem obtrusive. But they add greatly to development of rich, round characters.

The Diviners, By Margaret Laurence, McClelland and Stewart, 355 pages.

If you like to make bets on such things as when and where the first commercial oil well was brought in in North America (1857 at Oil Springs, Ont.), or when the Fenians invaded Canada (June 3, 1866, near Fort Erie, Ont.) keep a copy of Quick Canadian Facts handy.

This little book, subtitled The Canadian Pocket Dictionary, has appeared for the 12th year from the desk of C. J. Harris.

Editor Harris has amassed a wealth of historical brief, of Canada from Leif Ericson's visit to Canada in 1000 AD to the opening of the Canada Satellite Anik.

It also contains many tables and statistics, dealing with matters as varied as Canada's exports and imports of 1972, and the operation of the Canada Pension Plan.

Mr. Green has an entry for 1855, Birth of Janet Amanda Harris, the editor's daughter 28th Annual Edition Quick Canadian Facts, edited by C. J. Harris; 14 paperback, 14 hardcover; 196 pages; Quick Canadian Facts Ltd., Toronto.

The Kingdom, a novel by Larry Henderson, presents a mystical story of love and adventure in feudal and ancient times when warring factions of Christians and Moslems made travel—claims Jay—the Holy Land.

Henderson's hero, Guy of Vienne, leaves his native France in the 12th century and takes up the sword to defend the True Cross against the infidel.

His adventures take him from one identity as the Christian Guy of Vienne to another as the Moslem al-Ad. He loves two women—Alice, the symbol of his Christian life, and Yasmin, the beautiful Ishmaeli princess.

He is caught between two cultures but finally finds his true identity in the midst of a land caught in the grip of evil. Jihad war.

Henderson is a writer and broadcaster and editor of The Catholic Register.

The Kingdom, by Larry Henderson, 91.95; published by Avon Books.

THE FINGER OF SATURN Victor Canning.

Robert Rock's wife Sarah has been missing for two years and, when she is found, cannot remember anything of the event, or of her true identity. Robert is determined to reach the truth, but encounters mystery upon mystery. Who is Albert Chinn and why is the Ministry of Defence so concerned about the company in which Sarah and her mother are major shareholders? This is a love story charged with suspense, in which is finally revealed Sarah's closely guarded secret.

BLACK DOUGAL David Walker.

David Walker has written a most engaging, amoral fable, involving light-hearted larceny and violence. His hero is Dougal Trocher of Dein, a young Scottish laird living on his beautiful, if dilapidated estate. A plan to acquire money to restore his home leads the normally upright Dougal to Canada where he proceeds to relieve rich dowagers of their jewels, plot with nihilists and deal with shady fences.

THE FIFTH ESTATE Robin Moore.

The author of 'The Green Berets' and 'The French Connection', has written a novel of criminal influence in the highest echelons of government and business. With a cast that includes national political figures, military leaders and United Nations officials, as well as the men and women who wheel and deal from the plushiest rooms at the top of the International drug syndicate, 'The Fifth Estate' unfolds a staggering tale of illicit power and corruption.

HAND OF BROTHERS Ernest K. Gann.

When Malloy, who has become a legend in flying, is blamed for the disastrous crash of the plane he is piloting from Manila to Taipei, only one man, Lewis Horn, believes in Malloy's innocence. Horn is certain that the Chinese government is using Malloy as a scapegoat and resolves to rescue his friend from a Chinese prison and almost certain death.

This involves the repair of a clumsy old Junkers plane and a decidedly hazardous flight. Mr. Gann knows flying and the camaraderie among the pilots of earlier days.

THE KIROV TAPES Owen Sela.

The Kirov tapes were as big as cans of film. They had been kept in a safe in records, and now they were gone. To former Detective Inspector Adrian Quimper, their loss meant the end of his job. As he began to ask questions, he received some peculiar answers. Such as why information about the new supersonic fighter was being deliberately leaked. Quimper had to learn that spying is a dirty business.

George Hamilton IV Likes Canadian Base

TORONTO (CP) — One month away from age 37, George Hamilton IV has taken his extensive music career to new territories and is becoming involved in new things.

The North Carolina country singer, by now a Nashville standard and graduate of the Grand Ole Opry, has discovered Canada, has been caught in the enthusiasm of a relatively new industry and has signed an exclusive contract with RCA Canada.

In addition, several months ago he completed visits to Czechoslovakia and the Soviet Union, where he produced the pure country and western sound of America and became fixed on the roots of the music.

Hamilton said he looked to Canada for a fresh sound. He insisted that he has not turned his back on Nashville, nor is he putting down the abilities of the musicians at "Music City, U.S.A." But in Canada, musicians were still almost astounded that their sound was appreciated and worthy of any note.

Canadians have not "had time to become bias toward their product, he said. Thus they do not take it for granted.

He is so enchanted with Prime Canadian singers that he is doing his utmost to promote undiscovered talent on his television show out of Hamilton, Ont., which enters its second season this year. The weekly program is syndicated nationally and is expected to have 30 to 35 outlets next season.

Hamilton's role as music tutor to the youth of Moscow came about by accident. While performing a "freebee" at the United States Embassy during his annual stint at the country and western festival in Britain, he was approached by Soviet and Czech officials who asked him to perform in their countries.

"I began to suspect that I was kind of being conscripted at the U.S. embassy for a trip into Eastern Europe, which is the way it worked out," he said in an interview.

"They've just wanted to look me over and see if I was a weirdo—whether they thought I'd be the kind to go in there and shoot my mouth off and get political."

The soft-spoken singer appealed to the officials and he became the first American country and western performer to appear in the Communist world.

"I went over there with preconceived ideas about everything being black and white and grey and Doctor Zhivago. I came to Czechoslovakia and found a country music band, Jiri Brabec and the Dusty Rail—only now that is the group could speak English—and they played every one of my songs just like the record, only better.

"It was the best backing I've never had—in Canada or America or England or anywhere else."

In Moscow, he was invited to lecture on the country sound at the University of Moscow, where he spoke through a translator, and at the Institute of Foreign Languages, where the students "speak our language better than I do."

Hamilton admits having felt a sense of frustration when the students—whether from shyness or through previous coaching from school officials—did not respond to his request for questions following his lecture.

However, at the foreign languages Institute one girl stood up and said: "We want to sing with you."

The ensuing singalong, which moved Hamilton to the point where "the hair on the back of my neck was standing straight up," covered such numbers as The Saints Go Marching In, This Land is Your Land and a version of Down By the Riverside. "We're gonna lay down our atom bombs down by the riverside. . . ."

Hamilton committed himself sagely to Canada in February this year, when he signed with RCA Canada.

"In the past, being a Nashville act, one of the problems I had was that so much of the music I recorded was Canadian," he said. "I've got this real thing about Canadian folk-country music—the type of songs that Gordon Lightfoot and Ian Tyson and Joni Mitchell write, and in recent years more and more of the stuff I've recorded has been of Canadian origin. So I've done several albums of Canadian music but only one of them has been recorded in Toronto. The rest have all been done in Nashville."

In this light, Hamilton sees his move to Canada as a necessity. American musicians are great, he said, but sometimes one from Nashville can't possibly capture the mood of a song about the Canadian Rockies, the Bluenose schooner or the Prairies like a Canadian can.

Hamilton became especially attracted to the Canadian folk sound nine years ago when he heard Lightfoot perform. He considers Lightfoot "a genius."

"I started to take notice of Canadian performers and became impressed with the fact that they weren't singing the same old hackneyed cheatin' songs about horses, broads and slippin' around."

He said it was the gentle poetry behind much of Lightfoot and Tyson, and the gut-level emotionalism in songs such as Anne Murray's Hey, What About Me, that made him decide to become a part of it.

Vienna Choir Boys Go Back to 1498

VIENNA (Reuter) — Austria's most famous cultural ambassadors wear naval uniforms, have angelic voices and are almost all less than five feet tall.

Cab drivers in New York City, fiesta-in London and ranchers in Argentina have all heard about the Vienna Boys' Choir, which celebrates its 50th anniversary this year.

There are actually four choirs, each of 24 boys, which travel around the world presenting a sample of Austrian culture. But they do not travel at one time, for one group is always on hand in Vienna to sing at official occasions and perform regular Sunday mass at the Imperial Chapel.

And it is not actually the choir's 50th anniversary, for its roots date back to 1498, when the Emperor Maximilian I established a group of boys to sing daily at mass, at the same shaded as today, and occasionally to perform at the emperor's dinner table.

The choir, for which composers Franz Schubert sang and Joseph Haydn was a reserve, existed throughout the rise and fall of the great Austro-Hungarian empire.

When the empire disintegrated at the end of the First World War, it looked as if the choir, already nationally renowned, would have to disband, and the boys were sent home.

But the rector of the Imperial Chapel, Msgr. Josef Schnitt, revived the institution on a private basis, using much of his money, and the boys were singing again by 1926.

It was then that the distinctive sailor's uniform, which the choir members wear for public recitals, was chosen. The rector copied what was then fashionable among the rich, who liked to dress their children as sailors.

The boys school, housed in the 17th century Augustan Palace, is a home during school terms for some 180 boys, some of whom are regarded singers and some of whom are former choristers whose voices have dropped from the soprano or alto range of the choir.

The school maintains itself on the proceeds from overseas tours and opened a new wing with a swimming pool, gymnasium and classrooms, to mark this year's anniversary.

Sorcery Enters Indian Politics

BOMBAY (CP) — Are witches and sorcerers plying their evil forces against senior politicians?

A provincial cabinet minister in the state of Karnataka (formerly Mysore) in southern Indian province of Karnataka, told the provincial legislature "my life is in danger because of the activities of sorcerers who are bent on destroying me."

"This is no laughing matter," the minister added. "I have enough evidence to prove that my enemies have engaged the services of black magicians."

Basappa, who is described in the press as a "level-headed" practical man not given to hysterics of any kind," said his trouble began about two years ago when he was suspended 17 officials working in his ministry for alleged corruption. Simultaneously, he refused government contracts to several business firms.

When all attempts by the suspended officials to get back into government service failed, he began to receive anonymous threatening letters, Basappa said. One letter said he would be "finished down."

Basappa said he did not succumb to the threats. Then the sorcerers entered the picture.

The Karnataka police are investigating reports that a number of the minister's enemies in politics, government and business met secretly in a hunting lodge in the Hassan district to draw up a plan to "finish off" the minister through supernatural means.

Basappa has told the police that mysterious rites are being performed by a group of sorcerers "to bring about my death."

A special police guard has been provided for the minister.

"I dare not go out of my house without adequate protection," Basappa told a reporter.

Basappa also said he believes "evil influence is being brought to bear on Chief Minister Devraj Urs to transfer me to some other ministry."

Senior police officials in Karnataka took the matter seriously. They said it is possible to harm a person with the help of evil spirits.

Meanwhile, Basappa was advised by close friends to engage the services of an ancient religious sect trained in exorcising evil spirits.

Members of the sect live in the adjoining province of Kerala. They said they are often consulted by members of the British Witchcraft Society in London.

"I'm worried, of course, but I'm not panicky," Basappa told a friend recently. "It is only a question of time before those desperate tactics of my enemies fail."

Friends of the minister have also made arrangements for special prayers in the Tirupati Hindu temple to ensure his safety.

Heart Attack

LONDON (CP) — A woman's heart pills caused a scare recently at Heathrow Airport after an explosives detector sniffed them in her suitcase. The terminal building was evacuated and fire engines sized by, for examination, experts found that the pills contained nitroglycerine.

Weekend Dog Show In Kingston

The Kingston and District Kennel Club will hold its annual Championship Dog Shows at the Kingston Memorial Centre on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, June 14, 15 and 16. The Bearded Collie Club of Canada will support all entries of Bearded Collies on Saturday June 15.

The kennel club gives some financial assistance to the Humane Society and to other organizations concerned with the wellbeing of all animals, and seeks the support of the general public in making the shows a success, by attending. A large entry of purebred dogs of all classes from across Canada is anticipated, competing for championship points and obedience titles.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Thursday, June 20

Aries (March 21-April 19) Your enthusiasm about something important to you will not generate the same enthusiasm in one you've closely associated with.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Impulsiveness will spell ego trip into a situation that has more responsibility connected with it than you'll realize when you commit yourself.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Someone you'll encounter socially has a chip on her shoulder. You're the one who will have it off.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Your partner is going to be very upset with you if you only look out for your interests and ignore his. Walk the middle ground carefully.

Leo (July 23-Aug 22) Keep your temper in check when associates tries to throw cold water on idea you're all steamed up about. Some of her points are worth considering.

Virgo (Aug 23-Sept 22) You're a bit negligent about something you're indebted to another over. It wouldn't be wise to let this matter drift too long.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct 22). You will get a little miffed. A person you always co-operate with won't show the same consideration in return.

Scorpio (Oct 24-Nov 22) Someone is looking to steal the limelight from you regarding an accomplishment you brought about on your own. Keep her off your stage.

Sagittarius (Nov 23-Dec 21) You're a little too loss with your frivolities for something social you're planning. One who will accept is a guest you could do without.

Capricorn (Dec 22-Jan 19) Don't let the woes of the workday world invade your dinner table tonight. Discuss lighter topics that will give you a laugh or two.

Aquarius (Jan 20-Feb 19) This is definitely not the day to rehash a smouldering unsettled issue with your mate.

Pisces (Feb 20-March 20) It would be wise at this time to concentrate on clearing up old obligations before even thinking about assuming a new one.

Tracheotomy Used For 'Shock Lung'

By G. C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 21 and three months ago was involved in a bike accident. I suffered a ruptured spleen. The doctor say they don't know what caused it.

After the operation they thought I was developing pneumonia. My temperature went to 104, I had fluid in my lungs, and one collapsed.

I didn't respond, so was rushed to a hospital in Montreal and my condition was diagnosed as "shock lung." They inserted three chest tubes to reinflate my lung and also performed a tracheotomy and put me in a respirator.

I was told they don't know what caused the shock lung. Do you? And in the future, if need arises, is it possible for them to perform a tracheotomy on me again?—E.W.J.

Technically, I would say the preferred term would be "adult respiratory distress syndrome," but the term shock lung is commonly used. Also the terms "wet lung" and "white lung."

I can't say exactly how shock lung is caused, but can tell you what it is. It is something that may occur with severe injury, shock, overuse of drugs, pneumonia, clots in the lung, critical operations, and the like.

The alveolar capillary membranes are damaged—these membranes are the fine, delicate ones that line the little chambers in the lungs, and it is through these membranes that oxygen is transferred to the blood stream and carbon dioxide is given off in exchange.

When this mechanism is not operating efficiently (and it is made worse, of course, by any fluid in the lungs) the patient becomes short of breath and has all the symptoms of suffocation for lack of oxygen. He is not getting enough oxygen in his blood.

Tracheotomy (putting a tube into the windpipe) and use of a respirator are methods of getting more oxygen into the lungs, and the fact that you say the patient is having difficulty absorbing enough.

Yes, these procedures can be repeated in case of need, but let's hope not you won't need them again.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Will you write about what you usually do with somebody who falls and their neck and head stiffens and draws backward, and then lay down quickly, but have another person especially formed to cushion? What is the cause and what is the remedy? What kind of medicine will keep it off, if anything?—G.M.

You've written a pretty vivid description of a convulsive seizure, or convulsion, such as occurs with epilepsy. The cause is a fault in the part of the brain that governs muscle control. The remedy is medication—usually two medications—for seizures extremely tense.

There are several types of epilepsy. The most severe, convulsive drops of various types, such as you describe. Combinations of them are used to fit individual needs. Rather than suffering repeated attacks, this person is involved should see a physician about getting adequate medication to prevent—or at least minimize—the seizures.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please settle an argument. Is shingles caused from being nervous or from a virus?—L.J.

Shingles is caused by a virus other identical or almost identical to the chickenpox virus. The virus infects some particular nerve track and that is why shingles appears in one area of the body, not in others. That doubtless explains the common misconception that shingles comes from "being nervous."

Win at Bridge

West's play a matter of honor

How would an expert play the hand in today's pole duplicate?

He would attack diamonds first, but he would do so by trick two and then leading trumps a jack of diamonds.

If East is smart enough to play the ace to his king he, but the chances are that East will duck quickly. Then expert South will play the king! The reason for this play is to make sure about the location of the diamond ace. If West held the ace he might let the king hold, but he could never fail to put it on the king.

Then, having located the diamond ace, expert South would go after clubs and wind up with 11 tricks and a good duplicate score.

RECORD Sports 44

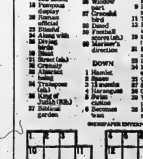
The bidding has been:

West	North	East	South
1 S	Double	Pass	2 D
3 S	Pass	Pass	3 N

You, South, hold:

♠ 8 6 4 ♥ 7 5 3 2 ♦ A Q 8 7 4 3 ♣ 6

What do you do next?



A—Pass. Your partner doesn't have much of a double and you have no support anywhere, although he spoke of spade different.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Instead of passing, East has let two spades over your partner's double. What do you do now?

IN MEMORIAM

TRACEY — In loving memory of a dear father, James Frank who passed away June 12th, 1971.
We wished you could have stayed a little longer,
Our hearts were almost broken, you, Dad, were gone.
Sought to say good-bye with sadness,
Our hearts with sorrow were filled,
You left us in God's loving keeping,
And He knew best, He took you.
As it ends one lonely year,
Sadly missed by daughter Lois, and son-in-law Walter.

TRACEY — In loving memory of a dear father James Frank who passed away June 12th, 1971.
The days flew by, the years flew on,
We think of you the same.
Only those that have lost can tell
The pain that is suffered without farewell
Sadly missed by son Carman, daughter-in-law Terry and family.

ASSELSTINE — In memory of a dear mother and grandmother Jane Ann Asselstine who passed away June 12, 1968.
Six years have passed,
Six years have flown,
Heaven is like our Mother dear,
The angels gave her room.
—Sadly missed by son Walter, daughter-in-law Lois and grandchildren.

CARDS OF THANKS

We would like to thank Mr. Hyndman's community in Frankford for the lovely Reunion roster which they presented to us.
Mr. and Mrs. Ken Hyndman

The family of the late Mrs. Elizabeth Tucker wish to thank Pet-ticrew Funeral Home, Rev. Mr. Matthews church officials and parishioners of Bethesda United Church, friends and neighbours for their kindness and sympathy shown during the illness and at the time of our Mother dear. The floral tributes were also appreciated.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League
Eastern Ontario Club

QUESTION: Can you let us know of a good way of getting to Manitoulin Island by car?

ANSWER: The most interesting way is by he Bruce Trail and the ferry from Tobermory to South Baymouth, taking in some of the points of interest along the way.

We suggest taking Highway 401 to Whitby, the north on No. 12 to Orillia where you may visit the Stephen Leacock Memorial Home on Old Brewery Bay, where the famous Canadian humorist lived and worked.

The Champlain Monument situated in Couchiching Beach Park at Orillia is considered to be one of the finest bronzes on the continent. Also in Orillia are the archeological diggings at the site of the Huron Indian village of Cahiague visited by Champlain in 1615.

From Orillia continue on No. 12 through Waubaushene and Port McNichol to Midland. Here you can become steeped in Huronia's past history. At Little Lake Park here is a full-scale, palisaded Huron Indian Village which depicts living conditions of the 17th century and earlier.

At Midland's outskirts is the Martyrs' Shrine, Canada's national shrine to the Jesuit missionaries killed in the 1600s. Opposite the shrine is the site of Sainte-Marie-among - the - Hurons, a three acre recreation of the Jesuit mission that stood there from 1639 to 1649. Reconstruction of the site followed extensive excavating and research.

Within the palisade are: The first artificial waterway discovered in North America, an Indian Mission Chapel, Ontario's first permanent Christian cemetery, Huron Longhouses, an Algonquin teepee, carpenter and blacksmith shops, drying and storing tracks for meat and fish. Indian shelters and many other interesting examples of habitation of the 17th century.

Close to the Martyr's Shrine Centre, offering hourly shows, guided outdoor walks, live animals and interpretations of wildlife.

Also from Midland there are boat tours of the 30,000 Islands of Georgian Bay. These tours operate daily at 2 p.m. from the end of June to Labor Day.

- Out of Midland take Highway 27 to Elmvale and 92 through Wasaga Beach and on to Collingwood where you can visit the Scenic Caves and Blue Mountain Pottery.

Driving west on Highway 26 through Meaford to Owen Sound, with its Tom Thomson Memorial Art Gallery, and west from there to Highway 6, the Bruce Trail, where you head north to Wiarton. Here is Hermit's Cave and Spirit Rock, legendary scene of an Indian Maiden's suicide.

Continue up the Bruce Trail to Tobermory with its beautiful harbors, known as the Big Tub and Little Tub. From Tobermory there is a car ferry service to South Baymouth on Manitoulin Island. The ferry takes you past the famous Flower Pot Islands in the course of its pleasant three-hour trip.

There are five trips daily from June 23 through September 7. For the balance of the months of June and September, there are two trips daily, each way.

An alternative route home could be by Highway 68 through Espanola, 17 to Sudbury, 69 to Foote's Bay and 103 to Waubaushene.

Churchill Memorial Campaign Slow in Gathering Momentum

LONDON (CP) — One hundred years after his birth, admirers of Sir Winston Churchill voice confidence that he remains a cherished, giant-sized figure for contemporary Britons.

But a campaign aimed at raising 1 million ($2.31 million) for the Churchill Centenary Trust, which will provide extra funds for two national projects commemorating the legendary statesman, appears to have been slow in gathering momentum.

And officials would like to see twice as many persons attending the special Churchill exhibition in London as the 800 a day who were turning up in the initial two weeks after it opened May 16.

The exhibition, depicting Churchill's ancestry and his many decades of adventure and political leadership, continues until Sept. 30.

The question now is whether Churchill's standing with the British people has slipped since his death in 1965.

Certainly, efforts have been made to debunk his achievements as prime minister during the Second World War as din the years preceding it.

But J. R. Colville, chairman of the trust and a former private secretary to Sir Winston, said in an interview that "if you compare Churchill with (former Canadian prime ministers) Mackenzie King and R. B. Bennett and with Franklin Roosevelt, he'd be way debunked than they."

But with the fourth volume of the official Churchill biography due for publication later this year and other books about him continuing to proliferate, there can be no basis for claiming that Churchill is lapsing into anything near oblivion.

But a series of BBC sidewalk interviews occasioned by the unveiling of the new Churchill memorial statues in Parliament Square indicated a surprising lack of knowledge about the late prime minister among British teenagers.

One possible reason for a large-scale ignorance on the part of youngsters about the Churchill record might be the reaction—common across the Western world, at least until recently—against modern war and its most celebrated participants.

Proceeds will be used to increase the activities of two national memorials honoring the wartime chief—Churchill College, Cambridge, and a memorial trust which every year sends 100 men and women abroad with grants to study a variety of subjects.

The Churchill exhibition at the Thames-side landmark known as Somerset House—a 250-year-old former royal residence—serves as a reminder of Churchill in war and peace.

A total of 224 items, ranging from his galaxy of famous hats to many of his paintings, memos and books, convey vivid impressions of his prodigious personality.

The show memorializes Churchill's ancestor, John first Duke of Marlborough, by displaying, among other treasures, an oil portrait of the fur-wheeling soldier dating from 1690.

Every stage of Churchill's own career is recorded with large photographs, cartoons and documents such as the rule book for The Other Club, an eccentric institution which the late prince ministers helped found in 1911.

"Nothing in the rules or intercourse of the club shall interfere with the rancor or asperity of party politics," declared the regulations established by Churchill and his friends.

Then there are affectionate letters to his family and spicy minutes dashed off to his wartime team.

"The telegrams seem to be growing longer and longer," he grumbled in a 1942 note to his foreign secretary. "I quite understand they (the official-dom) all want to help the war by increasing their output. In fact, they clog and hamper."

Through Colville, Churchill told aides in 1944:

"The prime minister wishes it to be recorded that the expression 'most grateful' is not to appear in any letter for his signature. He says that he is the only person who can decide whether he is most grateful or not."

Amid the huge array of Churchilliana, backed by recordings of his booming oratory, perhaps the most poignant is the Union Jack which was draped over his coffin during his state funeral in 1965.

But the Somerset House exhibition is only one of many signs that Churchill would have been a century old this year.

Two others, however, may merely add to the glut in commercially-marketed remembrances of Churchill, thereby compounding the danger of official sainthood, almost two months after its launching in April, that it was—"a very long way off it suffice."

The fund-raising effort had organizational troubles in its early stages. But coming months will see the campaign continuing, a special stamp being reserved for the last two weeks before Churchill's birthday Nov. 30.

Colville said the fund had received some donations from Canada. The organizers were impressed by a letter from a former flying officer with the wartime RCAF saluting Churchill and assuring them that "certainly numerous Canadians can be found to contribute $5 each" to the campaign.

Proceeds will be used to increase the activities of two national memorials honoring

Churchill Memorabilia

Among the many items being shown at an exhibition in London honoring the late Sir Winston Churchill are his passports, identity card, ration book and points coupon book. The exhibition is to mark the 100th anniversary of his birth, but in the first two weeks only 200 people a day were viewing the collection. (CP Photo)

Strikes Out For Servants

PRINCE GEORGE, B.C. (CP) — A Progressive Conservative candidate in the July 8 federal election says a Conservative government would not allow public servants the right to strike.

Frank Oberle, member in the last House and candidate in Prince George-Peace River, said in an interview a Conservative government would replace the right to strike with "a more meaningful system."

Welcome for Nixon

Arabs Stage Raid

TEL AVIV (AP) — Three Arab guerrillas wearing long hair and beady headbands to look like hippie-style foreign volunteer workers slipped across the Lebanese border today, killed three women including one from New Zealand, and wounded three men in an Israeli farming settlement, officials said.

They said an off-duty paratrooper killed two of the terrorists, and the third blew himself up with his own explosives.

In Beirut, the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine General Command claimed responsibility for the attack and said the raid was "our reaction to the Nixon visit to the Arab world."

That is how every Arab should receive Nixon, the chief imperialist in the world," said spokesman Abul Abbas.

He said the attack was still on and denied the guerrillas had been killed.

Nixon was in Alexandria, Egypt today, and the Arab commando assault came three days before his visit to Israel. It brought the number of terrorist victims in Israel to 69, including 31 children. In the last two months.

Semi-official Lebanese sources in Beirut said Israeli artillery pounded the south Lebanese village of Eblés Sahl. Five miles north of the Israel border, in an apparent reprisal for the raid.

The Israeli state radio first, put the number of terrorists at four, but the northern commander, Maj.-Gen. Raphael Eytan, said there were only three.

Eytan said an off-duty paratrooper gagged down two of the terrorists, and the other blew himself up with grenades or explosives before Israeli troops stormed a honey processing factory seized by the Palestinians.

The terrorists attacked the little Israeli farming settlement of Shamir below the foothills of the Golan Heights, the Israeli command said.

One of the women killed was a volunteer from New Zealand. The two other victims were from the settlement.

The commandos killed the women inside the honey factory, about 200 yards from the apparent terrorist [illegible] communal dining hall where some of the 470 residents and foreign volunteers were eating breakfast, Eytan said.

The guerrillas who claimed responsibility for today's raid had demanded the release of 100 Palestinians from Israeli prisons within six hours, but after that deadline passed the demand was delivered to reporters in Beirut the guerrilla squad was reported wiped out.

President Richard Nixon and President Anwar Sadat are all smiles after Nixon arrived at Cairo airport. Nixon said the aim of his visit to Egypt is to work for economic progress and for a peace "which is permanent and equitable." (AP Wirephoto)

Cheers Greet Nixon

CAIRO (AP) — Thousands of Egyptian workers, peasants and schoolchildren cheered President Nixon today as he and President Anwar Sadat travelled in Alexandria by train.

Nixon and Sadat sat on the open end of a century-old coach once used by Khedive Ismail, who opened the Suez canal. An American helicopter circled over the train, and some 10,000 Egyptian troops were deployed along the route, primarily to keep the surging throngs off the tracks.

Egyptian security agents predicted as many as 10 million persons would turn out to see the flag-decked, 13-car train as it moved through the fertile Nile delta to the ancient port the Greeks founded on the Mediterranean.

Nixon and Sadat were relaxed and obviously enjoyed the clear, weather, enthusiastic crowds and happy children running alongside the train.

Railway officials presented Nixon with a gold medallion and gave him and his wife lifetime passes on the Egyptian railways.

As the train moved slowly past stations, crowds cheered and shouted "Welcome, Welcome, Welcome." Troops armed with rifles struggled to hold back the surging masses, and were 20 to 30 persons deep at the stations.

As the train passed through dusty towns barefoot boys sprinted alongside the presidents and farmers paused in their labors to wave and cheer.

Following their midafternoon arrival, Nixon and Sadat were to talk at the Ras el-Tin palace. Then President and Mrs. Nixon were giving a state dinner, reciprocating for the banquet which Sadat and his wife gave for them Wednesday night in Cairo.

Sadat tempered the enthusiasm a bit with his toast at the state dinner, saying he told 400 guests the ceasefires arranged with American help between the Arabs and the Israelis are precious and important, but they are not enough.

He warned that it must be realized that a just peace in the Middle East depends almost entirely on a settlement of the Palestinian problem.

"There is no other solution on the road to a durable peace," he said.

The Egyptian leader said Nixon's visit signifies a change in the traditional American policy of virtually unqualified support for Israel.

Impeachment Evidence Public?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Plagued by leaks to the press, the House of Representatives Judiciary committee is considering making public most of the evidence it has received in its inquiry into the possible impeachment of President Nixon.

Meanwhile, the administration is renewing calls for the committee to open up its proceedings.

The committee's evidence, packed in 25-thick looseleaf notebooks, is being studied by the staff to determine what should still be kept secret, but a majority of the committee appears ready to release most of it as soon as possible.

The proposal to make the material public was advanced Wednesday at a meeting of committee Democrats hastily called by the chairman, Peter Rodino (Dem. N.J.), after news stories based on committee leaks appeared.

The leaks dealt with State Secretary Henry Kissinger's role in the wiretapping of government officials and reporters.

Vice-President Gerald Ford and presidential counselor Dean Burch both accused the committee Wednesday of damaging Kissinger's reputation.

"I feel strongly that this leak process in the judiciary committee is a very strong argument for the necessity of that committee to open up its hearings and let the public see firsthand, not through the leak process, the information they're getting," Ford said.

Burch accused Rodino of failing to carry out a pledge to work expeditiously and fairly.

Rodino said he regretted the leaks and thought they were coming from only a few of the 38 members.

"The committee is trying to do a responsible job under difficult circumstances," he said. "I believe it will be judged on the totality of what it does and not on the actions of a few members."

Besides hoping to nullify leaks, the Democrats want to release the impeachment evidence now before the committee so that it can be made public before White House lawyer James St. Clair presents President Nixon's defence.

If the committee recommends to the House of Representatives that there are grounds for impeachment, and if a House majority then favors impeachment, the case will go to the Senate for a trial that might start shortly after Labor Day, just when members are campaigning for congressional elections.

It would take a two-thirds vote in the Senate to convict and thus oust the president.

The judiciary committee is aiming for a July 15 wrapup of its inquiry, although some members think it will take longer. White House lawyers want to call witnesses and present briefs setting forth the Nixon defence before the proceedings are ended.

Pat Not Amused

CAIRO (AP) — An Egyptian belly dancer gave President Nixon a close-up demonstration of her bumps and wiggles at an official dinner party Wednesday night given by Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

The dancer, Soheir Zaki, tweaked State Secretary Henry Kissinger's hair as she put on her swirling performance and gave impromptu kisses to Pat Nixon and Sadat's wife, Jihan.

Nixon, seated in the front row, applauded the dancer after the same show from the stage to dance close to him. Mrs. Nixon did not appear so amused.

Leger's Condition Continues to Improve

SHERBROOKE, Que. (CP) — The continuing recovery of Gov.-Gen. Jules Leger from a stroke five days ago has led aides and family members to begin discussing how long it will be before he resumes his duties.

A spokesman said Wednesday night that questions now centre on the "period of recovery" compared to the concern when Mr. Leger was given the last rites of the Roman Catholic Church Saturday by his brother, Paul-Emile Cardinal Leger.

Aide Roger Nantel said the Governor-General now can eat what he chooses—"a very good sign, according to doctors." He spends "a great part of the day seated in a chair rather than in bed."

He said Mr. Leger is trying to walk as much as possible and has been out of his room and down a hallway.

However, there still is a speech problem which Mr. Nantel said is natural in such cases. He said it still is too early for doctors at the University of Sherbrooke Medical Centre to determine long term effects on the Governor-General.

Mr. Leger spoke again Wednesday with Mme. Leger and his daughter, Mme. Heléne Frechette of Trois Rivieres, Que.

The Governor-General, 61, reported to be in "fighting spirits," has been feeling himself since Monday.

He fell ill Saturday night at a dinner following the 20th annual University of Sherbrooke convocation at which he received an honorary degree.

The Governor-General was removed Monday from the intensive care unit at the hospital.

Big Raises Approved In Private

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says Metropolitan Toronto school trustees have secretly approved salary increases of 97.2 per cent to 78.4 per cent for 32 senior and middle-ranking administrators.

The newspaper says the to pay for the Metro director of education, which has been $40,500, will be $94,000 this year retroactive to Jan. 1, and $47,500 next January.

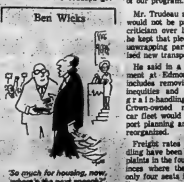
Inflation Overshadows Transportation Talk

By PETER LLOYD
The CANADIAN PRESS

Prime Minister Trudeau chose Wednesday to launch part of his new transportation policy but his announcement was overshadowed on the campaign trail by the latest details on soaring living costs.

Announcement by Statistics Canada that the May increase in the consumer price index was the highest in 23 years evoked the wave of criticism Mr. Trudeau had grown to by day earlier, with Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield leading the attack on the Liberal government.



Campaigning around the Niagara Peninsula for the July 8 election, Mr. Stanfield called the May increase of 1.7 per cent in the index alarming and further proof that his proposed prices and income controls are needed.

There's now no doubt about the failure of the Trudeau government's anti-inflation program . . . and there can be no doubt about the appropriateness of our program."

Mr. Trudeau said Tuesday he would not be preoccupied with criticism over living costs and he kept that pledge Wednesday, unwrapping parts of his promised new transportation policy.

He said in a prepared statement at Edmonton the policy would involve removing freight rate inequities and revamping the grain-handling system. A Crown-owned reserve freight car fleet would be created and port planning and management reorganized.

Freight rates and grain handling have been persistent complaints in the four western provinces where the Liberals hold only four seats in the last Parliament.

$168,000 in OFY Grants for Hastings and Prince Edward

The federal government has allocated $143,000 to 23 Opportunities for Youth programs in Hastings County.

It's a much smaller slice of the total $800,000 allocated for the eight communities in the federal district in OFY's Peterborough region.

Prince Edward County gets about $28,000 for seven projects and Lennox and Addington County approximately $53,200 for six projects.

The federal government this year allocated $29,500,00 in OFY funds for Canada, $7,- 500,000 of it to be spent in Ontario.

As in previous years the largest percentage of grants involve community and recreational services.

In Hastings the biggest allocation goes to a Mohawk Indian, Brant Maracle, of Tyendinaga Reserve. He was given $11,467 for a lacrosse team and cultural research project. The undertaking is called Ken Yen Teh Peoples.

By contrast, the smallest grant goes to a young Belleville man, Ian Kellogg, 4 Keller Dr., gets $703 for a one-man analysis of Ontario public education.

In Prince Edward, the largest funding — $4,300 — goes to Rednose Young, of RR 1 Picton, for a craft revival that will include operation of a retail outlet for handicrafted goods by county hobbyists and semi-professionals.

Smallest allocation thus received by Ann Walmsley to paint a two-part mural on a Picton parking lot.

Project 25th Century Service, headed by Joanne Rutter, Bloomfield — with $4,700 — does odd jobs and errands for Picton's disabled and elderly.

Project "Open House," an effort by Pat Rose of Milford, with $2,400, is geared to fill the leisure hours of persons in all age groups in the community.

T.V. Productions, headed by Susan McKenzie, was granted $4,523 toward assisting local persons in awareness of community happenings through television.

Prince Edward County Parent Relief received $3,564, to establish a daycare-type agency for parents of retarded and emotionally handicapped children.

Prince Edward County Summer Calendar, under the direction of Mary Macdonald of Bloomfield, was granted $1,540 for a pamphlet on points of interest and weekly happenings in Prince Edward.

Ontario for OFY grants for clubs concerning benefit, the extent of youth involvement, innovation and participants needs. High school students may earn $70 a week and post-secondary graduates $98.

The local OFY staff had only up to one month to decide on projects. This was done in consultation with local agencies and interest groups.

Up, Up and At It in Gardens Roof

Arena Roof Ready Soon

TRENTON — The $60,000 restoration of Trenton Community Gardens roof is nearing completion, according to foreman Fred VanVaale.

Mivo—Wiggers were given until June 22 to complete the job which included ripping off much of the roof and recovering it.

Services Go Underground

TRENTON — Installation of underground electrical services in Centennial Park here will be completed before July 1, a spokesman for the recreation department said Wednesday.

Conduit has already been placed, with only connection to the main power line and placement of outlets to be completed.

Trenton's Public Utilities Commission asked that permanent services be installed this year for Canada Day — July 1— rather than having exposed wiring along the ground that could be a potential hazard to celebration participants.

No final cost was available on the project.

More Bounty

Marmora and Lake Townships has authorized payment of another wolf bounty, this time to Harold Carman, RR Marmora. Reeve Graham Bell indicated the effectiveness of the bounty in controlling wolves will be reviewed. The township rescinded the bounty last winter prior to its abolition by the provincial government.

Seek Penalty

MARMORA — Marmora and Lake Townships Council has concurred in a resolution by the Provincial Government to increase the penalty for non-payment of property taxes from one per cent to two per cent.

Pittsburgh's reeve Bell was prompted by present high interest rates.

Chamber Feels Money Pinch

TRENTON — Trenton's Chamber of Commerce is beginning to feel the financial pinch.

Its board of directors was told Wednesday the chamber would be $2,209 in the red at the end of the year unless steps were taken to attract a town grant cutback.

Town council chopped 1,029 off the chamber grant application which originally requested $,000.

"We've been too damn honest," said Jack Wilson, chamber manager.

"I was told to ask for 7,000 but I didn't want to hold an unnecessary equity at the end of the year."

From now on the chamber will be charging for services that traditionally have been provided free.

The chamber is considering an extra levy to all downtown merchants for administration of the sidewalk sale. "We must charge an administration cost for anything we get involved with," said Mr. Wilson.

Take 2

"We're always the whipping dog. We must ask more money for everyone except ourselves," he said.

Commenting on cuts — all chamber functions, "we just have to cut everything many things if the budget is to balance," said Mr. Wilson. He did not specify what projects would go first.

Chamber president Barry Box said only that "the chamber is in dire financial straights."

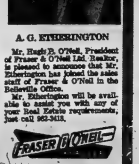
Big Brother Group Suggested for Trenton

TRENTON — The Chamber of Commerce here will spearhead a meeting of area residents interested in the formation of a Big Brother organization.

Roley Thomas, a founder of Big Brother in Belleville, met with the chamber's board of directors Wednesday night to lay down steps in activating such a group.

He said the association could be done on a volunteer part-time or full-time basis, though "in Belleville we're getting beyond the volunteer stage because of the demand."

The aim of Big Brother is to take young people off Clifness Ald has to provide part-time fathers, "developing social skills and handling problems the boy might not have," said Mr. Thomas.



Mr. Thomas suggested the possibility of Belleville and Trenton groups banding together one day in hiring a social worker and putting the Quinte movement on a full-time basis.

Members of the chamber were cautious of too much involvement in the idea, pointing out a town cutback in chamber grants.

We may be getting involved in too many things . . . apparently town council doesn't appreciate what we're doing," said Gary Birt.

Carl Weese suggested that rather than attempting to sell the idea "hoka-hoka" to one service group, an entirely new group should be set up to take it on.

"There isn't an

Stirling Meet Unanimous

New Area Rink Sought

STIRLING — About 200 district residents endorsed the need for a new arena here Wednesday night.

The meeting encouraged a fund-raising committee to continue investigation into feasibility, costs and means of raising funds.

Jack Bush, former Sidney township, reeve, was chairman of the meeting and the audience voted unanimously to proceed with further investigation of the project.

The meeting was told present facilities are inadequate and the 47-year-old rink is beyond renovation. The original rink cost $7,500. It's estimated a modern facility would cost about $300,000 although firm prices have not been established The rink has also served the townships of Sidney, Rawdon and parts of Thurlow. All these municipalities had representatives at the meeting.

Guest speaker was Jack Gorst, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

Picton's Horse Show Set for This Weekend

PICTON — The 14th annual Prince Edward Spring Horse Show, sponsored by the Picton Kiwanis Club, will be held this weekend at the County Centre.

Show spokesman Chris Lockyer of Picton yesterday reported a flood of entries for the three-day event and noted several special attractions have been planned.

The show, which opens Friday, at 7.45 p.m., will feature an exhibition drive of a pair of matched Belgians owned by the Marshall brothers farms of Bloomfield. These heavies will be driven in the Parade of Breeds and Stake performances. Mr. Lockyer termed the horses "a credit to our community."

A tri-sport obstacle race will be held during both nights of the show in program organized by Charles Culmer, of Picton. Skilled drivers will perform barrel races in the arena.

Mr. Lockyer said this year the spring horse show will feature a new class, the pony hunter division. This competition is geared to five horse ponies with great training potential and is a "miniature race horse" class.

Saturday afternoon, the show will move outdoors in front of the grandstand where western classes will be held.

Hunter and jumper classes will be Saturday evening in a separate ring, according to show spokesmen.

Woman JP Appointed

PICTON — James Taylor, MLA Prince Edward — Lennox Wednesday announced from Queen's Park that Mrs. Shirley Bowyer, RR3, Picton, has been appointed a justice of the peace for the province of Ontario.

Mrs Bowyer has been administrator for the horse and family court in Picton for the past five years, and will continue in this capacity.

Four Families Flee Fire

PICTON — Four Picton families fled to safety Tuesday night when fire broke out in the hallway of their second floor apartment on Main Street.

Cause of the blaze that caused approximately $3,000 remains undetermined.

Fire chief Leonard Tripp said today the blaze broke out in the building, owned by Earl Clements of Kingston, at approximately 11:30 p.m. The flames first were spotted by William Henley, a Picton shoe repairman, who operates a store on the building's ground floor.

Mr. Henley drove past the block he noticed fewer lights than usual in the area and stopped to investigate.

Chief Tripp reported that all persons in the building were safely evacuated and the fire confined to the hallway.

Council Can't Halt Speeders

MARMORA—There is no provision in the Ontario Municipal Act to enable Marmora—Lake township to place a boating speed limit on Beaver Creek, council has learned from its legal advisor.

Last month two residents on the creek requested action against careless and speeding drivers on the waterway. Since then both men, Bill Smith and Stan La Chapelle, have been circulating a petition. They have secured 31 signatures endorsing the request for enactment of a law to control speed on the creek.

The lame now will be turned over to the natural resources ministry at Tweed.

Road Furor Cools Down

MARMORA—The dispute between cottage owner Oscar Hess and Marmora—Lake township has cooled at present.

Letters were exchanged by lawyers for both sides about Mr. Hess' threat to close a road on his property to other cottagers if his arrangement for re-routing the road on his property was denied by council.

Last weekend Mr. Hess attempted to take the matter into his own hands by erecting cedar posts on the roadway.

Road superintendent Albert Leonard was dispached to discuss the matter with Mr. Hess and the posts were removed. It was reported that Mr. Hess may have a new proposal to present to Council.

Collection Grows

MARMORA — Eight more large garbage collections boxes at a cost of $894 have been purchased and been placed in different areas of Marmora Township.

Only two of the 140 prospective customers have declined the collection service. Because the service is being provided, those two residents will be required to pay regardless of whether they use it or not.

Councillor Bob Drummond will investigate the cost of adding two more collection points to the contract, at Otto Longstaff's and along No. 14 Highway.

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded to the following call for assistance during the 24-hour period ending at 8 a.m. Thursday:

Wednesday, June 12, 10:43 a.m. smoke investigation at a Bleecker St. building, nothing found.

Car Rolls, Man Hurt

TRENTON — A 25-year-old RR 4 Trenton man was taken to Trenton Memorial Hospital early Thursday morning after his car rolled on a curve on Mount Carmel Road, five miles west of here.

Gordon House was admitted for observation, said a hospital spokesman.

Provincial police at Brighton estimated damage to the vehicle at about 1,000.

Break-in Foiled

An unidentified Belleville man made a break-in attempt at a Mount Pleasant Drive home Wednesday afternoon.

Police report that the woman and her daughter noticed a man removing a screen from a rear window on the house at 13 Mount Pleasant Dr. around 2.27 p.m.

On investigating the incident further, the woman frightened the would-be thief who fled east along Crest St. James Street.

The woman described the break-in artist as a white male, who was approximately 20 years old with a pale complexion. He was said to be approximately five feet, seven inches tall and was wearing blue jeans, a denim jacket and a white shirt.

Marchand's Gaffe

"Marchand dubious about Ron Collister's ancestry." That was the lurking one newspaper, with impeccable taste, decided upon to cover up the coarseness and vulgarity of Transport Minister Marchand's remarks about Conservative candidate Ron Collister the other day.

The irony of it is that the newspaper in question traditionally has supported the Liberals and consequently had good reason to try and smooth over the ministerial gaffe.

It is unlikely that voters will overlook this personal and insulting remark. Marchand now shows himself to be as fluent in both languages, when it comes to smut, as does Prime Minister Trudeau. "Fiddledoddle" is still an unfortunate memory in the minds of many people.

Election campaigns in this country deserve better than politicians — when speaking of opponents — who are loose with their tongues. When they also belong to Cabinet men of the Government in power we are ill-served that much more.

The Royal Connection

The Royal Family and the Royal connection in Canada have suffered bereavement and illness in recent days.

The death of the Duke of Gloucester removes the last of the sons of George V and Queen Mary. A quiet, unassuming man who combined a military career with his family's Royal duties, he will be missed.

Governor-General Jules Leger meanwhile is reported improving following the stroke he suffered in Sherbrooke. For the tall, spare Leger, who spoke on assuming his duties of the value he placed on a daily walk to keep fit, this is an unaccustomed situation. His is a condition, moreover that demands a long period of rest and treatment. We trust he will make a good recovery, sufficient even to resume his duties, while recognizing that such a decision is one that will have to await developments.

Filling A Vacuum

Encouraging for Marmora is the evident progress being made toward filling the vacuum that will be left when the mining company operation closes down in three years' time.

Whatever initiatives are taken — and the community has several in mind — the key is services. Work on a sewage disposal system is being undertaken this year and that will enhance Marmora's prospects for new industry.

Marmora's future looks bright. This is clear from a recent report on progress there. It is a community with a forward look and initiative of the kind that makes it a good place in which to live and work.

One aspect of community life that might need upgrading in Marmora as in many a part of its size, is sport and recreation. To judge from Lloyd Percival's article in Weekend Magazine, which we have mentioned of late, this is still an area where gaps exist.

From The Past

Remember the Hollywood of what seems like the stone age to many middle-aged people today?

The Hollywood of personalities such as Mickey Rooney, Freddie Bartholomew, Roddy McDowall, and Jackie Cooper.

Long before the likes of Robert Redford appeared on the scene we had these earlier stalwarts who were born to the screen.

We remember a scene from a long-ago western in which Jackie Cooper appeared with James Gleason, a veteran star who died at the age of 73 in 1959 — the same year incidentally that marked the death in Vancouver of the legendary Errol Flynn, then a comparatively young 50.

Cooper had stopped a bullet from the bad guys and Gleason, unsympathetic, was berating him for not staying under cover.

We don't recall his ultimate fate, in that particular movie, but in real life Jackie Cooper today is a youthful 52 and looks very much alive. We understand he is on the production end of MASH and he also surfaced recently as master of ceremonies of a humor program featuring stars of past and present.

A lot of us, seeing him again, probably feel a little younger too.

Why Do They Do It?

Candidates Not in Campaign For Good of Their Health

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — So what is it that compels an outwardly ordinary citizen, doing the best he can in the day to day routine of living, suddenly to disrupt his whole pattern of life and run for Parliament?

In the 264 constituencies across the land there are anywhere from two to five or more people sweating out their shoes and bruising their knuckles going from door to door asking you vote for them as your friendly neighborhood Liberal, Social Credit, or What's-It candidate.

They are slashing down countless cups of coffee, making endless speeches that become intolerably boring with unending repetition, getting up early and late, often holding doors and factory gates, staying up late planning tomorrow's campaigning, and worrying all night whether any of it is going to work.

OK, so it is a lot of hard work, and can't really be much fun.

And after watching 12 elections end to end, and spending far too many years around politics and politicians, it might be supposed you would know what makes them run.

Not really.

Still remains a mystery.

They can't all be winners and that political farm chart shows that for every one of the few who make it, usually two and often three or more miss it.

And the winners can't all end up their hard and demanding parliamentary years in the Senate — there are not that many seats there in that finest of all retirement clubs — and so very many winners in today's elections become losers in tomorrow's.

So the brutal odds are that in the field of more than 1,000 candidates, all but the fortunate few, the lucky 264, will go to bed sometime after midnight July 8 with a mindful of blurred memories, in a fog of fatigue, nagged by the knowledge that there are more campaign bills already piled up and still piling up than money to cover them.

And the fortunate few, are they that much luckier?

They have wound up with a same stack of spent bills as the losers.

Relief! How come?

Ask any candidate, and the answer is the same.

Put it all together — every last nickel that comes from your headquarters, every penny from friends and supporters — and it is never enough.

Draft a local-election budget, stick like glue to it, and still, maybe a couple of weeks from election day it runs out.

So the candidate, having gone this far, says, in desperation, "OK, go ahead, buy the newspaper ads for the TV spots or more mailings, or hire those extra people for the phones, spend the dough, we'll scrape it up later."

Maybe he wins or maybe he loses, and they are alone, the morning after the votes are counted, with their memories and those bills.

The winners?

What is the prize?

Getting rich is not one of them: not any more, not with the $12,000 a year increasingly demand of the constituency on the MP, for example, and yes, a piece of the purse.

The $12,000 plus $2,000 tax-free allowance is not the big deal it might have been only a few years ago.

Not with two homes to keep, one back in the constituency and another in Ottawa, even if that one is just a hotel room.

Not with all that running back and forth between Ottawa and the constituency on weekends to keep in touch and to be touched for contributions to every good and worthy community cause going.

So he lives near Ottawa and commutes to Parliament Hill office. When each MP had only one or two staff people to assist — those from the Eastern Ontario and Western Quebec ridings had long lists of chores to do — and for questing politicians.

The campaigning is exhausting, the chances of winning maybe one in three or four, the pay for the winners is not that great, the work is hard, the hours long.

So why do they do it?

Why not ask them.

Parliamentary Assistants

Margaret Scrivener Wins Place in Housing Ministry

By DON O'BEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — The last group of half a dozen parliamentary assistants appointed by Premier Davis are a mixed bag but on the whole a pretty good bunch.

The most surprising, and at the same time most pleasing, appointment was that of Dr. Harry Parrott of Oxford as assistant to Jim Auld in colleges and universities.

The 62-year-old Woodstock orthodontist has been outspoken in his views, which have not always coincided with those of the government, while at the same time making quite a strong contribution to public service.

The premier gets marks for appointing him—though now that he speaks for a ministry we are likely to hear a bit less independence.

Mrs. Margaret Scrivener of Toronto St. David (her age is not a matter of record) has wanted office so badly one almost tended to pity her.

A prolific public speaker and causist at least she shouldn't do any harm, nor not much, as assistant to Sidney Handleman in the ministry of housing.

Arthur Evans, 59, a member for Simcoe Centre is an old pro who was vice-chairman of Ontario Hydro until the recent reorganization.

He is logical as an assistant to Darcy McKeough in energy and probably will handle a good share of the speaking load that the heavily burdened McKeough has had to handle.

Lorne Maeck (pronounced "mack") of Parry Sound is the most personable of the appointees.

This 41-year-old newcomer is a hearty, outgoing type with good municipal experience. One can believe he will be a hard-working assistant to Leo Bernier in natural resources.

With the new minister of health, Frank Miller, coming from the adjoining riding of Muskoka, this section of central northern Ontario now is well represented in the upper echelons.

Finally there is Gordon Walker, 23-year-old lawyer from John Robarts' old riding of London North.

Walker already was an assistant and in the shuffle were merely transferred from revenue to health (which means there now are two non-medical men at the top in this ministry).

Walker already has made his mark, and probably would have been named to the cabinet, at least as minister without portfolio, except that Treasurer John White and Agriculture Minister Bill Stewart are in adjoining ridings.

With White already having announced he won't be running again and Stewart unlikely to be a certainty for the cabinet after the next election, providing the government is returned,

Canada's Indian People And The Ballot Box

Canwest Standard-Freeholder

Although most Canadian Indians still refuse to vote in federal and provincial elections it is noteworthy that Indian participation in government seems to be moving in the direction of municipal government in non-Indian communities.

At least this would seem the case on the St. Regis Reserve. Traditionally the council has been elected, but its chairman appointed from the ranks of council. Now it seems there is a move afoot to have the chairman elected as such, much as a white community would select a reeve or mayor. Also, there is talk of reducing the number on band council from 12 to nine or at the most seven. Current city council has also been debating a similar move from the 12-man council system.

Indians have voted at the reserve level for some years, although under the old longhouse system the chiefs were appointed. Actually there are still a considerable number of longhouse devotees, who no doubt would prefer to revert to the traditional system.

In any case, what we are trying to say is that the Indian seems willing to face and use municipal elections as quite such a threat to his treaty rights as federal and provincial elections, and apparently sees his resistance to the latter as a natural decree of white politicians as the best way of retaining his identity.

During each election, for instance, there is a polling booth set up for the people of Cornwall Island. But it gets no business to speak of.

Some day we would hope that our Indian people and the various levels of government will be able to come up with an Indian Act which will allow Indian participation in elections without the fears which now seem to exist.

The Indian population has more to offer than its cash and its customs. It should be encouraged to participate in government, commerce and other related fields.

In this greater interest and control at the municipal level is a good sign. The Indian who takes his local politics seriously is more likely to think constructively of the country as a whole.

"Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it." Malachi 3:10

The tithes, ten percent of our income, is God's prescribed way of paying for the spread of the gospel at home and around the world. May the Lord help us not to spend something that doesn't belong to us. The "fruit" is the Lord's." Take it to His house, your church, this week and watch how He opens the windows and shall be given unto you."

Why This Shortage Of Labor?

Kitchener-Waterloo Record

"Our main problem is the shortage of labor."

This is the assessment of the problems of 1974 in the construction industry, made by Robert Bird, chairman of the Canadian Construction Association at Calgary. Shortages of materials have been getting the headlines in recent days but the real trouble in carrying out building programs is finding men able and willing to work.

Mr. Bird reckons that if all the construction projected for this year is to be done, 150,000 workers will have to be added to the 675,000 employed in the industry last year. He hopes that 40,000 can be recruited from the ranks of the unemployed, but he reckons that the other 60,000 are to come from.

He must think that after a month that about 500,000 Canadians are unemployed, and drawing unemployment insurance. Many of them are not available for the construction trades, but even allowing for the fact that an unemployed stenographer won't be expected to take a job pushing a wheelbarrow, something is out of kilter when only four construction workers can be found in every 50 people listed as looking for work.

The paradox is one more bit of evidence for a suspicion that the statistics for the number of people drawing unemployment insurance are a poor indication of the truth about the number of people genuinely seeking work.

Financing Of Community Organizations

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

The fan had really begun to blow.

There is fear now among some of our Belleville community organizations that the well might dry up.

A bit of a landslide has started. Information and education to the public on the workings of some organizations is suddenly being withdrawn. Yeah, fervently volunteered, in the hope the public will understand.

Do you understand Mr. and Mrs. Public? Without meaning insult, I say it takes only half a brain to understand.

Remember when — A few people wrote as individuals to request that proper accounting methods be used when presenting financial statements to the public when asking for support.

A few people wrote as individuals to protest the lay-out of large salaries for directors of organizations when such could be done far cheaper.

Individuals had their writings of protest? They were flippantly dismissed as nuts and trouble makers. Only those who were enjoying smooth sailing.

Now the wind blows and the sea becomes a bit rough. There is the possibility that the public might be asked to join the protests by supporting a labor union or shipyards. Rumors, the boat is rocking. Will it become steady again?

To impress you, Mr. and Mrs. Public, the proposed labor motion is referred to as blackmail. Nuts! It is no more blackmail than the man in the moon. It is, however, a method that by its enormity suggests that Mr. Public become interested for a change and puts on his thinking cap and, thinks well maybe, maybe, maybe a bit.

Think well won't you? It is time we all did.

Another word while I'm here. Mrs. Ruth Burrows reported the amount the Central Volunteer Bureau is allowed to carry on its work — $111 monthly which comes to a bit over $1,000-yearly. This bureau, incidentally, is doing a wonderful job. But, it is costing $16,000 odd to direct the digging up of this little amount. To be sure there are other agencies dependent on the same source for funds. I mentioned the Central Volunteer Bureau because Mrs. Burrows told it as it is.

Did you notice the cartoon on page five of Saturday's edition? It was a great cartoon and very well done but the thought I think was a little vulgar and actually out of line.

There is still thinking to be done.

Ontario Cautious On Car Insurance

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government wants to set up a no-fault automobile insurance plan but not like those in Manitoba or British Columbia, a convention of insurance adjusters was told Wednesday.

"The Ontario government is moving slowly and deliberately on no-fault insurance," John Clement, provincial minister of labor, consumer and commercial relations, said. "We are convinced that the present system of claims settlement is too slow, expensive and difficult to the consumer to remain unchanged.

"But we are also certain that a government-run scheme such as those in Manitoba or British Columbia is not the answer either."

Mr. Clement told the Canadian Federation of Insurance Claimsmen that the province is concerned with a fundamental problems in setting up a plan, such as the purpose of the insurance, the place of tort law and the value of the concept of liability.

For example, he said any Ontario plan would make the best use of the private auto insurance industry and its expertise.

"We are not going to do something ourselves that can be safely left to the private sector."

Raise Pension For Teachers

TORONTO (CP) — Premier Wilf Hamilton Davis announced Wednesday that the cabinet has approved pension increases for civil servants and teachers, retroactive to Jan. 1.

The increases will be eight per cent for those receiving a pension before Dec. 31, 1972, and four per cent for those who began receiving a pension during 1973.

Information Program Promotes Good Health

TORONTO (CP) — Health Minister Frank Miller announced Wednesday the launching of an information program designed to promote good health practices across Ontario.

The program calls for the placement of pamphlet racks containing literature on health information in doctors' offices, hospital waiting rooms, and other locations.

The campaign will include newspaper columns, postage meter slug messages and educational resource materials.

Approximately 10,000 literature racks will be distributed during the next few weks.

Three new pamphlets will be released each month, on such facts such as home nursing care, the importance of immunization, ambulance services and how doctors are paid.

The ministry is undertaking the program following a successful trial run earlier this year.

Beer Shirts Under Fire

TORONTO (CP) — The Liquor Control Board of Ontario (LCBO) is trying to stop the sale of children's T-shirts bearing reproduction of beer labels.

James Harris, deputy chief commissioner, said Wednesday that board lawyers will meet with lawyers for the breweries to determine whether label copyrights can stop reproduction.

THE HASTINGS COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION
AUDITORS' REPORT

TO THE SUPPORTERS OF
THE HASTINGS COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION

We have examined the Balance Sheet of The Hastings County Board of Education as at December 31, 1973, the Revenue Fund - Statement of Operations and the Statement of Source and Application of Capital Funds for the year then ended. Our examination included a general review of the accounting procedures and such tests of accounting records and other supporting evidence as we considered necessary in the circumstances.

In our opinion these Financial Statements present fairly the financial position of the Board as at December 31, 1973 and the results of its operations and the source of and application of its capital funds for the year then ended, in accordance with accounting principles generally accepted for Ontario school boards applied on a basis consistent with that of the preceding year.

Seaforth Highlander Commander Liberated Amsterdam, Sold Toys

VANCOUVER (CP) — He was age 22, three times decorated and in command of his own regiment, the Seaforth Highlanders.

He had just liberated Amsterdam at the end of the Second World War, his Canadians outnumbered 10 to 1 by fully-armed Germans and the tricky terrain of Holland underground.

A year later, the retired brigadier was home in Vancouver again—selling toys. Shortly thereafter, he was fired.

"It was quite an interesting experience," H. P. (Dudge) Bell-Irving said with a smile.

An interview with Mr. Bell-Irving before he took over as president of the Vancouver Board of Trade earlier this year disclosed that much of his life has been "an interesting experience."

And going back to the days of his grandfather, who arrived in Vancouver just before the big fire of 1886, he opened up more colorful stories—such as the time Stanley Park was defended against several boatloads of pirate beggers.

"One day," said Mr. Bell-Irving, "grandfather was sitting in his living room in the Seaton Street house, looking out over Burrard Inlet, when he saw several boats carrying beggers and their axes heading for Deadman's Island off Stanley Park.

"He phoned the police . . . and with several other men, joined the police in their horse and buggy. They raced down the boardwalk and over the wooden bridge (today's driveway into the park, entrance) and fought off the beggers.

Whether the fighting was strictly on the verbal level or whether it actually came to blows wasn't clear.

Mr. Bell-Irving's roots are deep in Vancouver soil.

His grandfather "reached Vancouver, then called Granville, in the fall of 1885, after helping build the CPR line across the Rockies. The population of the bush town at that time was about 700.

Much of Mr. Bell-Irving's life has been governed by wars. When he was only two, his father joined the navy and took the family back to England for the First World War.

Soon after his marriage to Nancy Symes in 1972, the Second World War broke out and Mr. Bell-Irving took his wife with him when he was ordered to England in 1939.

A lieutenant with the Seaforth Highlanders, Mr. Bell-Irving stayed in England until the regiment left for Sicily in 1943. He was promoted to major and won the Distinguished Service Order and bar and was made an officer of the Order of the British Empire for his part in the fighting in Italy.

Back to England after a bout with malaria and Mr. Bell-Irving took command of the Canadian battle school, "where we scared hell out of the new Canadian officers to prepare them for the Germans."

More fighting around Europe and another bout with malaria. Then Mr. Bell-Irving rejoined his regiment the night before VE-Day.

"We marched into Amsterdam to take the surrender of the Germans and occupy the city," he said.

"We experienced the most extraordinary gratitude of the Dutch people. Old and young, they were kneeling, row on row, on both sides of our route, throwing flowers."

But it wasn't all flowers. Some of the excitement was rather nerve-wracking.

"We were about 450 Canadians with 3,000 fully-armed Germans all around us," said Mr. Bell-Irving. "The Dutch underground still wasn't under control and there was the constant danger of fighting breaking out, which could have led to a massacre."

On his return to Vancouver in the spring of 1946, Mr. Bell-Irving "had no job and no money. "It was a strange feeling," he said.

But through a wartime friendship with Walter Lines, chairman of Lines Bros., one of the largest toy manufacturers in the world, Mr. Bell-Irving became the company's North American agent.

Two years later, because of corporate politics and also because Mr. Bell-Irving wanted more autonomy for North American than London was prepared to give, he was fired.

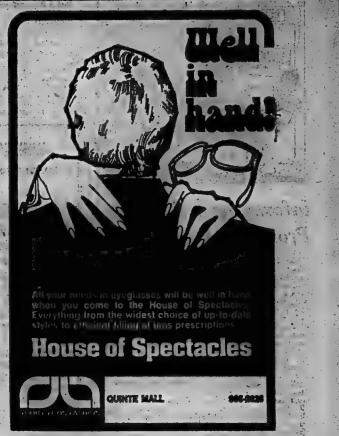
"Looking at it from their point of view, I guess I was getting to be a bit of a nuisance," he said.

He joined the family's real estate business, but within 10 years was on his own in the real estate and insurance field. He stayed that way until his company merged with A. E. LePage Ltd. of Toronto in 1972.

Today he is chairman and president of A. E. LePage Western Ltd. and a director of A. E. LePage Ltd. of Toronto. He was president of the Canadian Real Estate Association in 1972.

As new Board of Trade president, Mr. Bell-Irving sees a need for a more educated electorate to help provide a more enlightened democracy.

"Democracy suffers tremendously from a lack of interest on the part of the electorate, which in turn leads to a lack of knowledge," he said.



"To worsen the situation, politicians by nature tend to do what is expedient to get elected rather than what is in the best long-term interests of the people."

He suggested that the board could take a positive role in helping to make the political process a more effective one.

While a year ago Mr. Bell-Irving was rather critical of B.C.'s new government, today he has a few words of cautious praise.

"Although the workings of what the NDP are, trying to do aren't all that smooth yet, I do support the principle behind the Land Commission Act, and the government is doing good work in the health field," he said.

"But I don't think they've been as successful in housing. There' actions appear to have led to the curtailment of prospecting by small prospectors, which is not good."

Want Kitchen

MARMORA—A request for kitchen facilities upstairs in the town hall has been received from the New Century Organization by Marmora Village Council. The request was turned over to Bill McKenzie, chairman of the property committee.

Stella Golden, chairman of the New Century Organization, said in her letter that the 14 organizations in the organization have indicated that they would make use of the hall if kitchen facilities were available. Mrs. Golden said that additional revenue would result from more rentals.

Former Mental Patients Find Friends in 'Tribal'

TORONTO (CP) — Facing life alone after being discharged from a mental institution can mean downfall for many former patients.

So says Dale Butterfill, co-ordinator of Tribal, a Toronto group which is establishing co-operative homes for ex-patients.

"The Tribal project, launched last winter and funded by an $11,500 grant from the federal government's Local Initiatives Program, so far has established two houses, each holding up to five people. The first house opened last March, the other last August.

"At the outset, we tell landlords the purpose of the houses. If they accept us, we make sure they become acquainted with the residents-to-be and are satisfied they are reliable tenants," says Miss Butterfill.

"Residents are previously referred by social workers in hospitals who are aware of Tribal's setup. Then we hold meetings of interested ex-patients to determine who might best benefit from a co-operative living situation. Also, it gives us the opportunity to select up to five people with some degree of kinship who could move into a house together."

Each resident in the houses is responsible for paying his own rent and utility costs, with average rent about $55 a month.

Houses are encouraged to be independent of Tribal.

"We offer support, to residents but we do not encourage their reliance on us to help them out of a difficult situation," said Miss Butterfill.

"If there is a problem in the house that we hear about, we hold a house meeting with the residents to discuss the matter, but we do not assume any authority in decision-making."

The residents of the houses are enthusiastic about their new way of life.

Phyllis, a 37-year-old former housewife from Markham Ontario who was suffering from acute nervous problems, says:

"I was a little leery at first. The idea of going into a home with four strangers seemed a bit odd, but now I think it's done a lot for me. My nerves are better, I feel more responsible for myself and the four other people here."

The four others sharing the house with Phyllis are young men, former psychiatric patients. Two are taking retraining courses and two have steady jobs.

"As we've all been through a similar situation in psychiatric hospitals, we are able to communicate, talk our problems out with one another," says Phyllis.

Bill, who once was introverted and couldn't deal with people, says he's different now.

"Before, I wouldn't do anything for anybody. Now I cook for the group and I'm in charge of collecting all the rent and money for utilities from each resident. Then I pay the bills."

Tribal isn't content to rest on its achievements so far, though. Miss Butterfill would like to see more houses set up.

"We intend to investigate how many more houses could be productively used in Toronto. Also we'd like to see if these could not be set up in a volunteer system consisting of people in the house and the community. I think it would be highly possible since the cost per house is minimal

Albert College will be the site of the 100th anniversary convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, June 17 to 20.

The WCTU is a world-wide organization, operating in 70 countries with more than a million members. For a century, the members of the organization have stood for total abstinence from all alcoholic beverages. They seek to educate youth, through essay and poster contest, about the dangers of the use of all types of drugs.

For several years the Ontario WCTU has sponsored an annual Youth-a-rama.

"Youths are led to commit their lives to Christ and the One who can give them a greater thrill than drugs or alcohol," says Mrs. Frank Hobbs of Trenton, a member of the WCTU. A youth night will be held Tuesday at 7.30 p.m. and a provincial Christian Youth of the Year contest will be held.

Mrs. T. S. Armstrong, provincial president, will preside at the convention.

Cuts Poundage

DARTMOUTH, N.S. (CP) — The Dartmouth YM-YWCA is offering a 10-week course for overweight teen-age girls and women called Pounds Rapper; Canadian Armed Forces is changing conditions of service for woman members, but it won't give them preferential treatment over men, says Col. M. G. Valance, forces director of women personnel. The changes follow the acceptance by the department of national defence in 1971 of recommendations of the royal commission on the status of women. With equal opportunities come other changes, among them being that a woman will not be released from the forces solely because she is pregnant.

Ann Landers

Kids Never Too Young For Honest Answers

Dear Ann Landers: I am wondering how far I can go in publishing an article. Some of the things you print would not have entered their minds for several years if you hadn't brought them up. My 11-year-old asked me yesterday, "What is a homosexual?" How on earth can you explain that to a mere child?

You have made life difficult for me and I resent it. Sex education belongs in the home and not in the newspaper. I believe in giving children information when they are ready for it, not before.—No Fan Of Yours

Dear No Fan: Children of all ages deserve honest answers to any and all questions. An 11-year-old who asks: "What is a homosexual?" should be told it is a person who prefers a sexual partner of his (or her) own sex to those of the opposite sex. No more details are necessary.

Are you aware that in spite of the fact that we now have a cure for VD, there are millions of untreated people in this country who are infecting others every day? Eleven is not too young for children to know about these crippling diseases. From the sound of your letter, your kids need to read my column because I don't think you are emotionally mature or well enough informed to give them straight answers.

The next letter might be of interest to you.

Dear Ann Landers: I believe the most valuable service you have performed in all the years you've been writing is the information you have given our youth on the symptoms and hazards of VD.

I am the principal of a school in North Carolina. Your column has appeared in our paper for 17 years, and your column was the first in which they ever printed anything about VD.

I remember the stir it caused at a PTA meeting back in 1958. People actually rose up in arms. The enlightened parents in our school applauded you. They said they discussed your column with their children and it helped put things in the proper perspective. The unenlightened parents thought it was outrageous that such topics as sex and VD should appear in a family newspaper.

Readers' Cards Can Help

By DORIS CLARK

I have a pleasant note from Mandalay — our good friends at the Christian Radio-Audio Visual Aids Committee of the Burma Christian Council.

The good news is that even before our January appeal for used greeting cards, card parcels had arrived there from about 100 of our readers. The writer adds:

"Some of the readers send quite a number of parcels during the year and some of them are corresponding regularly with me, would you believe? Ten in love with so many dear ladies from your country (Canada) and they are writing in my age group — I am 52 years."

Amy Peters — the one who writes — reported a very cold winter, October to February, with a charcoal fire for warmth at her office. At home, she says, "I hugged the hot water bag." She also said that during one stretch many of them were sick: little infants and a few old people died due to the severe cold. By February it was beginning to warm up.

How nice to be able to reach out across the world a hand of friendship! The morale boost it must give this Burmese missionary cannot be truly estimated — no more than we can truly imagine the difficulties under which such persons bring help to countries less fortunate (in material things) than ours.

Dear Doris: I don't want my children to grow up to be like me as it is quite painful emotionally. I was taught to love my fellow man; not to argue or to disagree too much, and in general to just plain be pleasant most of the time.

Now I am finding that this doesn't seem to fit the majority of people. They mostly seem to enjoy a good argument and when they don't get it from me they turn to someone else. This has always puzzled me and left me feeling hurt and friendless.

Tough Going

Dear Tough Going: All of which means that you have been deprived of asserting your own opinions and personality for the sake of "peace at any price". It won't do. It never does.

The social skills do involve having thoughts and opinions of your own, and having the self-confidence to express them. There are times when one has to stand up for one's own ideas in no uncertain terms.

The home where a child is helped to think things through to his own conclusion is the best. The home where father talks down his boy by calling him a "smart aleck teenager" just doesn't produce anything but damaged definition in a boy.

You can still help you children, change yourself and enjoy some self-expression. If folks couldn't change, at almost any age, social work wouldn't be worth bothering with.

Confidential to Common-Law Wife: Under certain conditions, common - law unions are recognized in the Canada Pension Plan. Whether or not a common-law wife can collect the man's pension when he dies depends on whether the minister who administered the act considers her eligible, after noting all the facts. Each case is settled on its own merits, and I would suggest that you discuss yours with the Canada Pension Plan office nearest you.

Your Recipe Can Win

Cookbook, Recipe Contest Coming Soon

Your very special Sunday supper casserole or that special vegetable you serve this year's famous for can turn you into a winner in The Intelligencer's cooking contest.

In conjunction with the publication of our cookbook this year, The Intelligencer is sponsoring a recipe competition.

Here's how it will work: readers are invited to submit recipes for publication in our cookbook. No more than one recipe per category will be accepted from each person and in the case of duplicate recipes, the first received will be published. Except for clarifications, all recipes submitted will be published, along with the sender's name and address.

All recipes submitted will be entered in the competition.

You can win in The Intelligence's contest two ways: first, all submissions will be entered in a draw for a major prize to be announced at a later date. Secondly, one recipe in each category will be chosen best of category and the contributor rewarded a cash prize ($25.00) and dinner for two persons at one of four local restaurants: Four Seasons, Hotel Quinte, Pape's Steak House and Sun Loch. (Prize winners will draw for restaurant location.)

Recipe categories are Main Dish; Vegetable or Salad; Dessert; Soups and Appetizers.

Women 'Older and Wiser'

BOSTON (AP) — Older and wiser may well be the way to describe the 21st century woman, one expert says.

By the year 2000, the median age for women will be about 35 and the average woman will be better educated in a greater variety of fields. So predicts W. Keane Bowler, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Pioneer Western Corp., a national financial services organization.

Bowler says a woman in the year 2000 will live longer, benefiting from major medical discoveries, and will be in significantly better health during her senior years. Consequently, two careers will be possible: pre-and post-retirement.

Women will remain in school longer, taking advantage of community colleges and technical training facilities. New teaching techniques utilizing computer technology will enable her to learn at home as well.

Women will make up 45 per cent of the work force of the 39 per cent, Bowler predicts, adding "Careers once reserved for men will now be open to female workers, particularly crafts and trades."

Bowler says women will be older when they marry and will have two children. "Technological developments in household management will make it easier to combine childrearing with outside employment."

Entries will only be accepted on The Intelligencer's official form which will be published Saturday, June 15. The competition closes July 31.

Here are the rules for submitting a recipe: recipes must be typed or printed on the form provided. (Forms will be published regularly until the contest closing date.)

Entrants must indicate, in the box provided in which category he or she wishes the recipe entered and must provide a recipe name. Entries must include name, address and phone number.

Ingredients must be printed in list form, using standard measurements. Full instructions must be included. Recipes using brand name ingredients will not qualify for publication or entry in the competition.

A panel of three judges will select the winning recipe in each category and their decision will be final.

Judges are Kay Pape, widely-known for her gourmet cooking; Ed Gould, European-trained chef and Loyalist instructor; Dorothy Proudfoot, as Dorothy MacKeen known professionally as Dorothy Batchelor, home economist and well-known cooking expert.

The cookbook, which will include the winning recipes and winners, will be published, August 30.

Watch for publication of the entry form and rules in Saturday's Intelligencer.

Communications Guru McLuhan Says Politics 'Shooting from Lip'

TORONTO (CP) — Communications expert Marshall McLuhan says politics is shooting from the lip.

The prophet of pop culture has, it seems, become the poet of the inflation crisis.

Whatever the label, Prof. McLuhan is still at it. He insists he has no theories, only observations—and he pours them out into five or six books at a time.

"My observations," he said in an interview, "have continued to pass in on developments."

When he isn't writing, Prof. McLuhan presides over the turbulent affairs of the teaching centre he founded, the Centre for Culture and Technology at St. Michael's College, University of Toronto.

Its name has a futuristic ring, but this institution is an old coach-house with a quaint peaked roof and cow bell tree growing by the front door.

The centre is part of the university but not all classes are restricted to university students. Every Monday from 8 to 10 p.m. there is an "open" session.

The walls are covered with posters. One hand-lettered sign says: "The first thing is to gain perception, though it cost you all you have."

Instead of a blackboard there is a psychedelic mural at the front of the room.

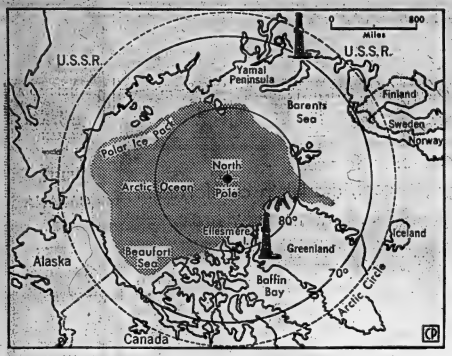
Prof. McLuhan has the appearance of a distinguished, highly conservative English professor. His grey suit and precise manner of speaking contribute to an aura of cool reserve.

But his classroom hasn't the glum atmosphere usually associated with learning. The emphasis is on discovery rather than instruction.

"Our object is simply to study situations developing around us by the means of technology," he said. "We are currently engaged in doing an inventory of all the breakthroughs in all the arts and sciences since 1500.

"That is a breakthrough! It's very simple. Whatever upsets the applecart is a breakthrough. When you see the people scrambling around trying to pick up the apples, then you know you've made a breakthrough.

Research at the Centre for Culture and Technology is being carried out on something called a speech compressor. The exact workings of this device are obscure but apparently it permits English words to be heard at several times the usual reading rate.



The speech compressor "pushes language into a new rhythmic form, making it more memorable and intensifying the impact." Pushed a little farther the speed-up flips into song, say the inventors.

Although in Prof. McLuhan's classroom the audience is encouraged to share in explorations, to participate in "the total electric drama," there can be little doubt that many come just to watch McLuhan.

From time to time he emits the sparks that have made him famous. This happens most often when he is on the subject he likes best—the media and their effects.

Modern society "has degenerated from a physical to an ethereal event," he said. "We're no longer substantial beings."

"You're on the air' means you are everywhere at this planet at the same moment. That means a considerable etherealization of your own being . . . a dimension. When they spread you that thin, there's not much of you."

Well at Top of the World

The world's most northerly well, the Gulf Westcoast et al Neil 9-15, is drilling below 5,100 feet only 600 miles from the North Pole. This well on Canada's Ellesmere Island is being drilled by Panarctic Oils Ltd., for Gulf Oil Canada Ltd. Sawmill Puts Heat On Staff

FRASER LAKE, B.C. (CP) — Heating pads on the floor to protect workers' feet from freezing is one measure used by Fraser Lake Mills in this central British Columbia community to combat winter cold and keep the sawmill in production.

When temperatures hover at the 30-below mark, inside mill temperatures warm only up 12 or 15 degrees below zero. Hence the heating pads.

Workers stand on them while they work.

"The people in here don't get much chance to move around, says General Manager Derek Mankiow. "The heating pads must not be too hot otherwise people would sweat and that is the worst thing that could happen in these temperatures."

The electric pads merely raise floor temperatures a few degrees to a more tolerable level.

Measures such as this have enabled the mill to lose only a few days production since it began to cold, generally in January when temperatures drop to 35 or 40 below.

Even then, it's not because of the workers that operations stop but because of metal shrinkage from the cold.

The critical point is reached when bolts on the saw will no longer tighten. About four years ago the mill lost several weeks work during an unusually prolonged cold spell.

Mountie Got His Man For All Three Forces

EDMONTON (CP) — Many men have spent more time in Canada's mounted police force than Fred Bard, but none can equal the number of forces he served.

Mr. Bard has the distinction of holding discharge papers from all three forces—the North West Mounted Police, the Royal North West Mounted Police and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. He says he is the only living person who can make that claim.

"I've been offered plenty of money for these big mementos," he said, displaying the three discharge papers which are yellowing with age. "But I'm not selling them."

At 92, Mr. Bard occupies a small, spotless apartment west of Edmonton's downtown section. His age is reflected in his slow, careful step and the fact that his eyes occasionally water but his memory is sharp and he recounts stories of his years with the mounted police with relish.

One of his favorites concerns an incident about 1920, when he was travelling across Saskatchewan to Fort Macleod in southern Alberta.

"It was 45 below and there was a blizzard," he said, adding that he suddenly spotted a "big string of cattle."

Standing up to act out his story, complete with facial expressions, Mr. Bard said he approached the cattle to see "what the deuce they've got over there."

He found a frozen body covered with ice, which he presumed very that of a fellow Mountie but could not identify. "I dragged it back by the scruff."

A fellow corporal's house, he used a stove lifter to break the ice on the victim's face and discovered it was his own partner.

His face grimacing at the memory, Mr. Bard said he called to the corporal to get some coal oil.

"'If you ain't crazy,' he said, 'making all this mess.'

"'Maybe,' I said, 'we'll see . . .'

By the time the corporal returned with the coal oil, Mr. Bard had cut the clothes off the victim and wrapped him in some blankets. He poured the coal oil over the body.

"A woman came and me that if you ever freeze your hand, soak it in coal oil and you won't lose so much as a fingernail."

Mr. Bard and the corporal moved to another room and waited. Eventually they heard a moan and rushed in to find Mr. Bard's partner alive.

More than 50 years later, Mr. Bard's face still brightens as he recounts the end of his story.

Born in Cambridgeshire, England, he came to Canada in 1903 after serving two years in the Boer War. Three two years in South Africa convinced "the toughest time in my life."

"They lived on water and biscuits," he said, and "I had 23 different horses in the two years."

"The poor devils dropped dead under me."

"I was looking for excitement, and I sure found it."

In Canada, Mr. Bard took up coal mining in Alberta, then part of the North West Territories. He joined the North West Mounted Police at Regina in 1903.

In 1907, Mr. Bard purchased his way out of the force. "It cost me over $100," he said, explaining he made the move because "all I could speak was Indian reservations. . . ."

"I got so goldarned mad I just bought myself out. I got fed up; I never saw a white man."

He said he was told the reason he was posted to the reservations was because he was "about the only one who could speak the Blood language."

In 1914, when the First World War broke out, he enlisted—this time with the Royal North West Mounted Police—because "I thought here's a chance to fight."

But "they held me in Canada for two years," he said, his face showing disgust at the memory. "I joined because I thought I'd get to go overseas."

In 1918 he left the force and joined the services, going to England and France. In 1919 he turned to homesteading in Saskatchewan.

"I've been in Edmonton about 40 years now," he said, adding he first saw the city in 1905, when he visited while serving as mounted escort to Gov.-Gen. Earl Grey.

Two hundred of us camped down below the Macdonald Hotel. There was a race track down there and the Macdonald Hotel was a wooden shack.

"I don't think a mounted policeman ever ever experiences than I did."

Bard of the Mounted

Fred Bard is the only living person who has served in Canada's mounted police in its three phases—the North West Mounted Police, the Royal North West Mounted Police and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. Mr. Bard, 95 who now lives in Edmonton, also fought in the Boer War and with the Canadian forces in the First World War. (CP Photo)

Ceylon's Air Force Now Tourist Taxis

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — The air force here is in the tourist business.

The military uses half of its 59 aircraft as tourist taxis, charging stiff hourly rates payable in hard foreign currency needed to prop up the tottering economy of this island nation once called Ceylon.

The officer in charge, Sqdn. Ldr. Noel Fernando, says "the service brought in $198,000 last year—enough to cover the entire foreign exchange outlay of the air force."

"For this year, my target is $500,000," he told a visitor. "And I think it is well within my reach."

Fernando brought the first four women into the Sri Lanka air force. He put them in mid-calf skirted uniforms and assigned them to serve snacks and drinks to the flying tourists.

"The tourists can purchase a bottle of beer," he said, "not at duty-free rates, of course, but for foreign exchange."

Last year more than 5,000 of the 77,000 tourists who visited here paid $140 an hour for helicopter tours to scenic spots on the island, scheduled rates for single-engine Cessna flights out of Colombo or two-hour trips to the Maldive Islands about 420 miles south.

The idea of using air force planes and pilots to carry around tourists was born soon after the 1971 insurrection against the government of Prime Minister Sirimavo Bandaranaike.

Aid came in from all sides, including the United States, to help the government put down the revolt. By the time the uprising was ended, the air force had doubled to more than 2,000 men and its budget had jumped to $4.3 million, from $1.7 million, more than the country of 13 million needed.

"We thought, let's put this surplus to some use," recalled Fernando. "We were told if you have excess flying time, go ahead and flog it, purely for foreign exchange."

After some small helicopter deals with German and Swedish firms, Fernando's government saw the foreign exchange earnings roll in.

He met resistance from traditionalist-minded officers and officials of Air Ceylon, the national airline. But when Mrs. Bandaranaike's government saw the foreign exchange earnings roll in, Fernando's crews now fly seven U.S.-made Bell206 helicopters, two Russian-made KA-2 helicopters, four single-engine Cessnas, six single-engine Cessnas, four medium-size Herrons and the airliner-sized Convair.

Provinces Get in on Act

Most of Canada's provincial premiers, with no political battles of their own to worry about, are expected to provide a lot of support for their national parties during the current election campaign. Map shows how the federal parties fared province by province in the 1972 election and the general voting picture for the last seven elections. (CP - Newsmap)

Trudeau's Rose Wilts Under Heckling Heat

EDMONTON (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau delivered an impassioned address Wednesday night marked with considerable frustration and occasional annoyance after his attempts to make a "non-political" speech were jolted by hecklers.

His shirt open at the collar and the rose in his lapel wilting in the 75 - degree temperature Mr. Trudeau had taken the microphone during a public rally at Coronation Park in what appeared to be good humor.

"If you're almost too nice to be making a political speech in," he told the crowd pressing against the stage.

But his chatty comments soon met with questions from the audience.

"If you want to get it political, start heckling," Mr. Trudeau said. "But if you want it to be nice."

He stopped, listened to another comment from a member of the audience and said:

"Aw, he wants to talk about inflation."

His face lost its good-humored expression for a moment. Then suddenly he perked up.

"I had some kids in (a high school rally) this morning and one of them said we don't pay enough for our sugar. And he was right."

More heckles from the audience.

"Let's not get obsessed with inflation," he said. "Of course we're trying to do something about it. . . ."

But he added that people shouldn't expect the government suddenly to lower sugar prices paid to the people who are trying to produce sugar to make a living and make ends meet.

"All right, so gasoline prices have gone up. But we're still paying $4 less for our gas than the world price."

Earlier in the day, to a speech in Edmonton International Airport, the prime minister unwrapped parts of the government's new transportation policy, pledging to remove the regional inequities in freight rates and to revamp the entire grain-handling system.

The policy statement covered a broad range of issues and included plans to create a Crown corset reserve freight car fleet and to restructure ports and transport.

". . . We are abandoning the outmoded (freight rate) structure which was based on the belief that competition would result in fairly based on the real cost of the service . . ."

This would be replaced by a system in which shippers of agricultural and industrial commodities pay "an amount which is fairly based on the real cost of their service . . ."

"In no case will the rate for a short haul exceed the rate for a long haul, as it has in the past."

However, the prime minister said that in special cases—such as the Maritimes and the Crowsnest Pass rates—charges less than cost of service still will apply.

The Crowsnest Pass rates were set in 1896 to provide low rates for export grain moving through Thunder Bay, Ont.

Freight rates have been a long-standing irritant in the four Western provinces where the Liberals hold only seven seats. Westerners complain that freight rates are high and discriminatory.

Stanfield Attacks Prejudices of PM

HAMILTON (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau was accused Wednesday night by Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield of raising old prejudices in his current election campaign.

Mr. Stanfield said in a packed high school auditorium here that the prime minister is pitting region against region and province against province.

"It is meant to divide the country and . . . the cost of that kind of political strategy is too great a price to pay."

After receiving a glowing introduction from Ontario Premier William Davis, the Conservative leader said the Liberals are telling western Canadians to vote against him because he's a friend of Ontario.

"I can't wait to hear what they're going to say about me in Ontario."

He also said Mr. Trudeau is saying that not a single provincial premier supports price and income controls. But, Mr. Stanfield said, support has come from Ontario, British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, New Brunswick and Newfoundland.

"It's a lot harder, my friends, to find a premier in this country who supports the Trudeau policy of do nothing and nothing doing."

Following the release Wednesday of the latest cost-of-living statistics, Mr. Stanfield again devoted much of his time to criticizing government handling of inflation.

He said the ethic of Liberalism now could be described as "economic bigotry—the notion that those who have the least matter the least."

It was difficult to get answers from the prime minister because "he's not taking any questions during the campaign."

"I suppose that's a good policy for someone who has so much to answer for."

Mr. Stanfield said price and income controls should be implemented because nothing else seems to be working and nothing is being given to those people who need help.

To resounding cheers, and applause from all Hamilton-area Conservative candidates, Mr. Stanfield said:

"We're asking the Canadian people to support us and face up to the problems of inflation, and to take the burden of inflation from the backs of those least able to bear it, to support a period of sensible restraint and a program of firm action."

Socialism Object Of Caouette Scorn

MONTREAL (CP) — Real Caouette, Social Credit party leader, brought a rural parable to suburban Longueuil Wednesday night and used it to illustrate how his opponents are using the wrong approach in seeking for social justice.

"It's clear that everyone is not of the same calibre," Mr. Caouette said, "and the socialists want to make everybody equal."

He said it is wrong to play on resentment between income groups and that a society in which all persons are able to be themselves will eliminate social conflict.

"To equalize two rows of trees, one 100 feet high and the other 50, the socialists want to cut the higher trees to the level of the others instead of trying to make the smaller ones grow to reach the higher level," Mr. Caouette said.

"Trudeau, just like Lewis, wants to take from the rich to give to the poor," he said of Liberal Prime Minister Trudeau and New Democratic Party leader David Lewis. "But have you thought that if you take $1 billion from those who have it and distribute it to 22 million people, everyone will get only $8 a month?"

Mr. Caouette said he expected his party to fare well in Montreal because a large part of the city's population is composed of former rural residents.

The Social Creditists are arriving in the city," he said.

Mr. Caouette was addressing about 150 persons at a rally in support of Fernand Bouffard, Social Credit candidate in Longueuil riding.

Earlier, on Montreal radio station CKAC, Mr. Caouette said the 1.7-per-cent rise in the cost-of-living index in May is "a normal consequence of an obsolete financial regime which does not take into account people's needs."

Lewis' Arctic Plan To Protect Natives

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — An Arctic development policy designed to sap the strength of over-ambitious operations while restoring vitality to weakened native rights was outlined Wednesday night by New Democratic Party Leader David Lewis.

There was little new in his hour-long speech to a party rally in this territorial capital, but it was the first time Mr. Lewis had presented his proposal as a package. It was welcomed enthusiastically by the crowd of about 400 persons.

The main thrust was a renewed attack on the giant multinational conglomerates that control most of Canada's natural resources.

Mr. Lewis, referring to the corporations as "fast-buck artists" oblivious to the needs of native peoples and northerners, drew a parallel with slum landlords in an area of Vancouver he visited Tuesday during the election campaign.

He said these parasites breed unbelievably destructive social conditions "and nowhere do they exist more than among the native peoples in this country."

The NDP leader said the Mackenzie Valley natural gas pipeline epitomizes the story of the Canadian North and its untapped natural riches.

"Here are 27 corporations, most of them giants and the majority American-owned, forcing upon Canada a pipeline that is likely to be unneeded by this country for at least 15 years.

"They are completely unconcerned with the damages the project will do to the delicate country through which it will pass. They are oblivious to the consequences on the people of the North, a people already culturally under attack.

"They don't give a tinker's damn about the future energy needs of Canada and of Canadians."

Mr. Lewis said the NDP is the only major party pushing for detailed investigation of the pipeline's probable effects.

Job Survey Near Ready

A survey aimed at pinpointing industrial needs and work opportunities in the Belleville area will be mailed to 300 employers in the next two weeks.

The survey is being launched by the Belleville and District Employment Committee after talks with industrialists and educators earlier this year revealed varying opinions about skilled shortage facing industry.

Making of the questionnaire was approved by the BDEC Wednesday. It asks employers their anticipated job and skills needs, which trades and the scarcest and easiest of severions on school and community college graduates entering the work force.

"We're hopeful we'll get a good response", said Fred Bemis, BDEC chairman.

If employers co-operate, the committee could gather some "very valuable information" for analysis of the area job scene.

Breathalyzer Read .370

A 41-year-old Belleville man was fined $250 in provincial court Monday after he was convicted of impaired driving.

Bert Allan Browning 41, was arrested by police April 27 when he was found sleeping in his car which was parked along the west shoulder of Highway around 4:45 a.m.

When Browning was taken to the police station for a breathalyzer test, it was discovered that he had a breathalyzer reading of 370 milligrams of alcohol in 100 millilitres of his blood.

Under the criminal code it is an offence to drive an automobile with more than 80 milligrams of alcohol in 100 millitres of your blood.

$160 Fine For Speeding

A 53-year-old Belleville man was fined $160 in provincial court here Monday after he was convicted of speeding along Canniton Rd. last May 14.

Kenneth Gordon Lyon was arrested by police last May 14 after he was clocked driving at 70 miles an hour in a 50-mile-an-hour zone along Canniton Rd. around 1:30 a.m.

The police officer who arrested Lyon stated in court that after he noticed Lyon's car failed to stop for the light at the intersection of the Canniton Road and College Street.

Talk Arena

MARMORA — Representatives of Chrysler and Latham, consulting engineers hired to do a needs-benefit study for the Marmora arena, will meet with the councils of Marmora and Deloro Villages and Marmora and Lake Township on Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

Purpose of the meeting is to examine details of what information is required for the study.

Together At Last

All three federal election candidates in Hastings riding met together for first time Wednesday night and, despite political rivalry, could chat amiably about the encounter afterwards. The event was meeting of local chartered accountants at which politicians exchanged views, answered questions.

Fewer Freeloaders Said Result of UIC Boost

One result of higher unemployment insurance premiums has been fewer reporting from employers.

And present legislation may labor force — later to swell unemployment statistics.

These were among information sidelights learned by the Belleville and District Employment Committee Wednesday as it heard about unemployment insurance from one of its own members — Vaughan Storey, Belleville district Unemployment Insurance claims office manager said.

And present legislation may labor force — later to swell unemployment statistics.

These were among information sidelights learned by the Belleville and District Employment Committee Wednesday as it heard about unemployment insurance from one of its own members — Vaughan Storey, Belleville district Unemployment Insurance claims office manager said.

For many years employers often felt sympathetic to workers who walked off the job, supporting their applications for unemployment insurance. Now, pressures are coming employers "a lot of money" and they're more interested in UIC administration, and legislation, UIC officials find "very few local disputes" where employers don't refute false claims and claims by well" are giving the true reasons behind job losses.

For example, eight weeks on a job entitles workers to two-thirds of their wages for 25 weeks, Mr. Storey said. This may encourage people to find the labor force since they can see obvious advantages to establishing a work record.

On the other hand, the legislation also is necessary in regions of high unemployment where jobs are short-lived and people are continually seeking work.

UIC administration, Mr. Storey said, has overcome many earlier problems and has seen "remarkable improvement."

"You don't hear too much flak about us outside the media," he said, even where they're dealing with a mass of people.

Generally, there is little delay locally in processing claims.

"Many strides," he said, have been taken to "weed out" those who "are looking on as playing games" with unemployment insurance.

Douglas Sword, Quinte District Labor Council president and Provincial Labor Council representative, E.W. Bogart, operations manager, Brookside Foods; James Clarke, vice-president Stanley Structures Ltd., and S. D. Hagerman, retired Belleville plant manager.

One idea behind such boards is to speed up the correction process where a beneficiary has been wrongfully disqualified, said Mr. Storey.

Members include Ian Reilly, Boot and Shoe Workers Union international representative; Jack Thomas, Kingston-district chairman, Brotherhood of Transport and General Workers;

Claimants have to prove they're actively seeking work while drawing benefits. This could mean up to six job inquiries a week, depending on circumstances.

"We're averaging 41 per cent disqualification on active job search programs," said Mr. Storey.

A coding program, in co-operation with local Canada Manpower offices soon will be completed for instant computer recall. It will permit instant information on occupants available in the area.

In-depth interviews are available to allow persons to explain why they may have left a job voluntarily, before benefit claims are judged.

Average weekly unemployment insurance payment is $67, and while it may be advantageous to some, there "is no way people can live on $67," said Mr. Storey.

But there is always a tendency for everyone to react to statistics, which can lead to wrong impressions about payments, he said.

Kelly K of C Grand Knight

T. A. "Ted" Kelly has been elected Grand Knight of the Knights of Columbus Council 1008 in Belleville.

The election of officers which saw Mr. Kelly re-elected for a second term of office saw J. N. Genereaux named deputy grand knight; W. Jay Foley chancellor; Andre Mercier as warden; D. J. Finkle as recorder; J. Johnson as treasurer, and E. J. Reid as advocate.

Inside guard is A. J. Genereaux; outside guard W. F. Genereaux and trustee, J. N. Chapelle.

At the meeting, K of C members voted to install air conditioning at their Front Street building opposite the Upper Ridge.

Administrators Meet

Visiting officials of the Ontario Municipal Administrators Association, in the city today for their annual conference at the Four Seasons Hotel, are shown Belleville's industrial brochure. Mayor Robin Jeffrey officially welcomed delegates to the conference which will conclude with an evening banquet addressed by Hon. Donald Irvine, Ontario minister without portfolio. In the picture are Adam Stalker, acting city manager for Belleville, Richard W. Travis of Windsor, OMAA secretary treasurer, Gerald A. Tamplyn of Barrie, Association president, and Belleville city engineer Wilbur Purcell, who has been named city manager effective July 1.

Hastings Candidates Agree to Disagree

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

All three federal election candidates in Hastings riding got together to disagree Wednesday night — the first such co-operative confrontation of the constituency campaign.

In essence, it was a mini confrontation. The session wasn't public but before a small, professional group — The Quinte District Chartered Accountants Association.

The duellists were Conservative Jack Ellis, Liberal Marie Kurchak and New Democratic Party candidate Bob Sanders.

While the fencing was sometimes delightful, the cuts and thrusts were lightened by the intimacy of the occasion — a small banquet at the San Luck Gardens — and produced a session which was serious, but without rancor and tempered by humor.

End result saw the candidates still not only on speaking terms with each other, but openly agreeing to mutual enjoyment of the encounter.

Nonetheless, there were some nice highlights as the candidates challenged each other's statements and attitudes.

At one point Mrs. Kurchak interrupted Mr. Ellis after he said some Unemployment Insurance Commission workers at its Belleville regional office were being paid wages below welfare rates.

Take 2

"If you can distort facts like that, I think it's time we got rid of politicians like you that are distorting informa-" said Mrs. Kurchak.

"I'll get the figures and give them to you," challenged Mr. Ellis.

Mr. Sanders also challenged the Ellis statements.

Rick Williams, NDP campaign manager, jokingly asked the Liberal candidate what the Trudeau government would have done in the last legislative session about corporate tax cuts and pensions legislation without the NDP to prod it. "In the end-"

Mrs. Kurchak's reply was a classic blurt: "How do I know what they would have done without you kicking them in the proverbial ass?"

Mr. Sanders accused Mrs. Kurchak of espousing economic policies and job mobility that de-emphasized human factors. The federal candidate accused her opponent of oversimplifying in "typical NDP fashion."

At another point she told Mr. Ellis Ottawa officials she had checked with believed he had been "estranged" over UIC statistics.

Mr. Ellis said he simply answered each of his material from documents published by Statistics Canada. "The UIC itself has been afraid to bring out its latest estimates."

The accountants (executives joined in the repartee.

At one point Mr. Ellis was asked to "explain" how retroactive the Conservatives intended to make price increases that might be considered an attempt to beat a freeze.

"Retroactive to 1917? quipped one member of the audience.

But, Mr. Ellis emphasized, if the Conservatives win power, as a majority or minority government, they will implement their prices and incomes policies "come hell or high water."

He said total control hadn't worked in other countries.

"Are you suggesting that we're not smarter than other countries?" Mr. Ellis shot back. "In this country instead of having a man who says nothing until he's sure we're going to have a man who is going to try and make it work."

Conservative party economists have said such controls would be implemented without increasing the civil service. "Certainly I'm prepared to see it tried rather than have prices going up the way they are," said Mr. Ellis.

Mrs. Kurchak said Conservative financial critic James Gillis had once said controls wouldn't work.

"I just can't buy that," said Mr. Ellis.

"I have a paper at home to prove it," said Mrs. Kurchak.

Nonetheless, all three candidates seemed to find some common ground when questioned on bilingualism.

Mr. Ellis said it would be very, very easy" to endorse Prime Minister Trudeau for trying to split the country, on "I believe very strongly" in Mr. Stanfield's support of bilingualism.

I feel that the French Canadians have every bit as much right to their language as we have to ours," he said.

Mr. Sanders said if Canadians wanted to meet their countrymen "we should do it in their language at any time — and do it with a smile."

Said Mrs. Kurchak: "I think it's incubent on all levels of government in this election to stamp out the kind of bigotry we've had."

Candidates State Their Priorities

Jack Ellis, Conservative MP for Hastings in the last parliament, is keeping to his schedule of Unemployment Insurance Commission administration.

Mr. Ellis was a frequent assailant of government UIC policies during the last parliament. He renewed the attacks Wednesday night at an all-candidates meeting for Hastings constituency sponsored by Quinte Chartered Accountants Association.

The meeting also heard from Marie Kurchak, Liberal, and Bob Sanders, New Democratic party.

Mr. Ellis said the commission has continued to refuse disclosure of the number of its employees, although first indications were for a complement of 5,000. Today it has nearly 11,000 workers, 9,000 of them pefmanent. In 1971, top administrators totalled only 200 people. Today the figure has grown to 30 and costs about $800,000.

Other government departments have shown expanding needs of staff to cope.

Some 400 benefit control officers were appointed last year, he said. If UIC legislation was properly written, he said, there would be no need for staff.

Part of the problem for the Belleville UIC regional centre is that its regional director doesn't wish to live in the city, claimed Mr. Ellis. Because of this and his own ambitions in the past year there has been a move to transfer senior UIC regional officers from Belleville, he charged. Offices have also been set up in Toronto where the regional director has an office along with other senior staff. Cost of furnishing their offices, he claimed, was $100,-000.

Mr. Ellis also told the meeting that civil service costs could be trimmed by normal attrition when retire or quit public service.

Mrs. Kurchak, Toronto research journalist, said former emphasis on federal tax forecast, warned the country was facing a materials crisis that continuing to produce goods that become obsolete. Such goods and services can't be produced forever. The need for labor pools was most apparent where there was the "complementary" relationship and the prairies. Thought must be given to matching people to where work exists.

Modern parliamentary systems may not allow for the kind of dialogue needed to solve contemporary complex problems, but much can be accomplished in a session where the opposition wants to "tear down the government."

Bombarded by modern communications, much of it distorted, people become frightened and "grab" for the quickest answers, retreating from civic responsibility, it remains to parliament, people members, to lead people to cope with current problems.

Mr. Sanders, Belleville General Hospital social worker, emphasized that Canadian resources should be exploited to expand secondary industry in Canada.

Canadians are using their resources too rapidly and rather than developing them, should start using them here for our own sake and not for one time — and do it with a smile."

Said Mrs. Kurchak: "I think it's incubent on all levels of government in this election to stamp out the kind of bigotry we've had."

Ellis Claims Speech Delivery Cost $20,000

A political speech made recently by Manpower and Immigration Minister Robert Andras was distributed by letter to all Unemployment Insurance Commission offices across Canada, Jack Ellis, Conservative MP for Hastings in the last parliament, charged Wednesday night.

Text of the speech ran to 15 foot letter, printed and sent approximately $20,000 to dispatch, Mr. Ellis claimed.

Each senior UIC officer had to initial the speech after reading it, he said.

"How much it cost for these officers to sign it, I don't know."

Mr. Ellis, who drew wide attention for his criticism of government UIC administration in the last parliament, said the minister's speech was delivered in Toronto May 29 to the Canadian Accident Sickness Insurers Association.

Mr. Ellis made the charge during a speech at a meeting for federal election candidates in Hastings organized by the Quinte District Chartered Accountants Association.

Appointment Confirmed

CANNIFTON — Thurlow council has been confirmed by resolution Wednesday the appointment of Ruth Hoskins as secretary of the Thurlow township recreation committee.

The Plainfield resident was hired by the committee in March.

Elmer's Flying High

Safety Officer, Sgt. Robert Hall, yesterday raised the first Elmer the Safety Elephant flag at Dulmage, representing the sponsoring Kiwanis Club. The school is located on Sidney Street, a busy thoroughfare, and children cross the road in both directions to reach Fatima and Prince Charles schools. Because the crowds of children are too many for one crossing guard to supervise alone, an intensive safety program is being instituted at the schools, based on the Elmer campaign.

Braves Shade Mets 1-0

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Atlanta Braves would love to match Los Angeles Dodgers' record. But they may have to be content just matching their style of play.

"We're playing Dodger ball," said Carl Morton, who was the pitching survivor in a duel Wednesday with New York Mets' Harry Parker. "Good defence, great bullpen, hurling and timely hitting got two or three runs and win."

The Braves squeezed by the Mets 1-0 for their fifth victory in their last six games and 11th in last 20, but are still running far behind the pace-setting Dodgers in the National League West.

Even though Los Angeles dropped a 6-5 decision to St. Louis Cardinals, third-place Atlanta is eight games behind the Dodgers.

Elsewhere in the NL, Chicago Cubs defeated San Francisco Giants 10-1; Cincinnati Reds downed Montreal Expos 3-1; Philadelphia Phillies blanked Houston Astros 3-0, and San Diego Padres beat Pittsburgh Pirates 5-4.

Rod Harrelson, Mets' shortstop, was struck on the right hand by a Morton pitch in the first inning. Doctors diagnosed the injury as a non-fracture fracture and he will be out four to six weeks.

Philadelphia's Steve Carlton, the 1972 Cy Young Award winner, who had a residency year in '73, pitched his eighth straight complete game for the Phillies in first place in the NL East.

Carlton, 9-4, fired a five-hitter against the Astros, struck out eight and walked three.

Rick Reuschel scattered six hits and contributed three singles in a 16-hit Chicago attack that sent the Giants to their fourth straight loss.

Second baseman Dave Roselle chipped in with three hits and two RBI. Bill Madlock, Don Kessinger and Jose Cardenal each knocked in a pair of runs.

Joe Torre slugged a two-run homer and Mike Curtis gave up six hits before needing eight-inning relief help, giving the Cardinals a sweep of the two-game series with the Dodgers.

Torre's homer came in the third inning, his fifth of the season. He also drove in a run in the first to lead the Cardinals' 11-hit attack against three Los Angeles pitchers.

John Grubb slammed a four-run rally in the sixth inning with a tie-breaking two-run homer that catapulted San Diego past Pittsburgh.

Dave Freisleben, 5-3, and Dave Tomlin combined for a five-hitter.

Reds Down Expos

MONTREAL (CP) — Cesar Geronimo and Dave Concepcion drove in runs, including one in the first inning, with back-to-back singles in the fifth inning and score.

Cincinnati Reds downed Montreal Expos 3-1 in a National League baseball game Wednesday night.

With one out, Tim Foli lined a base hit to left centre but he was thrown out by Pete Rose when he tried to stretch it into a double.

Willie Davis and Ken Singleton followed with singles but were stranded when Ron Fairly grounded out.

Kirby, 5-3, walked four and struck out four before Carroll came on with a 3-0 count on Ron Fairly in the ninth.

Rogers, who sustained 10 hits, striking out six and walking one before giving way to a pinch hitter in the seventh, took the loss to run his record to 7-6.

Montreal's only run came in the fourth inning when Bob Bailey led off with a double, moved to third on a base hit by Tony Perez and scored on a sacrifice fly by Driessen.

Kirby pitched out of several jams, including one in the third inning, but Montreal's scrappy offence was held in check after the first inning.

Dan Driessen led off with a single and moved to third when Terry Crowley slammed a double to right centre.

Geronimo and Concepcion followed with their singles to score Driessen and Crowley.

Cincinnati added another run in the sixth when Johnny Bench led off with a double, moved to third on a base hit by Tony Perez and scored on a sacrifice fly by Driessen.

Kirby pitched out of several jams, including one in the third inning, but Montreal's scrappy offence was held in check after the first inning.

HAND BROKEN

ATLANTA (AP) — Bud Harrelson of New York Mets sustained a fractured bone in his right hand when struck by a pitch by Atlanta's Carl Morton Wednesday night and will be out of action indefinitely. Harrelson, a stick fielding shortstop, was at bat in the first inning when hit by the pitch. He ran for himself but then was removed from the game and taken to a hospital, where a small cast was put on his hand.

11 Straight Wins

Gaylord in the Groove

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cleveland's Gaylord Perry dealt Chicago White Sox a six-hitter Wednesday night to win his 11th consecutive victory of the season following an opening-day loss.

White Sox' Wilbur Wood, who was also going for victory No. 11 got clobbered for eight runs in the fourth inning, a bombardment that enabled the Indians to breeze to a 10-1 romp.

In other American League baseball games, Boston Red Sox beat Oakland A's 5-3, New York Yankees topped California Angels 6-4, Detroit Tigers trounced Texas Rangers 7-6, Baltimore Orioles edged Minnesota Twins 4-3 and Kansas City Royals clipped Milwaukee Brewers 4-3 in 13 innings.

Mario Guerrero drove in three Boston runs, two of them with an eighth-inning tie-breaking single, to beat Oakland and give the Red Sox their eighth victory in the last 11 games.

Singles by Rico Petrocelli and Dwight Evans and a walk loaded the bases and set up Guerrero's decisive hit.

Eliott Maddox's two-run double started a four-run fourth that carried the Yankees past California.

Fernando Gonzalez and Jim Slaton singled before Maddox put New York ahead 2-1 with his first up the left-centre field clout. A walk, a wild pitch, Bobby Murcer's sacrifice fly and Bill Sudakis' single produced two more runs.

Mickey Lolich fired a six-hitter for his eighth straight complete game, his first shutout of the season and 20th of his career, and got all the support he needed with a five-run fourth inning that carried Detroit past Fergie Jenkins and the Rangers.

Gary Sutherland singled home two runs and Al Kaline hovered to highlight the outburst. Homers by Ed Brinkman and Aurelio Rodriguez added to the Tigers' assault.

Don Baylor drove in two runs and scored one against Milwaukee to help Mike Cuellar to his eighth consecutive victory over the Orioles. Cuellar outdueled Vic Albury, who allowed just three hits before leaving after seven innings.

Al Downs' single in the 13th inning carried the Royals past Milwaukee. A two-out walk to John Mayberry and a single to Richie Scheinblum preceded Downs' single to left off Tom Murphy, who had escaped bases-loaded jams in the 10th and 11th innings.

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Softball Council announced Wednesday that Bill Murray, 36, a native of Saint John, N.B., has been appointed executive director of the provincial sports governing body. The council, consisting of the Ontario Amateur Softball Association, the Provincial Women's Softball Union and the Ontario Rural Softball Association, will set up an office in the Sport Ontario administrative centre here.

Can-Am Drivers Make Trial Runs

MOSPORT, Ont. (CP) — Mid-Ohio two weeks ago. Redman predicted the Formula 5000 cars would be running in the 115-m.p.h.- bracket before the end of practice and qualifying on Friday.

Fastest of the official times was posted by David Hobbs of England in a Lola T332-Chev. He clocked slightly better than 120 miles an hour in his Formula 5000 open-wheeler, although speeds were kept down by a stiff wind which swept the 2.46-mile circuit.

Another Englishman, Brian Redman, drove for the first time ever at Mosport and within 12 laps was only half a second slower than Hobbs.

The winner of the Formula 5000 championship opener at Friday morning.

WHL Folds

SEATTLE (AP) — The Western Hockey League ceased to exist Wednesday in the wake of an expansion announcement by the National Hockey League.

The NHL granted conditional franchises to Denver and Seattle for the 1976-77 season.

Immediately after that announcement, WHL headquarters in Seattle announced it was suspending operations.

George Gander, president emeritus of the WHL, said Seattle, Denver and Salt Lake are expected to play in the Central Hockey League for the 1974-75 season.

Phoenix won the WHL championship last season. But Phoenix has an expansion club in the World Hockey Association for the coming season. A Phoenix farm club may play in the Central League next season.

Arrows, Stingers In Upsets

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Maryland Arrows and Syracuse Stingers supplied minor upsets in the National Lacrosse League competition Wednesday night.

Playing on their home floor before 4,012 fans, the Arrows upended first-place Rochester Griffins 21-13 to snap a three-game losing streak.

In the only other game, Syracuse Stingers also took advantage of home surroundings to record their first victory of the season, a 14-13 decision over Philadelphia Wings before 2,500 customers.

The Stingers previously had only one tie in 11 games.

The victory for Maryland moved the Arrows into a three-way tie for second place with Philadelphia, Toronto, three points back of the Griffins.

Cy Coombes and Bill Cahill scored four goals each to lead the Arrows. Greg Marchen and Fred Doggett added three apiece with Tommy Vann and Jerry McKenna scoring two goals each. Gord Kester, Tony Gotlan and John Flecher were the other scorers.

2 More Franchises

Boston Bruins Still Shopping

MONTREAL (CP) — The National Hockey League has two new teams today and Boston Bruins still are without a coach.

Don Cherry, general manager-coach of Rochester Americans in the American Hockey League the last 3½ seasons, appeared to be the top candidate for the Boston coaching position.

Clarence Campbell, NHL president, said Wednesday the league's board of governors has agreed to grant conditional franchises to Denver and Seattle, while rejecting a bid from a third Western Hockey League city—San Diego.

The two new entries will pay $6 million each for their franchises and will join the league for the 1976-77 season to make the NHL a balanced four-division, 32-team outfit. The franchise fee will be paid in stages.

He made the announcement after conducting an expansion draft to stock Kansas City Scouts and Washington Capitals with players. Washington and Kansas City join the league this fall.

Meanwhile, Cherry said there were several details to work out with Rochester before he could decide whether to coach the Bruins. The coaching job became vacant when Bep Guidon resigned May 27 following the Bruins' Stanley Cup loss to Philadelphia Flyers. Guidolin later signed to coach the new Kansas City entry.

Campbell said the acceptance of Denver and Seattle was contingent on the successful bidders having buildings that meet NHL requirements. As for San Diego, the city-owned arena there recently was leased to a new World Hockey Association team, leaving the Gulls without a place to play.

In a separate statement, the WHL said that because of the inability of the Gulls to acquire playing dates in San Diego, the WHL had voted to suspend operations.

The active members, Seattle, Denver, Salt Lake City and Phoenix, will join the Central Hockey League next season. They will be considered on a leave of absence, with the WHL retaining control of their territorial rights.

The WHL, Portland franchise, controlled by the league, will fold.

Ivan Mullenix of Denver and Vincent Abbey of Seattle operated WHL teams in their respective cities before, obtaining the NHL franchises.

Mullenix, 37, a St. Louis real estate developer, is president of the WHL Denver Spurs and has owned the team since August, 1972. The NHL franchise in Denver will be held by Denver Sports Inc., of which Mullenix is the chief stockholder.

The Denver entry will play its games in a 16,000-seat municipal arena now under construction.

Abbey, a lawyer, and his partner-in-law, Dr. Eldred Barnes of Hillsborough, Calif., are principal shareholders in the WHL Seattle Totems.

He said the Seattle Centre Coliseum, home of the Totems, will have a seating capacity of 14,750 by the end of this year, sufficient to fill NHL requirements for the time being.

Abbey said that with a long-term lease in hand from the city, the Seattle rink will have its seating capacity increased to 21,000 within the next "four years" to make it one of the biggest indoor sports facilities in North America.

Toronto Edged 2-1

TORONTO (CP) — A goal by Denny Deninger in the third minute of the second half gave St. Louis Stars a 2-1 win over Toronto Metros in a North American Soccer League game before 3,139 fans Wednesday night.

His goal from about 30 feet in front of the net beat goalkeeper Jack Brodsky and gave the Stars their third win against six defeats in the Central Division.

The Stars took a 1-0 lead in the first half when Al Trost scored an unassisted goal at the 33rd minute mark. Brad Brobmisk tied the score 10 minutes later on a play with Jim Douglas and Helmut Schaefer.

Lenders, Intell Get Wins

The Lenders kept their undefeated string going at eight games in the Industrial Softball League, rolling over UIC 16-2. The win was the Lenders' seventh in eight starts, with the other game tied.

In the other contest, the Intelligencer edged Public Utilities by a 9-8 margine for their second victory of the season.

Mark Sheridan was touched for only five hits on the Lenders' rubber, walking a pair, and fanning 14.

Bob Lloyd paced the winners' 11-hit attack with a home run, double, and single, with Bob Wilkes contributing a pair of doubles.

Dump Yardmen 8-6

Purinaettes' Win Maintains First

It was the battle of the top teams at the Alemite last night as the Purinasties and the Belleville Yardmen met in the second game of the Belleville and District Ladies Softball League doubleheader at the Alemite, with the Purinasties proving their possession of first place.

The Purinasties dumped the Yardmen 8-6 the second time in as many starts they have beaten them, for their seventh consecutive win in the league play. It was only the second loss for the Yardmen.

Sandra Fleming fired the win for the Purinasties, giving up 14 hits. She walked six and struck out one.

Sue Morton absorbed the loss, giving up 12 hits. She issued three walks, striking out five.

Jane Bailey had a home run to pace the winners' attack, with Roseanne Chapman doubling and adding a pair of base hits.

Sue Morton had a four bagger and single in a losing cause for the Yardmen, with Donna Lucas adding a double and single. Sheila Smith had a pair of base hits.

In the first game of the night, Belleville Broadloom dumped Robert Lambert Construction 8-2. Mary-Anne Sills allowed 10 hits in picking up the win, walking four and striking out seven.

Sandy Claus had a seven hitter in taking the loss, walking two and leaving five standing at the plate.

Norma Fuller had a pair of base hits to lead the Broadloom, with Suzanne Sills adding a double and single. Roseanne Hovings and Janet Smith each had a two bagger, with Helen Sills singling.

Nancy Birch had a double and single in a losing cause for the Construction team, with Sharon Francis and Margie Scanlan each stroking two singles. Marilyn Sandford, Judy Scanlan, Sandy Claus and Pat Roberts each had a single.

Sanderson Will Try New York

MONTREAL (CP) — Derk Sanderson never was a popular visiting player at Madison Square Gardens so it may be interesting to see how New York fans will react to the controversial centre now that he is a member of the Rangers.

The Rangers acquired Sanderson from Boston Bruins in a National Hockey League deal Wednesday that sent centre Walt McKechnie to the Bruins. McKechnie had been picked up by New York Monday in the intra-league draft.

"I hope to win over those New York fans," Sanderson said. They once called me a faggot.

"I hope this is the last stop I make. I'd like to play at least seven or eight years in New York. This is it for me. If I don't make it in New York, it's all over."

Sanderson's 1973-74 hockey season ended March 10 after he fought with team-mate Terry O'Reilly while the Bruins were in Oakland to play California Golden Seals. When the Bruins returned to Boston, it was announced that Sanderson had been suspended for the rest of the year.

Sanderson had rejoined the Bruins in the second half of the 1972-73 season.

He had jumped to Philadelphia Blazers of the World Hockey Association but appeared in only eight games in the first half of the 1972-73 season. His contract with the Blazers eventually was settled, paving the way for his return to Boston.

STAYS WITH OILERS

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oiler quarterback Dan Pastorini, who has been talking with the World Football League, Wednesday signed a multi-year contract with the National Football League Oilers. Pastorini originally had signed a three-year pact with the Oilers and would play out his option during the coming season.

Canadian Is Favored To Win Ontario Open

A Canadian will win the $30,000 1974 Peter Jackson Ontario Open Golf Championship, one of the favourites to host professional Gary Slatter of the Brayview Country Club.

"Bayview is a Canadian type course," said Slatter, "and regardless of who comes to the U.S. it produces a Canadian will win it.

"If I think Bob Panasiuk will win with a score of 307, which is six under par. Will Hamenuk has a chance home if the weather is good. Moe Norman also could do well here. He can hit high soft shots into some of the expressway protected pin placements."

Regardless of who wins the 54-hole event the champion will have to be the best from player of the week Slatter feels. Slatter, who has a pretty good chance himself to capture the Peter Jackson Trophy, says the wind can also be a factor at Bayview. The biggest difficulty will be the 10,670 thousand which comes into play on ten of the holes.

Defending champion Rafe Botts, of Los Angeles, says he will be back to pick up the OGA champion's jacket he won last year.

First prize in the Peter Jackson Ontario Open is $3,000. Besides the money the winner also receives the specially crafted Peter Jackson Champions diamond ring.

It looks like the best field in history will play at Bayview and the OGA hopes to attract many U.S. players who are unable to qualify for the U.S. Open which runs opposite the Peter Jackson Ontario Open.

To challenge the U.S. professional will be Bob Panasiuk, Windsor, the Canadian PGA champion; Gary Hamilton, Toronto, (Manitoba winner); Leo Gaskiewicz, Toronto, John Morgan, Victoria (Atlantic); Gary Silverman, Belleville, Ont. (BC); and Gary Pilchford, Toronto (1972 Atlantic).

Guidolin Optimistic

MONTREAL (CP) — Bep Guidolin, who left Boston Bruins to coach the new National Hockey League franchise in Kansas City, has the idea the Scouts are going to be respectable in their division.

He may be right, because the Scouts have been placed in the weakest of the four new divisions that start with the 1974-75 season. Kansas City will be grouped with Chicago Black Hawks, St. Louis Blues, Minnesota North Stars and Vancouver Canucks, and of that group, only Chicago made it to the Stanley Cup playoffs last season.

Washington Capitals, the other new club, will be in a division with Montreal Canadiens, Detroit Red Wings, Los Angeles Kings and Pittsburgh Penguins. Even if the Capitals had drafted a good team in the expansion draft Wednesday, it's unlikely they would have much of a chance of finishing any higher than fifth in their five-team division.

But neither the Capitals nor the Scouts drafted what could be considered a good team. The 22 skaters selected by the Capitals had 40 goals among them in NHL play last season. The Scouts fared a little better — their total was 79 goals, 19 of them belonging to first-round pick Simon Nolet, who toiled for Philadelphia Flyers.

Washington's first pick was Dave Kryskow, a left winger who managed seven goals for Chicago in 1973-74. Other selections by the Capitals included right winger Jack Egers, who had one goal last season for St. Louis and New York Rangers, left winger Denis Dupere, an eight-goal man for Toronto Maple Leafs, and defenceman Yvon Labre from Pittsburgh.

Among picks by the Scouts were John Wright, a fourth-line centre with the Blues, Butch Deadmarsh, a six-goal man for Atlanta Flames, and defenceman Brent Hughes from Detroit.

"I know some of the guys we've got," Guidolin said. "I've seen Deadmarsh and Nolet and Croteau and Hughes. I've seen our two goalies, Michel Plasse and Peter McNabb from time in time."

The Capitals rebounding choices were Ron Low from the Maple Leafs and Michel Belhumeur from Philadelphia.

Considering the fact the Scouts and the Capitals had to shell out $6 million for the dubious honor of drafting the discards from the other 16 clubs, perhaps they deserve a bit more than they got Wednesday, which was little.

In other developments, defenceman Pierre Bouchard signed a multi-year contract with Montreal and the Canadiens also signed Rick Chartraw, their second pick in last month's secret amateur draft. Chartraw, a defenceman, played with Kitchener Rangers of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series.

Buffalo Sabres announced the signing of Michel Deziel, a top scorer with Sorel Black Hawks of the Quebec Major Junior A Hockey League. The announced it had come to terms with forward Bill Lochead of Oshawa Generals, their top choice in the amateur draft, and the Blues signed Gord Buynak, their No. 2 pick in the amateur proceedings.

Andre Boudrias signed a three-year contract with Vancouver Canucks and the Islanders announced that goaltenders Dan Cutts and Bill Hughes and forward Clark Gillies, their first choice in the seven draft, had signed with the team.

Kellar Two-hit Gems

In Prince Edward North Shore action Wednesday, Consecon crearned Belleville Gems 14-0 and Wannamakers' and Bolly Stables edged O'Brien 8-7.

Art Keller went the distance for Consecon firing a two hitter. He fanned three and walked one.

Sonny Holloway and Neil Goyer took the loss, giving up 11 hits and three walks while striking out eight.

The Consecon scoring surge was topped off by an eight run fourth inning.

Larry Herrington led the way at the plate with three doubles followed by Wayne Clarke and George Phillips. Keller, Bill Royal, and Lionel Addie singled once each and Ted McDonald doubled.

For Belleville, Harold Babcock and Goyer singled once each to count all the losers hits.

John Spargron and Ron McCoy combined to take the loss for O'Brien's. The two fanned seven and did not issue a walk.

Pete Scott went the distance for Wannamaker's getting six down on third strikes and walking four.

Wannamakers scored the game winning run in the bottom half of the final inning.

Mike Fleiger pounded a triple for the winners and Pete Morin added two doubles. Gille Nesbitt punched a double and a single and Pat McMurter and McCoy added a single each.

For O'Brien's, Ed Callow and Tim Bradshaw got a pair of singles each and Russ Morgan, Jerry Weymark and Doug Vader each singled once.

Trenton was led by Curt Smith with a double, followed by Kevin Patrick, David Wilkinson and Doug Payette with one single each.

Planes Upset Trenton

In EOBA peewee action Wednesday night Thurlow Plane's Concrete upset Trenton Legion 10-9.

Dave Blakely went the distance for Thurlow striking out 13 and walking four.

Paul Diachenkoun gave way to Bob Alexander in the sixth on the Trenton mound. The pair fanned nine and fanned four walks.

Dave Blakely cranked a triple for Thurlow and Rob O'Brien added apair of singles. Dave Urch, Steve Meeks and Doug Vader each singled.

Trenton was led by Curt Smith with a double, followed by Kevin Patrick, David Wilkinson and Doug Payette with one single each.

Sehl Brothers Headline Motorcycle Championships

Dave Sehl

Saturday, at Quinte Exhibition Raceway, at 8 p.m., the second round of the Ontario Championship Motorcycle races will be held.

Sponsored by the Belleville Piston Pushers Motorcycle Club and sanctioned by the Canadian Motorcycle Association, the event will feature top Canadian Expert class riders as well as Senior and Juniors riders from Ontario, Quebec, Michigan and New York.

Headlining the list of entries for the half mile dirt track affair are last year's winners, Dave and Doug Sehl, the brothers from Waterdown, Ontario.

Trying for a repeat of his win last year's final.

One of the 21 riders in Junior will be Dave Sandford of Brighton. The local youth finished fifth in his class in the first round of championships at Tillsonburg.

The third leg of the provincial championship will be held in London, the fourth in Port Hanburg and the fifth back in Tillsonburg.

The riders with the most accumulated points over the five rounds will be Ontario's tracked cyclists in 1974.

Gates at the Raceway will open at 6 p.m. for spectators wishing to view the racers during their warmups. Elimination heats and races will begin at 8 p.m.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Deputy Sheriff Geraldine Jones twisted her purple panties on one finger, stood them at Princess No. 21-95-875, and said: "Put that on your call wall."

The 24th prisoners who packed the third-floor chapel of the Los Angeles County men's jail Wednesday sight hooted and whistled.

No. 21-95-875 was comedian Richard Pryor who ended today a 19-day sentence for failing to come-tax evasion.

Geraldine is comedian Flip Wilson. He said Pryor put on two 45-minute performances at the jail, shaking out earthy humor and inside jokes.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Ballet, this city's only major resident professional dance troupe, suspended operations Wednesday, citing a $900,000 deficit.

Increasing production costs and a lack of community support were given as the reasons for the demise of the troupe founded 21 years ago.

LONDON (AP) — The Bolshoi Ballet opened a six-week engagement in London Wednesday night to hostile demonstrations, a cheering audience and adverse reviews.

James Kennedy of the Guardian wrote that the Moscow troupe's performance at Swan Lake "was not really bad enough to warrant a demonstration against it. But it was a thorough disappointment."

John Percival of The Times of London said the Bolshoi is one of the best companies in the world, but "it has come quite a way downhill since its first visit to London in 1956."

As the 2,400 members of the first-night audience arrived at the Coliseum Theatre, police locked arms to hold back demonstrators protesting the treatment of Soviet Jews and chanting, "Bolshoi out!"

A group of pro-Palestinian demonstrators shouted at the pro-Jewish group; another group describing themselves as "just ballet lovers" shouted "Bolshoi in," and a delegation from the Young Conservatives distributed handbills attacking the Soviet regime. Security men ejected seven persons from the theatre.

The audience gave the dancers a 15-minute ovation at the end of the performance.

The Poolside Gang
...Join Them!

The fun is just the price of a day room at The Four Seasons. We have the pool . . . cool and sparkling clean, places to lounge, places to sun. We also provide a play area for the kids as well as tennis courts and other games. We give you a bright and happy room (docs or watch TV in air conditioned comfort if you want) and we take care of everything you need — food for the mood, refreshments and what-have-you. If peace and quiet are your wish, there's plenty available around our grassy lawns and flower beds.

Join the Poolside Gang any day of the week from mid-morning to 6.00 p.m. Day room charge is $10.00 (based on four adults). Extra adults $2.50 each. Maximum of six persons to a room — children under 14 are free.

Call 968-3411 in plenty of time to reserve your room.

AT THE PARK — In Color — Yours is the movie you have been waiting for — "The Executioner" starring Robert Forster, Eliza Garrett and Leo J. Cash. Those that believed the Colonel Custer massacre was the greatest defeat ever suffered by the U.S. Army, but did not realize that Custer commanded only 600 soldiers. Custer's command was actually defeated by 2,500 Sioux and Cheyenne warriors led by Crazy Horse and Sitting Bull. Custer's Last Stand is the story of the battle and the events leading up to it. Starring Robert Shaw, Mary Ure and Ty Hardin. Produced by Philip Yordan. Directed by Charles Relkin. Color by Technicolor. Starts Today at the Park.

ONE NIGHT ONLY

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Friday, June 14:

Aries (March 21-April 19) You're anticipating negatively this way you'll be treated by one you have material dealings with. The matter will be handled fairly.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) The answers you're looking for today will have to be worked out with your heart, not your head. You won't get it a blind adherence to the Golden Rule.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Not much will be gained if you think only of "what's in it for me," but if you think "what's in it for US" your prospects look promising.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) If you analyze more closely your motives for wanting to achieve certain personal goals you will be inspired to try even harder.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) You're lushly suspicious of the actions of one to whom you feel strong emotional ties. Don't air your views until all the evidence is in.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your first reaction to a bind you may find yourself in today is to try and skirt your way out. It's better to be painfully honest.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) In any bargaining you do today let the other guy do most of the talking. He's ready to strike a better deal for you than you could make.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You'll be much more productive if you can arrange your work so you're able to concentrate on your most creative projects.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your outside associations will not give you near as much joy today as you'll find in sharing your time with the family.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A minor disagreement with your mate early in the day won't spoil what looks like a fun evening for you both.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Work will not be without its frustrations but you'll shrug off the negative effects when you're unexpectedly rewarded.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) You're apt to look for values in the wrong places today. You're going to be surprised by the source that produces the payoff.

IN MEMORIAM

BRANT — Sadly missed by a dear one who passed away, May 25, 1962. Our Dear Mother
We think know when we awoke,
We miss you more than words can tell,
To see you suffer was our heartbreak,
To watch you slowly fade away.
We part with one we loved so dear,
We did not get one last word,
We kissed her cheek and smoothed her hair,
And whispered come and rest.
We know you are at peace with God,
For you a good life lived,
And those who knew you best,
Are those who sadly miss you most.
—Sadly missed by us all, Wizard and Mildred Brant, Ivan and Shirley Anne, Evelyn and Ozzie.

LAITNER — In loving memory of our dear daughter Bonnie and Nan, may 14th, 1966.
Fifteen years have passed and gone,
Since our darling left our home,
Her death was on their little hearts,
And God called her home to rest,
And intercession stops steadily on,
Her memory is dear as ever,
They were taken from us too soon,
But heartache is over,
The heartache is over,
And all God's holy angels have,
Welcomed her home to rest,
Sadly missed by mother, father and brothers Tony and Terry.

TRACEY — In loving memory of our dear daughter and sister, Lorraine, who passed away on June 12, 1971.
Farewell was spoken,
No time to say goodbye,
You were gone before we knew,
And God took you home,
Our hearts still ache with sadness,
And tears may flow,
What it meant to you,
To miss you so,
You left us peace to comfort,
Your memory is our treasure,
Your love is our keepsake,
With memories we will always be together,
Sadly missed by mother, father, sisters and brothers.

District Obituaries and Funerals

MRS. BERTRAM M. MOORMAN

Following a lengthy illness, Mrs. Minnie Augusta Moorman, formerly of 3 Murney Street, died Monday evening at Montgomery Lodge.

Born at Brighton, she was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Macolm C. Dulmage and had lived most of her life in the city.

She was a member of Holloway Street United Church, was a life member of the United Church Women, was a charter member of Minerva Chapter No. 138 Order of the Eastern Star, and a member of the White Shrine.

Predeceased by her husband Bertram M. Moorman, she is survived by a daughter Mrs. Earle W. (Jean) Elliott of this city, and brothers Harry C. Dulmage of Peterborough and Claude C. Dulmage of White Rock, B.C. A son Mac predeceased her in 1964.

The funeral was held Wednesday from the Pinkston and Luscombe Funeral Home with service in the chapel conducted by Rev. J. Clare Kellogg, assisted by Rev. C.W. Coleman. Interment was in Belleville Cemetery.

Bearers were Otha Denyes, Frank Rayfield, Ken Parks, Ted Pate, Arvel Campbell and Orland Pinkston.

MRS. ERNEST CHARLES ROBERTS

Funeral service for Mrs. Ella Berrace Roberts will be held in the chapel of the Ross Funeral Home, Friday, June 14 at 1.30 p.m.

Rev. Roy Vasey will conduct the service with interment in Belleville cemetery.

A resident of 27 St. Charles Street, she died in Belleville General Hospital June 11 in her 79th year.

She was born in Newburg and was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Fox. She was predeceased by her husband Ernest Charles Roberts. She was also predeceased by a son, Bruce.

She is survived by her children Ernest (Skip), and Mrs. James (Lillian) York both of Belleville; by her brothers Curtis, Howard and Bruce (Bud) all of Belleville and by her sister, Mrs. Cecil (Helen) Day also of Belleville. She is also survived by eight grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

She was employed as cafeteria matron at Bell Telephone for many years before retiring in the mid 1950s.

STEPHEN THOMAS MAHAR

The funeral of Stephen Thomas Mahar, 153½ Church Street, was held Monday from the Pinkston and Luscombe Funeral Home with service conducted by Rev. A.L. Sutherland. Interment was in White Lake Cemetery.

Bearers were Brian, Paul and Gary Stewart, Ralph and James Mahar and Borden Lee.

Mr. Mahar died June 7 in Belleville General hospital following a lengthy illness. He was in his 64th year.

Born at Cobalt, he was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Mahar and had worked for the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company at Deloro.

Aside from his wife, the former Beverley McCoy, he is survived by a son, James of Carrying Place and a daughter Mrs. Ross (Marilyn) Stewart of Burlington.

ARCHIE BULL

Wooler

The funeral of Archie Bull, retired Wooler area farmer and radio and TV sales and serviceman, was held June 8 from the Jones and Rowe Funeral Chapel at Frankford where service was conducted by Rev. Douglas R. Miller. Interment was in Stockdale Cemetery.

Bearers were Harold Graham, Russell Davis, Kenneth Gunter, Noble Crosby, Frank LaFrance and Angus Gunter.

Mr. Bull died June 6 in Kingston General Hospital following a lengthy illness. He was 69.

Son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Bull, he was born in Murray township and was a life resident of the area.

Never married, he is survived by sisters, Mrs. William (Audra) Manners and Mrs. Frederick L. (Gladie) Blake, both of Wooler, and Mrs. Ralph (Sylvia) Howe of Campbellford. A brother, Orval John Bull, predeceased him.

JOHN McMULLEN

RR 1, Frankford

The funeral of John McMullen, retired Rawdon township area farmer, was held June 5 from the Jones-Rowe Funeral Chapel at Frankford where service was conducted by Rev. Ernest C. Brown. Interment was in Wellman's Corners Cemetery.

Bearers were Larry McMullen, Raymond Ross, Roy Casselman, Reg Dickinson, Allan MacPherson and Clark Thompson.

Mr. McMullen died June 3 in Belleville General Hospital following a six-month illness. He was 82.

Shorter Week Boosts Morale

TORONTO (CP) — John MacBeth, Ontario's labor minister, says there are some of 8,500 public servants working on a staggered schedule since last October show a reduction in travelling time and the changed hours seems employees to arrange working hours to suit personal activities.

But employees using car pools or affected by transportation ran into some difficulties, and some government ministries of administrative problems with the staggered hours, he told a conference of the subject Wednesday.

Mr. MacBeth also discussed employees on a flexible-hours system, who can come and go as they please within certain limits provided they work a certain number of hours. He said this system appears the most popular, although it may not be suitable for all industries.

Concerning the compressed work schedule, in which employees work longer hours per day on a three-or four-day week, Mr. MacBeth said that enthusiasts of this system have cited advantages such as improved morale, reduced absenteeism and turnover, and increased productivity.

On the negative side, however, concern has been expressed over the impact of a 10- or 12-hour working day on psychical and mental well-being. Fatigue caused by long hours might increase industrial accidents.

Mr. MacBeth said his ministry is concerned with protecting people who cannot adjust to the new schedules. Attention must be given to the needs of working mothers, the older employee who finds the 12-hour day too taxing, and employees who do not wish to adjust their activities to new schedules.

He said management must consult the employee if new working patterns are to be implemented successfully.

There is no set formula for a successful schedule, and it requires careful planning and cooperation to meet everyone's needs, he said.

The conference was sponsored by The Financial Post.

Pigeons Pass Snake Test

OWEN SOUND (CP) — Owen Sound's unflappable pigeon population has survived the rubber snake test.

Two weeks ago, Cletus Schwan, city inspector for the Grey-Owen Sound health unit, placed two rubber snakes on the roof of an abandoned downtown building to frighten away unwanted pigeons.

Mr. Schwan reported Wednesday that the pilot experiment was a failure.

The pigeons continue to mess up the sidewalks below.

Mr. Schwan now has declared chemical warfare on the dauntless pigeons.

Davis Had 5 Options

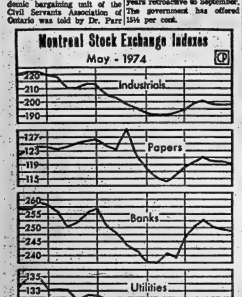
AURORA, Ont. (CP) — Liberal Leader Robert Nixon said Wednesday that Premier William Davis had a chance in late 1973 or early 1971 to put a halt to federal plans to build a second international airport for the Toronto area at nearby Pickering.

Mr. Nixon, speaking at a news conference during a tour of the Aurora-Barrie-Orillia area, said at the time Mr. Davis's cabinet was given five alternatives after 59 potential sites for a second airport had been rejected.

"Although one of the alternatives would have abandoned the second airport concept and accommodated Toronto future air traffic at Malton, Mr. Davis and his ministers opted for the development of a major eastern airport site as soon as possible.

"It was this decision which prompted the first study and eventually approval of the Pickering Townships lie."

College Teachers Exit



SARNIA (CP) — One hundred and fifty college teachers walked out of a meeting here Wednesday when Dr. J. Gordon Parr, Ontario deputy minister of colleges and universities, refused to discuss salaries and working conditions with them.

Dr. Parr was here to address the fifth annual International Institute on the Community College being held at Lambton College of Applied Arts and Technology.

A spokesman for the academic bargaining unit of the Civil Servants Association of Ontario was told by Dr. Parr he would not express any views on the current breakdown in talks between Ontario's 5,500 community college teachers and the ministry.

Most recent negotiations between teachers and the ministry broke down June 3.

The teachers, who earn an average salary of $11,000 to $12,000 a year, have been working without a contract since Sept. 1. They have asked for a 17-per-cent increase over two years retroactive to September. The government has offered 15% per cent.

Indians Not on Crown Land

TORONTO (CP) — John Sopinka, counsel for hereditary chiefs of the Six Nations Indian reserve, told an Ontario court of appeal Wednesday that the tribes are in a unique position among Indians in Canada in relation to their land.

He was defending an appeal by the Six Nations elected council to reverse a decision last July by Mr. Justice John Osler which gave the hereditary chiefs control of the 44,000-acre tract of land near Brantford.

The lawyer said the Indians have outright claim to their land rather than occupying Crown-owned land.

That right, known as "fee simple" in legal terminology, was granted them by official documents of colonial governors signed in the late 1700s, he argued.

The case, first before the courts in 1970, arose out of an injunction filed by the elected council against the chiefs who barred the council from the 57-year-old council house. An interim injunction was dissolved by Mr. Justice Osler's decision which also found that the Indian Act was inoperative by reason of racial discrimination.

A later Supreme Court of Canada ruling found the Bill of Rights does not overrule the Indian Act in two other test cases.

Mr. Sopinka told the three-man tribunal of judges headed by Mr. Justice W. F. Schroeder that the Six Nations, native of the United States, were given property in the same manner as the United Empire Loyalists who were given shelter in Canada.

"These Indians were allies of the British and because of that encouraged displeasure of the Americans and were forced to leave their land.

"The way in which they received their land does not parallel any other group of Indians that can be denied."

Mr. Hutchins told an appeal hearing of a temporary injunction, granted last fall on behalf of the native people, that the land in northwestern Quebec is the focal point of the Indians and Inuit's existence and any interference will affect their lives.

The James Bay Development Corp. (JBDC) is appealing the injunction, granted Nov. 15 by Mr. Justice Albert Malouf of Quebec Superior Court, which brought the massive hydroelectric project to a seven-day halt.

The Court of Appeal suspended the injunction Nov. 22 until a decision is rendered on the JBDC appeal.

Mr. Hutchins said the Indians and Inuit still depend on the land for their material needs.

He said the JBDC contention that the native people's way of life had changed to become "identical" to the whites' way of life was not true. ...

James Bay Project Threatens Cree

MONTREAL (CP) — The $6-billion James Bay hydroelectric project will cause significant disturbances to the delicate environment of northwestern Quebec which the native people consider as their home, the Quebec Court of Appeal was told Wednesday.

Peter Hutchins, lawyer for Cree Indians and Inuit in the James Bay region, said evidence shows the project will cause damages and "I don't

Lockouts Suspended

Packers Mark Time

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's three largest meat-packing companies said Thursday they will delay any decision on further plant lockouts until the union representing 9,500 of their workers has had adequate time to discuss their latest offer.

George McLean, a spokesman for Canada Packers Ltd., denied the companies plan to shut down all plants by June 21 unless the contract offered Wednesday is accepted.

"We have set no deadline whatsoever," Mr. McLean said.

But in Edmonton a union spokesman said the workers would not accept the latest companies offer even "if they were locked out for 12 years."

The 2,500 Alberta employees of Canada Packers, Swift Canadian Co. Ltd., and Burns Foods Ltd. were locked out June 5. They voted last week, along with British Columbia workers, to reject a contract offer the firms say was accepted by nine of 11 plants in Manitoba, Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes.

Romeo Mathieu, Canadian director of the Canadian Food and Allied Workers, said Wednesday that 91 per cent of the eligible employees had participated in the national vote. He would not release vote figures.

He said the decision by the workers was "an answer to the lockout by the companies."

The contract proposed by mediator William Dickie, Ontario's assistant deputy minister of labor, would have given workers an increase of 65 cents an hour retroactive to April 1 and an additional 65 cents an hour next April 1. Basic rates currently range between $4.07 and $5.40 an hour.

In a news release Wednesday night, the three companies said they have submitted a new five-point proposal to the union.

The proposal includes:

—Signing of contracts with all plants where employees voted to accept the mediated settlement;

—Submission of wages, fringe benefits and contract duration to binding national arbitration;

—Granting arbitrated changes in the existing settlement at all plants which had already signed contracts;

—Withdrawal of all lockout notices by the companies;

—Assurances by the union that it will issue no strike notices and will urge employees to return to work during arbitration.

The companies said they made the new proposal because they could see no hope of a settlement with all employees under existing union procedure, which they say permits a regional faction of the union's national committee to oppose a majority decision.

In Edmonton, the National Farmers Union Wednesday called on the Alberta government to put those meat packing plants not operating under trusteeship.

"We asked the provincial government to place those packing plants that are locking out their workers under trusteeship to normalize the marketing of livestock in Alberta," NFU spokesman Bill Descavich said following a meeting with members of the provincial cabinet.

"My latest information is that only 50 to 60 per cent of the hogs being offered for sale are being processed and that only between 30 and 60 per cent of the cattle offered are being slaughtered."

Alberta's Unifarm also called on the government to put under trusteeship to ensure a resumption of plant operations.

Agriculture Minister Reassures Legislature

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario consumers will not suffer from rising meat prices if the country's major meat-packing houses close down in a labor dispute, Agriculture Minister William Stewart said Thursday.

He told the legislature there is considerable meat in storage and smaller Ontario plants have the capacity to handle the situation.

Employees of Canada Packers Ltd., Swift Canadian Co. Ltd. and Burns Foods Ltd. in eastern Canada have voted to accept a settlement proposal and they might not be affected by a strike or lockout, the minister said.

In addition, smaller packing houses could "handle an enormous increase in processing if a strike or lockout did occur," Mr. Stewart told Douglas Wiseman (St. Lasark).

"There's more meat in storage in Canada than there has been in the last three years."

Mr. Stewart said in an interview outside the legislature.

"With stepped-up processing, we can quite nicely handle the requirements for Ontario consumers. There shouldn't be any increase in the price of meat due to the strike here in Ontario. Certainly not in the foreseable future."

Inside the legislature, Mr. Stewart said there were 134 million pounds of meat in storage across the country to May compared with 107 million pounds in May, 1973. This compared to a two-week supply for the entire country.

He did say, however, that a settlement providing higher rates of pay might influence prices.

Leger's Condition Improving

SHERBROOKE, Que. (CP) — The condition of Governor-General Jules Leger improved Thursday, and an aide said the "normal processes of recovering" were under way.

Roger Nantel said Mme. Leger is pleased with her husband's progress to date and said further medical bulletins will be released in Ottawa if a major change occurs in the condition of the 81-year-old head of state.

He said Mr. Leger is walking, sitting up in a chair most of the day, feeding himself and sleeping well.

However, he noted there are some problems, including a speech difficulty and paralysis of the left hand.

Despite the speech problem, Mr. Nantel said the Governor-General has "communicated orally" with Mme. Leger and a daughter, Helene, during their daily visits to the University of Sherbrooke Medical Centre.

Metro Losing Police

TORONTO (CP) — Metropolitan Toronto is losing police officers at more than double last year's rate, statistics released Thursday show. By the end of May, 140 officers had left the force compared to 67 resignations during the same five-month period in 1973.

Dairy Farmers Want A Raise

OTTAWA (CP) — About 30 dairy farmers from Ontario, Quebec and Western Canada used Treasury Board President C. M. Drury on Thursday to ask for a $1.50 increase to $10 a hundredweight in the price of industrial milk. Members of the Dairy Farmers of Canada, they were told by Mr. Drury that an increase is under study by the government. He asked them to come back next week for a further meeting with several cabinet ministers, including Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan. Roland Pigeon, dairy farmers' president, said the increase was requested a month ago in a brief to Mr. Whelan but there is no sign that the government is ready to act. The current selling price of industrial milk is $8.50 a hundredweight of which $2.30 is paid in federal support and subsidy programs and the rest by consumers.

Rodino Says Tax Probes 'Significant'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the House of Representatives judiciary committee considers charges of tax harassment by the Nixon administration of, its political enemies a "very significant" part of the committee's impeachment inquiry.

Representative Peter Rodino (Dem. N.J.) said the evidence dealing with the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) "raises a question of whether there has been a serious abuse of power by the office of the presidency."

The charges, involving audits of selected tax returns and leaks of tax information, originally were made in the Senate Watergate hearings last year when evidence of the White House enemies list became known.

They also include charges of favorable tax treatment for friends of the administration.

Rodino spoke at a news briefing Thursday after the conclusion of the IRS presentation to the committee. He declined to say whether any of the evidence linked President Nixon to the IRS actions.

However, another member, Representative Edward Mezvinsky (Dem. Iowa), said "we wouldn't be looking at it," if there was no indication of presidential involvement.

Mezvinsky said he regards the IRS portion of the impeachment inquiry "as significant, if not more so, than the Watergate matter."

Another member at the briefing, Representative Robert McClory (Rep. Ill.) said he did not detect any serious problem for the president in the IRS presentation.

U.S. Aid Promised To Eygpt

CAIRO (AP) — President Nixon wound up his triumphal visit to Egypt today with an announcement that the United States will provide large-scale aid to Egypt for agricultural and industrial development, including nuclear power.

After an overnight stay in Alexandria, a visit to the Pyramids and a final conference, Nixon and President Anwar Sadat of Egypt appeared together at a ceremony in Cairo to announce a joint statement of principles.

No figures were given on the cost of the aid program.

Nixon was leaving at midafternoon for Saudi Arabia, the second stop on his five-country tour of the Middle East.

The joint statement said the U.S. and Egyptian governments will negotiate an agreement to enable Egypt to generate nuclear power by the early 1980s.

"Upon conclusion of such an agreement, the United States is prepared to sell nuclear reactors and fuel to Egypt," the statement said.

While these negotiations are under way, the United States and Egypt will conclude "a provisional agreement for the sale of nuclear fuel to Egypt," it said.

The joint agreement did not specifically prohibit Egypt from using U.S. nuclear aid for weapons. But the United States is bound by the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty to ensure that any nuclear assistance it provides does not end up in exports, and the announcement today said the sale of nuclear material to Egypt will be "under agreed safeguards."

Nixon pledged U.S. money, capital investments and technological aid to help with Egypt's reconstruction, industrialization, agricultural improvement and scientific and educational advancement.

Nixon has already asked the U.S. Congress for $250 million in economic aid for Egypt in the 1975 fiscal year. The statement said joint committees will be set up to work out projects and proposals, and these plans will be reviewed by a joint commission later this year in Washington.

The committees will deal specifically with reconstruction of the Suez canal, increased trade and investment, agriculture, scientific and research development with "special emphasis on the exchange of scientist," medical co-operation and cultural exchanges.

As a token of the new spirit of co-operation between the two governments, the U.S. government said it will assist in the reconstruction of the Cairo Cyra House, and the Egyptian government will send the collection of treasures from the tomb of King Tutankhamen to the United States for exhibition.

Lion Captured

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Humane Society said the escaped lion which had been loose in the Newmarket area, about 30 miles north of here, has been recaptured.

Society spokesman Tom Hughes said Thursday night the 18-month-old lion, which weighs about 250 pounds, had been tranquilized and taken to the African Lion Safari in Rockton, Ont., about 10 miles northwest of Hamilton.

Mr. Hughes said the society is investigating how the lion escaped from its owner, Morris Staunton of East Gwillimbury Township, near Newmarket.

He said the society also will investigate the conditions under which the lion was being kept.

Gunned Down

Gunmen Foiled In Bank Holdup

QUEBEC (CP)—"I thought I was going to faint. He said don't faint or I'll shoot you," said bank employee Jean Gagnon Thursday after being held hostage for nearly five hours by a 17-year-old Quebec youth.

Mr. Gagnon, 29, was taken hostage shortly after 9 a.m. when a panique police panel foiled an attempt by two armed men to rob a Banque Provinciale branch in Quebec City's Limoilou district.

The assistant accountant, who had discovered the two hooded men in the bank when he arrived for work, was grabbed and held at gunpoint by the youth after the second bandit panicked, opened fire on police and was shot to death.

Police identified the dead man as Rejean Dufresne, 24 or 25, of Quebec City.

The identity of the other man, who surrendered to Quebec Provincial Police after taking refuge in a summer cottage 40 miles from here, cannot be published because he is a juvenile.

Under Quebec law persons under 18 are classified as juveniles.

Standing in the doorway of the bank with a rifle at Mr. Gagnon's throat, the surprising bandit demanded a getaway car and refused to allow Le Soleil reporter Guy Dube to replace Mr. Gagnon.

Police supplied an unmarked car and the youth forced Mr. Gagnon into the front seat to steer his lag and drive.

Trailed by a QPP helicopter, the car headed east, and about 30 miles from Quebec, the youth and his hostage held up in an unoccupied summer cottage at Petite-Riviere St. Francois, where they were surrounded by heavily armed QPP officers.

Mr. Gagnon was released and the man surrendered at 1:40 p.m.

"It was my first (bank robbery) and I hope it's my last," Mr. Gagnon said. He had been at the branch for two months but has been in it, along for five years.

He said that once inside the cottage, the armed man stopped covering him with the gun and lay on the bed while the accountant tried to make him realize he should surrender.

"He wanted to win some time because he knew he would spend a long time in prison."

A Banque Provinciale security investigator said no money was taken in the robbery.

Quebec police said the youth in custody would probably be charged with kidnapping, and perhaps with attempted murder.

New Rector At Bancroft

BANCROFT — Congregations of the churches in North Hastings will be joined by St. John the Evangelist, Bancroft, St. Joseph the Carpenter, Cardiff, St. Michael's, Coe Hill, and Holy Trinity, Maynooth — titled St. John's church and parish hall to capacity on June 9, 1974 for ordination of the new rector.

Bishop J. B. Creeggan, Anglican diocese of Ontario, ordained Rev. George W. Elson, rector of the parish.

"The sermon was delivered by:- Rev. Gordon Hendrix, Kingston.

Special guests in attendance at the service were Jack D. Hastings, MP in the last parliament, Clarke T. Rollins, MPP Hastings, Reeve John Heslin, Bancroft.

Each of the four churches in the parish was represented in the church proper. The remainder of the congregation was able to take an active part in the parish life by means of closed circuit television with equipment loaned by Milton McIlveen and the North Hastings Media Centre of the Hastings Board of education.

The organization committee included Joseph Foster, Jack Laughead, Frank Graystock, Lorraine Brough and Jack Stewart. They were assisted by a large number of men and women members of the congregations of the four churches.

Decision For Prince Edward

Province Holding Off Action On All-county Government

The provincial government is holding off on proposals for one-county government in Prince Edward County and further moves must emanate locally, Donald Irvine, minister responsible for municipal affairs said in Belleville Thursday night.

Earlier in the day he had told the legislature the government had decided to defer action on restructuring government in Prince Edward at the request of the municipalities involved.

He said the municipalities want to hold more public meetings on the subject and the province will not initiate any action unless asked.

He said the government was prepared to act on restructuring at a later date.

In Belleville, where he was keynote speaker to the annual conference of Ontario Municipal Administrators' Association, Mr. Irvine said of the Prince Edward issue: "We just deferred it, that's all. The next move is up to them."

The move was in line with a resolution last month from Prince Edward county council.

Council May 21 requested further study of the proposal to amalgamate Prince Edward's 10 municipal governments into a one-tier system. It was felt then that the delay would enable county residents to become better informed before making a decision on the issue.

The resolution followed a series of public meetings which didn't produce total consent for an all-county government.

Bloomfield and Ameliasburgh opposed the suggestion, which required two-thirds support from the county populace before the provincial government would act. Only about 600 of the county's 30,000 residents attended the meetings.

Quaker Oats Strike Vote

Conciliation Report Still Awaited

TRENTON — There is still no word on a conciliation report into the Quaker Oats employees here.

Bob Prentice, plant manager, says the 200 member union held a reconciliation meeting Sunday and voted to strike.

Negotiations began in February to update the union's contract which expired the last day of March.

The contract went to a cooling day conciliation hearing, and until the report is handed down, any group can strike.

Endurance in Outdoors

Car Dips Down Ditch At 90 Degrees

MARMORA — A 70-year-old man escaped with minor injuries Thursday after his automobile went out of control and ended at a 90-degree angle in a ruddside near here.

Police said Duncan John MacFarlane, RR 1 Paris, was driving along the Cordova Road a mile north of here when it went out of control.

It travelled along a concrete bridge abutment, hit guide posts then slid 15 feet down an embankment — more than 600 feet from the spot the driver first lost control.

Mr. MacFarlane was treated at the office of Dr. H. G. Parkin here for head cuts.

Damage to the car was estimated at $900.

Indian Appeal: Ruling Means "Anarchy"

TORONTO (CP) — A lawyer for the elected council of the Six Nations Indian reserve near Brantford told an Ontario Court of Appeal Thursday that if it upholds an earlier court decision the result would be "total and complete anarchy and chaos for the reserve."

Burton Keller said the reserve would be without a municipal government because the hereditary chiefs would not have the authority to govern.

The three-member Appeal Court, headed by Mr. Justice W. F. Schroeder, reserved decision following a three-day hearing on the appeal by the elected council of the reserve against an earlier Ontario Supreme Court decision.

Mr. Justice John Osler in his decision last July favored control of the 44,000-acre reserve by its hereditary chiefs.

He dissolved an injunction granted the reserve's elected council against the hereditary chiefs who had padlocked the historic council house.

Despite the Supreme Court decision, the elected council has continued to govern the 10,000-member band.

The struggle between the elected council and the hereditary chiefs for control of the reserve has been in the courts since 1970.

John Sopinka, lawyer for the hereditary chiefs, ended at Thursday's hearing that anarchy would result if the decision of Mr. Justice Osler was upheld.

The hereditary chiefs had governed the reserve from 1924 to 1924 when the federal government imposed the 13-member elected council, he said.

In his ruling, Mr. Justice Osler had found the Six Nations Indians have a outright claim to their land by virtue of documents signed in the late 1700s and that the territory is not a reserve.

Trenton's Youth Goes Rugged

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Outdoors endurance trips take young people to the brink of mental and physical endurance.

Trenton is likely the only Ontario municipality to offer such a program on a regular basis, says Deno Geitas, this community's recreation director and director of parks and recreation.

The program started last summer with a 30-mile canoe and hiking trip in the Manitoue Lake region, scene of the most rugged terrain in the Quinte area.

This year, one-week trips were held last year catering to both boys and girls between the ages of 12 and 17.

"The...trip is a real eye-opener," says Mr. Geitas. "It's tough and the kids might not enjoy it but it teaches awareness of the mixture of hardship and pleasure."

About 50 young people participated in Trenton's first out-trip episode. This year's expanded program is targeted for about 100 youngsters, looks like a sellout already, says the director.

Highlighting the expanded program this summer is a two-week excursion up the Madawaska River to Arnprior, south down the Ottawa River, into the Mississippi River, connecting to a one-week route through Manitoue Lake and through Black Bell. Black Bell is a final physical triumph for both trips where canoes, paddles, packs and tenting equipment is hauled over a two-mile portage.

A pre-requisite for the two - week trip is that paddlers participated last year.

"We have to be sure they can make it. It's tough," said Mr. Geitas.

Last year's paddlers began calling by January, laying up for the trip, he said. A coeducational trip, supervised personally by Mr. and Mrs. Geitas, has also been included for this year.

The out tripping program teaches young people to overcome personal and environmental difficulties and work together as a unit," said the director.

Registration for the program costs $25 for one week and $40 for two weeks. The recreation department supplies everything except sleeping bags, back packs and personal kit. Food costs are included in the registration fee.

Registration takes place Saturday morning at the gardens.

Summer Playtime Soon For Town's Children

TRENTON — A wide assortment of summer recreational activities has been scheduled for hundreds of Trenton children who annually participate in town parks and recreation programming.

Registration will be held June 15 between 9 a.m. and noon.

A program brochure, available on request at Trenton Community Gardens, says swimming fills a large portion of summer activities with all age groups considered.

For children aged six to nine, classes range from pre-beginner through to senior, commencing July 2. A second course will begin Aug. 6.

A new swim program this summer is the Mono-and-Tots course with several one-week periods offered.

Bronze class swimming, leader instruction and adult classes will also be held.

Recreational swimming is available Monday to Saturday between the hours of 2 and 4 p.m. and 7 and 9 p.m.

In addition to the heavy swim program, exclusive outdoors course has been provided and a full parks program combining sports, hobby and crafts instruction.

For further information contact the Community Gardens.

Monoxide In Farm Fatalities

CAISTOR CENTRE, Ont. (CP) — A provincial police investigation has shown there was nearly 18 per cent carbon monoxide in a farm storage tank where three people died Sunday in this community about 18 miles southeast of Hamilton.

Henry James Fearns, 26, of Caistor Centre, Alexander William Fearns, 25, of Stoney Creek, and their sister Mary Ann, 24, of Brantford, died when they entered the storage tank after a pump broke down.

Autopsies showed the three died of asphyxiation.

The tank was used for storing pig feed.

Plan Miss Gold Cup Contest For This Year's Boat Races

PICTON — The Picton Kinette Club has announced sponsorship of the Miss Gold Cup competitions to be held in conjunction with the Gold Cup races at Hayward Beach Labor Day weekend.

Contestants must be residents of Prince Edward County, single, and between the ages of 18 and 25. Application forms will appear in the local newspaper and must be submitted by Aug. 26 to the Kinette Club of Picton, Box 2023.

A panel of five judges will select a winner Aug. 31, and Miss Gold Cup will hold her title for the 1974-75 season.

Show Soon

PICTON — The Prince Edward Horse Pony Club will hold its second show of the season, June 23 at Picton fairgrounds.

Events include western games, English and western saddle classes and, for the first time, several jump classes. Post-entries will be accepted from members of the club only.

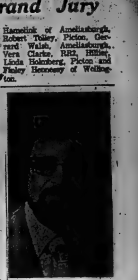
A general meeting, open to all interested persons, will be held at Cherry Valley Hall on Thursday, June 20 at 8 p.m.

Preserve Old Cells, Suggests Grand Jury

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — A grand jury report has recommended preservation of the cell-block building at the old Prince Edward County gaol.

"We recommend that the old cell-block building should be retained and maintained for historical and educational purposes in connection with the county museum," states the jury report.



The report was released following supreme court sessions here early this week. Supreme Court Justice A. R. Campbell presided during the sessions.

Also noted in the jury's recommendations was need for repair and painting of the exterior pillars at the church house. This was suggested in the last jury report dated December 4, 1972, but no action had been taken.

The jury added: "We suggest that an adequate parking lot be constructed for the future."

The facilities at Shire Hall were inspected by the jury and found satisfactory, with the exception of the social services office where renovations were recommended for modernization.

Jury foreman was Royston Suttle of RR2 Picton. Other jurors were Margaret Hamelink of Ameliasburgh, Robert Tinley, Picton, Gerard Walsh, Ameliasburgh, Vera Clarke, RR2, Hilton, Linda Balderson, Picton and Wesley Hennessy of Wellington.

Never-Never Land

The election campaign is grinding on in that never-never land that we spoke of recently.

If any of the parties are scoring heavily it is not that you would notice, any more than it is noticeable anyone is saying anything that is especially memorable.

However, we might have a look at some observations of Hastings Liberal candidate Marie Kurchak. Mrs. Kurchak is young, 28, and attractive. A Toronto journalist who is said to specialize in "written communication," she has come from the big city with her husband to take up residence in these parts.

Here is a borderline case of "paracuting" into the fray, (new resident though she is) as the Globe are saying of Conservatives such as former Manitoba Premier Duff Roblin in Peterborough.

Anyway, in what may be viewed in a spirit of youthful idealism, Mrs. Kurchak has been saying that politicians must take a stronger, more responsible role if cynicism — caused by political opportunism — is not to turn people off public involvement.

This is advice, we presume, which infers that no party has any monopoly of straightforward dealing and integrity. As to opportunism, she took a sharp swipe in one of her first public appearances at the PCs proposed price and income controls, saying they would swell the government bureaucracy which the PCs already were criticizing. And she went on to pan 'exaggeration . . . distortion . . . and political jockeying" in political life, at the expense of dealing with "real issues."

Well, Mrs. Kurchak's speech sounded a great deal less to the point because than it did with simply knocking the Conservatives.

One thing neither Mrs. Kurchak nor anyone, to our knowledge, in the Liberal government, has said anything about, is the spectacular expense that has been a hallmark of Government policy during its tenure of office, and which was the subject of strong criticism by former Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson.

And what about those controversial aid programs overseas? For example, to "victims of racism in Southern Africa," a situation that is being exploited by groups such as the Communist-backed Frelimo guerrillas in Mozambique. Again, as alleged by Rabbi David Monson of Toronto this week, Uganda's President Amin is using money given by Canada's External Aid Department ($1,650,000 annually since 1970) "to buy weapons to kill people."

Mrs. Kurchak reportedly has spent most of her life in Toronto. However, as a native Scot she might be expected to have retained some of her countrymen's penchant for thrift.

But thrift, some degree of which would certainly help combat inflation, is not in the cards in Canada these days.

If some form of control is not the answer, as the opponents of Robert Stanfield's proposals are saying, we are certain continued extravagance is not either. That is, extravagance of the kind we have become accustomed to under the Trudeau government, while ignoring such matters as poverty at home and the kind of homegrown racism that exists here too but is swept under the rug.

Illegal Dumps

City Council's decision to investigate the proliferation of illegal dumps around town is timely.

Belleville resident Kenneth Peoples is to be commended for his observations in this matter. His recent submission to Council, supported by pictures, has led to Council initiating its own investigation.

Illegal dumps are one thing. Another old problem, that of litter, also remains a blight on the community scene. The City can do only so much to present a clean face in this regard. Much of the schools could do more to inculcate a sense of order and discipline, the better to achieve a litter-free environment. Unfortunately, we are still very far from this ideal.

A Short Fuse—And Bilingualism—Could Be PM's Nemesis

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Nobody, certainly not the voters, can be listening to Prime Minister Trudeau as attentively as a carefully selected corps of sharp-eared Conservative members out in the Liberal campaign crowds, and at Tory party headquarters here in the National Capital.

They are patiently waiting and listening with agonizing concentration for the suspicious words and explosive Trudeau to make a break.

The Prime Ministerial temper from the outset of power six years ago invariably has considered on a very short fuse.

An obscenity — and he has used such language — profanity, even a sneer or a snarl, a petulant sulk, or a public display of plain bad manners would be sweet political music to those anxiously open Tory ears. The Prime Minister is being taped, closely tracked on TV and radio followed carefully in all of the major press and newspaper reports.

Will he blow his stack under pressure, suffer a flame-out of his cool?

He has before and it hurt him.

He knows it, too.

In fact, he confessed it in public the other day when he told that North Battleford crowd that one of his election problems was "his guy Trudeau."

Some people just did not like the guy, he shrugged, then blasted out that — and there it is in the record — he was "no worse than the rest", of the Liberals.

A slip, of course.

Again, a potential to be taken out of context and used against him through the balance of the campaign.

But not really damaging.

Possibly even helpful because to some it could be funny and laughing is fun.

Still slips of the tongue, especially on the election platform, expose a potential for peril.

The Prime Minister had another near-miss at a Toronto rally.

He was misinterpreting along Parkdale avenue, hardly a typical street in Big T.O., being fined with $100,000 bonuses — when a medical man, a Dr. Douglas Firth, obviously a supporter, approached him.

The good doctor, beaming, reported he had pulled 18 of his babies and 11 of the mums at his 13 patients, all delivered back to them, during the rough it was the laugh Pierre Trudeau must have considered a big thing.

Another certain event at this stage — the Prime Minister is very, very sensitive to the "French first and official" language cause of the Quebec government.

How, he was asked as he emerged from cabinet the day the Ottawa Liberals were plotting a believable response to the language bombshell, explosively edited by their Quebec City colleague, did French unilingualism in one province square with bilingualism in the other as they?

"You're ignorant, asking a question like that," he snapped at a newspaperman. "You're indecently speaking your ignorance."

And that was all the answer he had then.

Since that time he has scolded a reporter in Vancouver for questioning the language logic of Quebec.

Quebecers, he told them, "think it's not worthwhile living in this country if they can't speak the language of their fathers . . . Canada is a great country, but Quebec can go to places if you don't want us to belong."

Generals Retain Grip on Greece

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Greece like Spain remains another country where the regime looks uneasily at what a "liberalizing" general did in the old authoritarian system in Portugal.

But Greece is a long way from Portugal in the length of the Mediterranean Sea, and her almost totally anonymous generals who overthrew President Papadopoulos six months ago run an even tougher regime than he did.

The government is nominally civilian. But the general behind the scenes is still Demetrios Ioannides, the head of the military police and even more to the right than Papadopoulos, if that's possible.

Greek political observers detect almost no visible support for this oppressive military group but much contempt for it and resentment of it.

The various Greek opposition groups abroad are in despair looking, it's true, at the "Portuguese miracle" but realizing it came about after nearly half a century of the kind of dictatorial government the ousted President Papadopoulos brought to Greece with the military coup of April, 1967.

In fact the Greek regime is more oppressive than the Spanish is alleged to be and the Spanish army, though always in the wings, is not the controlling factor in the present rightist Madrid government.

Spain forces some severe regional extremist and terrorist activities which the Greek military in power do not, although this kind of outbreak, especially in northern Greece, is also possible there.

The justification for such tough government as the present junta's has the new Greek military rulers from Italy's past three years on. This weak Italian country is on the brink of bankruptcy with the 30th government since the war having resigned rather than coming to an answer for economic decline.

This kind of situation for unworkable democracy was faced to a lesser degree to the Greeks before the first military takeover in 1967. Political parties were riddled with differences. The still-free press was a pandemonium and libelous in their comments about Greek public affairs.

The country was beginning a long drift from which the former Premier Karamanlis, Papadopoulos said he had "saved the nation." Reconstruction speaking he was right.

The Greek generals like military rulers in other countries — notably in a booming Brazil — have been able to bring about economic prosperity, but with the corruption and tragic loss of civil liberties.

You can't have it both ways, maintain the conservative and capitalistically-oriented generals. Chief under the Marxist Allende, Italy under chaotic democracy and examples of many governments where a strong military hand is not present. This is the argument, and will be the future answer of the Greek government for "stability."

In fact the Greek dilemma, economic well-being, economic prosperity, without a reaffirm government to protect it, is the dilemma of all developing countries. The military, with many economic and managerial skills usually associated with civilian leaders in social democracies, pre-empt civilians in development.

The Greek generals are not so sophisticated. Many of them are to say the least "country boys." Literally men of the village, but they certainly know how to learn the right lessons, be sure they the wrong ones, about political power.

Although admitting the international policy of Great Britain toward other countries, sometimes instances might have been improved upon in the past, her treatment of conquered countries had left but little to be desired, members of the local Kiwanis club were told at their regular weekly meeting Tuesday noon. Guest speaker for the occasion was Professor J. B. Reynolds.

Favorable comment on the improvement in the appearance of the face of the city clock on the tower of the city hall is being heard along the main thoroughfares following the cleaning and painting which is now almost completed. The facades on the clock tower are also being repainted to add to the improved appearance.

Water May Be Toxic U.S. Report

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Out of every 100 Canadian households, eight or nine have an electric kettle.

Over the past few weeks, most people have probably felt certain qualms whenever they plug in a kettle to boil water.

It was just this spring that the Canadian people learned that the lead used in soldering the electric element can be released into the water, and thus into the human body.

American had learned this in 1971, when the Food and Drug Administration ruled that their kettle manufacturers could no longer use lead solder.

Some Canadian manufacturers did the right thing—Canadian General Electric kettles have not contained lead solder since January, 1971—but it has taken the Canadian government until June, 1974, to use the Hazardous Products Act to ban kettles that release more than 0.05 part lead per million.

Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Herb Gray says he has been advised that "the risk of harm from using electric kettles with a lead content in excess of the prescribed level is negligible."

But CUSO has steadily drifted into ideology, perhaps shaping the colonialism of the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA) to its likeness.

Back in January CUSO ran into unwanted headlines when it became clear with CUSO — the Quebec version of CUSO — had provided funds to Malagasy (formerly Madagascar) for training in the art of subversion (revolution?) and thus constituting a security risk to that country.

CUSO seems to have made the liberation of Southern Africa a sort of ideological holy war, and it reserves supporting terrorism.

A while back somebody called the Canadian Foundation 20 prompted considerable controversy. CUSO reads. It proclaimed that CUSO's aims should be:

1. To work with the victims of exploitation in support of their struggle to build a more self-reliant and to transform the present inequitable system;

2. To develop both in Canada and overseas a consciousness of community among peoples based on freedom, justice and equality."

Bearing in mind all CUSO volunteers work to assist the native peoples in Africa, this was too much for many people. In Zaria, a CUSO volunteer in Rhodesia (which like CUSO publishes Tshwaragano—Unity—describes as one of Canada Africa's three "captive exclave states," has written a letter to the Globe and Mail Editor-in-Chief objecting to the government's policy of supporting racism." Slightly abridged, here are one volunteer's views from the field:

Dear Mr. Sharp:

As a CUSO volunteer currently completing a term in Rhodesia I view with alarm the Canadian government's tacit support for terrorists in Southern Africa. Citizens of Canada are receiving a very distorted view of the actual situation and of a result being called on to finance projects not in the common interest. The many voices commended for liberation and support of so-called "liberation" movements are not necessarily those of the people supposedly being liberated. Only this month three of the South African homeland Chief's expressed opposition to the use of terrorism and pledged full support in the fight against terrorism.

In a letter published April 3 Chief Minister of Owambo, Chief Filemon Elifas, told his people government policy is to oppose violence. He said the homeland had voluntarily donated R30,000 to combat Communist terrorism. He went on to say "As a Christian people we think it wrong to use violence, suffering and misery caused by terrorism action, which kills innocent men and innocent women and children who are being murdered by Hangmen of South Africa."

And in Umtata, on April 9, Paramount Chief Kaiser Matanzima, leader of the Transkei homeland, condemned in a statement that South Africa's problems could not be solved by violence and revolutionary methods as employed by Communists in Africa. He said that "it should be clear, therefore, that those who support freedom fighters have no part to play in freeing anybody in South Africa."

And in Windhoek, on April 10, the colored council of South West Africa strongly attacked terrorism and subversion and passed a motion condemning any form of aid to terrorists in South Africa.

While the native peoples are organizing to fight the terrorist movement, we seem to be organizing to fight the native peoples.

There is small comfort in the fact that the supporters of the terrorist leaders show a remarkable liking for the travel to New York, Stockholm, Geneva and other world capitals. Their leaders only express concern bearing in close contact with the people and Mission churches and other merchants of intrigue.

Then we observe what has happened to the rest of Africa in the recent years we are quite justified in questioning the motives and capabilities of the terrorist would-be leaders in Rhodesia or distributive equitably the enormous wealth of that country. All of the so-called liberation movements achieved their independence on the pretext of forming a democratic form of government with representation by all classes of people.

In ten years we find out of 41 countries, 17 are now one-party states, in control of dictatorships. 19 are under military rule, which for all practical purposes are also dictatorships. The atrocities being committed against the citizens of Uganda, Burundi and several other countries by their own rulers are beyond description, yet in our media are continuously ignored or glossed over.

We seem to be suffering from a form of "selective indignation" when it comes to support one form of social justice while closing our eyes to far greater injustices against humanity perpetrated by inhuman monsters who have risen up as saviors of the people. Where was our indignation when Czechoslovakia was being ravaged? What did we do about the genocide of Hungary or Tibet? When did we protest against the genocide committed against the Ibos of Rwanda and Burundi? And why do we now bear responsibility for the false military coup in Niger?

This so-called "liberation" movement is the biggest red herring ever to be dragged into public debate. Nobody honestly in good conscience can recognize it for what it is. Let us ignore the racialist screaming on the sympathies of the Western world by sentimental appeals to racial guilt.

This whole terrorist movement is organized and operated by the Soviet Union. Its arms are trained, equipping and organized by Russia. Let us not ignore the avowed long-term intention of Communism to "bury" us. I insist them in the satisfactory of their goal in Africa and Asia, including either moral or tangible support to the terrorist movement, we are doing our part in the work of our ultimate destruction.

If we retain any remnant of intellectual sanity we will not become a party to the support of terrorism as indicated to our own destruction, masquerading as liberation movements. The Government's record, to date, disappointingly reflects many false principles and seems motivated more by political expediency than by conviction.

We would hope that future pronouncements of Canadian policy would be proof that the government had not put its stamp of approval on Southern Africa into another Vietnam.

Sincerely yours,

LORNE LEWIS.

Ottawa Is Supporting Terrorism Says 'CUSO' Volunteer in Africa

By PETER WORTHINGTON in the Toronto Sun

The closest many of the people in the under-developed world come to Canada is through CUSO — Canadian University Service Overseas. In 1961 there were 17 CUSO workers; today there are over 1,300 in some 40 countries, ostensibly trying to improve the lot of people.

But CUSO has steadily drifted into ideology, perhaps shaping the colonialism of the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA) to its likeness.

Back in January CUSO ran into unwanted headlines when it became clear with CUSO — the Quebec version of CUSO — had provided funds to Malagasy (formerly Madagascar) for training in the art of subversion (revolution?) and thus constituting a security risk to that country.

CUSO seems to have made the liberation of Southern Africa a sort of ideological holy war, and it reserves supporting terrorism.

A while back somebody called the Canadian Foundation 20 prompted considerable controversy. CUSO reads. It proclaimed that CUSO's aims should be:

1. To pursue an activist role in the education of local and of the Canadian people and government concerning and in the task of sustaining these inequalities;

2. To develop both in Canada and overseas a consciousness of community among peoples based on freedom, justice and equality."

Bearing in mind all CUSO volunteers work to assist the native peoples in Africa, this was too much for many people. In Zaria, a CUSO volunteer in Rhodesia (which like CUSO publishes Tshwaragano—Unity—describes as one of Canada Africa's three "captive exclave states," has written a letter to the Globe and Mail Editor-in-Chief objecting to the government's policy of supporting racism." Clacking Teeth Punctuate Speech

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Health Minister Frank Miller was likened to a reluctant virgin by the Ontario legislature Tuesday during debate on a bill that would allow dentures to be made without the supervision of a dentist except when installing partial plates.

Albert Roy (L—Ottawa East), speaking against the clacking of a set of toy false teeth, said Mr. Miller is "like a reluctant virgin . . . he's afraid to go all the way" and let denturists practise without dental supervision.

The bill would permit denturists to fit dentures only in persons who have no upper or lower teeth.

A heckling Frank Drea (PC—Scarborough Centre) also was put in the same category as the minister by Mr. Roy.

But after Mr. Drea complained about Mr.R oy "wisecracking about certain aspects of my character," the Liberal withdrew the remark.

While telling the legislature the government had made a "confused mess" of its policy on denturists, Mr. Roy said to contend with the clacking of the toy teeth would ruin the issue for Dr. Richard Potter (PC—Quinte), former minister of health.

Mr. Roy said dentists do not like the bill because denturists can work unsupervised on full sets of dentures and denturists—or denture therapists as the government calls them—feel they do not need supervision to fit partial plates.

He said that while the government has been changing its stance and the denturists find the present law, which requires them to be licensed and to work only under the supervision of a dentist, the public remains confused.

Melville Germa (NDP—Sudbury) joined the Liberals in opposing the bill.

He said the public accepted denturists' services because people became fed up with the costly services provided by dentists.

The government "is trying to railroad them (denturists) right out of business" but public acceptance of them has shown the government has failed, Mr. Germa said.

Edward Good (L—Waterloo North) said the low-cost denture service provided by denture has been a failure. Only nine of 77 dentists in his area provide a full mil of dentures for $180.

Jan Dukszta (NDP—Toronto Parkdale) said the bill fails to deal with a crisis in health-care delivery in Ontario.

Liberal leader Robert Nixon, whose party plans to introduce several amendments to the legislation, called the bill "a ridiculous political compromise."

Debate on second reading was to continue today.

Hire Counsellors

VANCOUVER (CP) — Six Blue Shield alcohol and drug counsellors hired under an $81,000 grant from the provincial drug and alcohol commission will work in courts throughout B.C.

Assessment Freeze to Continue

TORONTO (CP) — A bill to continue the freeze on municipal assessments for tax purposes for another two years received first reading in the Ontario legislature Thursday.

Revenue Minister Arthur Meen said in an interview outside the house that rapidly-escalating real estate prices have made it impossible to re-assess Ontario properties at their current market value."

The province is to switch to assessments based on current market value in 1976 for taxes that will be levied on properties in 1977.

Mr. Meen also said the exemption for mining buildings used to extract minerals from the ground has been removed. This should enlarge the tax base of many communities in Northern Ontario he said.

The bill also provides a formula for apportioning among tenants the total assessed value of a rented building and the market value of the space they occupy.

This means that tenants occupying a more valuable space will be assessed a greater proportion of the total assessment of the building.

Tax on the total assessment will remain with the owner. But notices of the assessment will be sent to tenants so they can direct their portion of school taxes.

BCAA Opposed

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Automobile Association is opposed to Canadian transport commission ruling allowing Sunday trucking privileges to two eastern firms.

Credit Union Interest Rising

TORONTO (CP) — Interest rates of credit unions on loans to members likely will be increased to 15 per cent annually from 12 per cent this summer, John Clement, consumer and corporate affairs minister, said Thursday night.

Trudeau MOTORS LIMITED

The all new Toyota Corona. Now big car owners have something to turn to.

CORONA 4-DOOR SEDAN

In a test conducted by an independent motoring organization, 30 big car owners were given Toyota Coronas to drive for a long period.

They drove them in town and out of town. Exactly the way they drove their big cars.

The results? An overwhelming majority of the drivers gave the Corona an extremely favorable review, with many of them remarking especially on the Corona's "big car feel."

The test drivers may have been surprised, but we weren't.

The Toyota Corona was designed to bridge the gap between the big car and the small car from the drawing board on up.

Everything about it was specifically engineered to meet the big car owner's standards:

The Corona is a heavier car than ever before. With a longer wheelbase.

Unit body construction is utilized for strength and stability. You ride in a solid steel cage, with steel reinforcing the roof over your head and the door panels at your sides.

The front and rear are specially designed to crumple at a predetermined rate to absorb impact before it reaches the passenger compartment.

We've even added bigger power front disc brakes, standard.

The end result is something you can actually feel. Gripping the wheel, the Corona feels firm, solid, stable. Steering response and overall handling are excellent. (Radial ply tires are standard equipment on four of the five models.)

Deeply cushioned reclining bucket seats are specially contoured to the shape of your back. A six foot driver has plenty of knee and headroom. There's more hip and shoulder room, too.

And power is there when you need it. (With our economical 4 cylinder, 2 litre overhead cam engine.)

What's more, the end result of our engineers' labours is something you can also see.

Outside, the Corona is trim, neat and elegant. Inside, you'll be surprised at the painstaking attention to detail.

And when they were satisfied that they'd turned out an automobile that was exactly right for the times, our engineers added a few touches that put it way ahead of them.

Like ESP. An electronic warning panel (Hardtop models only) that monitors 11 of the car's vital functions and virtually lets you drive, automatically, when something needs attention.

A new bandless 3-speed automatic transmission (optional) with a smoother shift and less maintenance than any other type.

And a gas saving 5-speed transmission. The console mounted 5-speed stickshift is standard (along with ESP) on the Corona SR Hardtop.

There's even an easy-to-remove instrument panel and simplified front end alignment system to hold maintenance costs down.

All in all, it's enough to convince even the most dyed-in-the-wool big car owner that he can give up the big car without giving up most of the things he buys a big car for.

For years we've been giving the small car buyer something to turn to.

Big car people, now it's your turn.

spoke! Quinte Women

Bonnie McIsaac, Student

Bonnie McIsaac, just finishing Grade 12 at Belleville Collegiate Institute, has already taken a good hard look at what it means to be a young woman in the '70s.

Even before she prepared her winning speech, "Women in Society" for the school public speaking contest this winter (which later won her second prize in the District Finals) Bonnie was aware of the effort girls must make to "be equal".

In her speech, Bonnie pointed out the ways that the sexes are pressured into separate roles. Attempts to escape these roles result in labels like "tomboy" for girls, she noted.

Even for adults, out in the working world, distinctions still exist, said Bonnie. There are wage inequalities so that women make less money than men, even though women in the work force are better educated.

But it is in education that Bonnie places her faith for the possibilities of change. In preparation for her own independence, she studies accounting and marketing and mathematics, along with the core of her "favorite" subjects such as theatre arts and English.

"I think if women can handle money well, they can more easily achieve equality," says Bonnie. "I won't need to have someone do my accounting for me, no matter what field I go into."

Since her experience as "Mayor of the Week" this spring, Bonnie has changed her future focus from a career in journalism or theatre to one in law or possibly politics.

"I was really impressed with what I saw at City Hall," she says, "I guess I hadn't realized how much work is involved in politics, or just how interesting it is."

Bonnie hasn't been active in high school government, and now regrets that she has not had that experience. Of course, girls in their teens are not encouraged toward this kind of activity.

"High school the situation still exists where girls are 'successful' if they are docile, passive and flatter the boys and teachers," Bonnie says. "Good girls are gentle, sit properly and aren't loud or argumentative.

"And no matter how much you may rebel in theory, you still find yourself pulled into the realm of trying to look pretty!"

Although by no means a hard-line fighter for liberation, Bonnie believes that equality will only come when women don't have to be dependent.

"Older women I've talked to who are lonely or depressed about their lives are usually ones who haven't been independent.

"They haven't kept busy with their own interests during the years of family raising, and when the family's gone, they feel useless."

That won't happen to a young woman like Bonnie, who has hobbies like sewing and short story writing to keep her busy and fulfilled, whatever her future holds.

Honor Lady Bug

DOVER, Del. (AP) — The lady bug has joined the blue hen chicken, the peach blossom and the holly tree as revered symbols of the state of Delaware. Under intensive lobbying by second-graders from Mildred's Lulu M. Ross Elementary School, a bill declaring the lady bug to be the official state insect zipped through the house and senate and was signed into law by Gov. Sherman Tribbitt.

MR. AND MRS. KIM HUM

Hum — Feeney

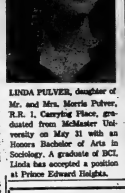
St. Thomas Anglican Church was the scene for the May 25 wedding of Carol Ann Feeney and Kim F. Hum Rev. David Hawkins performed the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David A. Feeney and the groom is the son Mr. and Mrs. Tom Hum of Stirling.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of nylon sheer over sharkskin front and back bodice of pagoda lace with long lily point sleeves of same lace. The Alene skirt had a cathedral length train with lace insets and lace apoligue border on the bottom of the dress. The veil was nylon tulle with scalloped lace edging, lace headpiece with pearl beads sewn in floral shapes. The bouquet was pink miniature carnations, lily of the valley and baby's breath.

The maid of honor Karen Mills wore a pastel blue flowered polyester sheer empire waist gown with floral border print and cap sleeves. The bouquet she carried included shasta daisies and roums tinted to match her dress. She wore a wide brimmed white hat with a pastel blue ribbon.

The bridesmaids, Trudie Brown and Pearl Hum, sister of the groom, were outfits the same as the maid of honor, in mint green and pastel yellow, respectively.



The bride's sister, Lisa Ann Feeney, wore a dress like that of the other attendants, with a headpiece ring of pink and white pinoddle mums and carried a basket of daisies and mums. The groom's brother Ming Hum was the ringbearers.

The best man was Jerry Hum, the groom's uncle.

The ushers were David E. Feeney, the bride's brother and Robert Corbett.

The reception held at the Army Navy Air Force Club, Tartan Lounge was a buffet supper.

The couple will reside in Belleville.

LINDA PULVER, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Pulver, R.R. 1, Carrying Place, graduated from McMaster University on May 31 with an Honors Bachelor of Arts in Sociology. A graduate of BCI, Linda has accepted a position at Prince Edward Heights.

LYNN D. GRENKIE Graduated May 31, from Fanshawe College, London, Ontario as a Respiratory Technologist. She has accepted a position at Peel Memorial Hospital, Brampton, Ontario. Miss Grenkie attended Moira Secondary School and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Grenkie.

MR. AND MRS. ANDREW HATFIELD

Hatfield — Wetherall

Albury Church was the setting for the recent wedding of Judy Ann Wetherall and Andrew Nicholas Hatfield, performed by Rev. Maurice McLeod.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Wetherall of RR 1, Carrying Place, and the groom is the son of Mrs. Isobel Hatfield of RR 1, Carrying Place and the late Donald Hatfield.

Given in marriage by her father and mother, the bride wore an empire-waisted gown of pearl de soie with chantilly lace sleeves and a scalloped hem trimmed with the same lace. Her full-length veil fell from a pillbox headdress. She carried red roses, and wore a family heirloom, an amethyst and seed pearl lavalier, that her mother had worn at her wedding.

The bride's sister, Janet Wetherall was maid of honor in a yellow gown of flocked organza over satin crepe.

The bridesmaids were Brenda Gardiner of Toronto, and the bride's sisters Joanne and Jacalyn Wetherall, who were gowns the same as the maid of honor's, but in blue, green and pink respectively. All the attendants were picture hats, and carried bouquets of daisy mums and carnations dyed to match their gowns.

The bride's brother David Wetherall was ring bearer.

The groom's best man was his brother Paul Hatfield. Serving as ushers were Douglas Wetherall, the bride's father, and Stephen Weese and James Richardson.

After a reception and dance at the Elk's Lodge, the newly-married couple motored to the east coast of the United States.

Mr. and Mrs. Hatfield now live at RR 7, Belleville.

Greek Wives Lonely

TORONTO (CP) — Thousands of Greek immigrant women here are lonely and isolated because their husbands dominate them and prevent them from integrating into society, says a report released by the Ontario citizenship bureau. They often become depressed, develop psychosomatic symptoms and end up in emergency wards because cultural tradition and lack of social outlets leave Greek women helpless.

Engagements

Mr. and Mrs. Howard G. Clarke of Picton, are pleased to announce the engagement of their daughter, Candy Louise to David Gregory Burkitt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Burkitt. The marriage will take place on June 22, at St. Mary Magdalene Church, Picton.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Paul King of Belleville are pleased to announce the engagement of their daughter Gail Sharon Latouski to Steven Thomas Rodgers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Rodgers of Read. The marriage will take place June 29, at 3 p.m. at Bridge Street United Church, Belleville.

Marriage Forecast — Like Mother, Like Wife

Dear Ann Landers: I read change her. My own mother is and get along great. Sign me: your column every day. I have wonderful, too. She has never Successful Living tried to run my life or my husband's.

The man I married isn't perfect, but there's nothing I'd change. He's a good father and a terrific provider. Our children accept each other as we are for a change.

Dear C.: You sound like a happy family. Thanks for a letter that doesn't have a beef.

They Aren't Making More

ALTOONA, Iowa (AP) — Out here in the heartland there's a saying that God quit making land some time back. If any home on the place does, it's it to 1 someone fed up with food prices will turn it into a tomato, spring onion or carrot patch.

Kathy Glaeve has two vegetable gardens in the backyard of her home in this Des Moines suburb. She's proud to point out the blooming seeds that will end up on a summer dinner table, but quicker to note:

"We were going to expand, but there just isn't any land to rent. Everybody has the same idea."

Well, maybe not everybody. But the home-gardening fad, which popped up during last year's food-price pinch, is sweeping the country. And as ricultture agents, seed manufacturers and hardware-store operators cautiously predict, 20-to 30-million new gardeners in the U.S. this year.

When the boom appeared last year, there were comparisons to the victory gardens days of the Second World War. But this year the popularity seems more widespread than the belt-tightening, beat-the-Axis days of old, there are.

Joel Roa might be called an urban farmer. The 34-year-old medical researcher is tending over a garden in the Bronx section of New York City.

"It's the beauty of the whole thing. It's fantastic to work directly for your food and not to work for money," he said of his new work amid the concrete and noise of the country's largest city.

But Elbridge Freeman, representative of the Burpee Seeds Co., a major nursery in Atlanta, Ga., says most vegetable-seed shoppers "in our garden centres are either the older retired people or the young long-hairs. the intelligent ones—not the hippies."

"It's pretty obvious that the older ones are a little fright ened about rising prices, but the younger ones are just concerned. We're selling more garden seed this year than before."

Ed May, president of the Earl May Seed and Nursery Co. of Shenandoah, Iowa, says his firm "like all seed companies in the country is seeing the largest volume of 40 per cent in garden-seed sales. Our problem is trying to keep up with demand."

May says $3 to $4 invested in vegetable seed for a 10-foot-by-20-foot garden "will save you $100 or more in a grocery store."

Several Indiana cities offer garden plots to the public. Indianapolis, for instance, will rent a 20-by-30 foot plot for $25 and the Married Students Council at Indiana University rents 300 18-by 18-foot plots to married couples for $10 each.

A visitor to Nicholson's Hardie's Seed Shop in an affluent section of Dallas, Tex., will barely find a parking lot and watched dozens of customers at their cars with gardening items.

Manager W. G. Dash said the price of seed has gone up and some varieties are scarce.

Nurseryman Richard Surgill of Cottage Hills, Ill., also rents garden plots, offers lessons to budding greenthumbs.

"We show new gardeners how to till the soil and plant the seeds, when to plant for best results and how to harvest their crop of vegetables," he said.

For those who can't take lessons, there's always the library. Signet Books caught the trend this year with a paperback called The Apartment Gardener.

They're Roomies But Don't Tell Mom

BOSTON (AP) — Almost every night a student named Jeff puts a toothbrush in his shirt pocket and walks across the courtyard of his Harvard University dormitory to spend the night with his Radcliffe College girl friend.

At Beloit College in Wisconsin, 19-year-old Charlie and his girl friend, Sue, have pushed their beds together. They have lived in her dorm room for almost a year.

Jeff, 21-year-old athlete and his sophomore girl friend at the University of Louisville in Kentucky have lived in her dorm room since last summer. They rely on their friends not to snitch on them and on a resident adviser who agrees to look the other way.

The college couples are among hundreds of students in the United States who are living together on campus.

Most of them insist it is no big deal and that seems to sum up the parents' attitude. The couples, however, requested anonymity, citing possible questions or embarrassment for parents.

Interviews with scores of students and administrators at more than 100 campuses and universities across the nited States indicate that although living together is rarely discussed in the college catalogue, it is a popular way of life for some on campus.

It has blossomed as the old "going steady" craze of the 1950s and early '60s, but almost all students interviewed disdain at least two or three couples living illicitly on campus. They see nothing wrong with it.

The trend raised many eyebrows among parents, alumni and school officials when it appeared in the mid-1960s and there was public outcry about campuses becoming sex hotspots and sex. But most of that has disappeared.

Most couples living together in the Harvard dorms have a very serious relationship," said a graduate student assigned as a resident adviser to one dormitory, or "house" as it is called at Harvard. "It's a very acceptable thing."

"It's ordinary," said a Harvard boarding official. "I don't know how the university could intrude. You couldn't possibly do a thing like bed checks."

When today's seniors were freshmen, living together—particularly spending the night on campus with someone of the opposite sex—was taboo at most schools, including Harvard. If caught, they were often expelled. These days, it is not so risky.

None of the couples living together on campus had been assigned to the same room by the college. In fact, most use both rooms for the sake of appearance. mail, more storage space—and privacy when they want it to.

"He only sleeps here when my roommate is in class," said a freshman at Indiana University. "We can't really sleep together and think about getting married some time, but not right now."

Her boy friend reached over and kissed her hand. "As far as personal relations are concerned," he said, "you can't have a lot about each other's way. You can cope with problems if you have candor, understand each other better. It was a long time after we began spending most of our time together that we thought about sex. four or five months. Our relationship isn't just to sleep together."

College administrators, with few exceptions public relations problems with the state, community, parents and alumni and schools have offer conflicting advice of living arrangements, ranging from open-sex corridors where someone of the opposite sex does not break a rule to formalized allowing couples freedom.

"For a whole set of reasons, you're dealing with a very diverse group of students in terms of levels of maturity, past experience, personal needs and boundless experimentation," said Thomas Schreck, dean of students at the University of Illinois where students can choose dorms with closed, limited or open visitation policies.

"If you try to force them all into a set mould, you're not seeing that there are differences dressing yourself to the differences people possess."

A study of 482 member institutions of the Association of College and University Housing Officers shows that 76 per cent of the U.S. colleges offer some form of co-ed housing in dormitories. Only 15 per cent of the schools offer men and women rooms on the same floor or in the same suite. The study was conducted by David DeCoster, an assistant dean of students in charge of residence life at Illinois. He said there is no evidence that co-ed housing in any fashion has increased sexual activity among students.

"Literature shows that attitudes have changed dramatically in the liberal direction," said DeCoster, who is recognized by many college and university officials as an expert on campus housing. "They are more accepting of peer behavior. But there is no documentation in their own behavior. And Jeff Hilliard, a sophomore at Tufts College in Medford, Mass., agreed.

"The idea that everyone has lost his virginity at the age of 19 isn't true," he said. "A lot of people here haven't had intercourse by the time they're seniors. Everybody acts as a big show. But for those who do choose to start a relationship, it isn't scandalous. It isn't talked about. It's accepted."

Sex said he had lived with a girl in his dormitory for several months, but they had broken up.

"It's hard when everyone knows you were together, but everyone knows it's over, too," he said.

Dr. Elizabeth Ann Reid, a psychiatrist who works at the Harvard University Health Services, conducted a study of two groups of Radcliffe women. One group lived in all-female dorms; the other lived in dorms where men and women share the same floor.

She writes in the Radcliffe Quarterly:

"It seemed to me that overall, being less isolated from men, the young women in coeducational dorms had more opportunity to grow as women who were more, and used this to gain more security, not only in relation to men, but also in terms of feeling good about their lives and themselves as persons.

"Full sexual relationships are somewhat more frequent in the heterogeneous group and there were more sexual affairs with men with whom there was serious emotional involvement. Casual encounters, however, were common in both kinds of groups, and all but one woman in each group felt these had been a mistake. Contrary to some people's predictions, sexual promiscuity and irresponsible behavior was not different between the two groups."

"Sure, there's more opportunity for sex," said Karen, a psychology major in a co-ed Pennsylvania university. "But if you don't want sex, you'll have it anyway. Bob and I are together most of the time. He doesn't drink and he's not a pot head. I don't expect him to be a Don Juan. We know a whole lot about each other. You know what I worry about most? Being married and then couldn't be so much if people knew more about each other, if they didn't look at marriage as a way to legalize sex."

All the administration officials interviewed agreed they encourage students for living together if there was a complaint from a parent or from a student whose privacy was being invaded.

"We'll deal with those we know about, but usually with a counselling approach," said Harold Grutsmacher at Beloit College. His title was changed recently from dean of students to director of student services to eliminate an authoritarian stigma. "We feel we are not parental. On the other hand, we continue to be supportive. And the line between parental and supportive is a thin one."

Some administrators said that finances have played a major role in convincing schools to ease dormitory restrictions. When students started demanding more freedom several years ago, many moved off campus to apartments, leaving many dorm rooms empty.

"Alumni are more critical than the parents," he said. "Alumni feel like they're missing something. They had to adhere to rules, and they think, so God should the students today."

Doris Accused of Bias

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: Your answers to people who express doubt or a belief or lack of belief in God seem disappointingly biased, to me, in favor of your experience in human relations. You give no quarter to those who do not accept they typical orthodox beliefs.

A recent letter featured an account of depression being cured by prayer. In all fairness, you might have added that depression can also be cured by Yoga, psychiatry, anti-depressant drugs, a change in life-style, medical treatment for physical disorders, and even hypnotism.

There are hundreds of thousands of testimonials to prayers, too. Babies die, a beloved parent does not make it through a difficult operation and the soldier does not return from the war.

"We cannot expect to understand His ways" is too glib a reply for someone seeking solace and the ultimate truth.

Are you sometimes reluctant to admit that perhaps we don't really have all the answers? If so, you have a fine, admirable adherence to accepted beliefs — to make us feel secure, can we not also allow credence and dignity to those who may have broader views?

Doris Blake: I have no interest at all in your personal experience in human relations. You give no quarter to those who do not accept they typical orthodox beliefs.

I would like to remind this column if I were not interested in dealing with depression (along with many other human problems) is being left up to the experts — psychiatrists, worker and psychiatrists, and medical science of various kinds.

Faith in a power above us can take many forms. The kind of faith I mean really grants that we do not have all the answers. But to my mind, the non-believers have more restricted views than those who grant the existence of a power more powerful than they are call it what you will.

Dear Doris: My appreciation for your kindness in sending the poem "Footmaiden's Prayer," especially when I neglected to enclose envelope and stamps. I remembered it much later than the strike!

As children in Sunday School we sang:

"If you have a kindness shown, pass it on.

It was not meant for you alone; pass it on.

Let it travel down the years, Let it wipe another's tears, 'Till in Heaven the gift appears;

Pass it on!"

So I am making an enclosure that my supply envelopes and stamps to others.

Dear I.W.: Thoughtful you! And what a coincidence that the very day I received your letter I had just written a reader who had been saying how grateful she was for good friends who had opened their homes to her when her family and relatives had locked their doors. She had come through troubled times. My advice to her had been to "Pass it on".

So that was quite a lift and we have no way of repaying it or so it seems. But then if we think about it enough, there will be a chance sooner or later to do a kind service for somebody else. That has to be our way of saying thank you. And it is certainly a way to "Pass it on".

(Doris has studied human behavior and can shed light on your dilemmas. Write to her, in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.)

'FREEDOM'

MAGIC LADY

By Cossie

Due to the Mistake by the Intelligencer last week, where the wrong picture of the below special was used, we are repeating the one week special on the "FREEDOM" pictured above.

How much you save from about $1 a day? Just by picking up your Magic Lady at Cossie's. Now, how many less laundry trips will you make during your baby, after a day at the beach, or after a day in the garden? Now, how many hours of ironing time have you left this an unproductive dressed up doll? Out of the water, how many times have you had to wipe off the dust, or dry off the water? Now, how many times have you had to put her in the water, how many times have you had to put her in the water, how many times have you had to put her in the water

Pierre and Bob Warming It Up

By PETER LLOYD
The CANADIAN PRESS

Prime Minister Trudeau turned his campaign attack against the New Democratic Party Thursday while Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield accused the prime minister of being afraid to face the country with his anti-inflation program.

The New Democrats, mainly responsible for keeping the minority Liberal government in power during the last Parliament, should be denied an opportunity to exercise the balance of power after the July 8 election, Mr. Trudeau told a crowd in a Penticton, B.C. park.

"If you give them too many members, they'll hold the balance of power. If they hold the balance of power they can't exercise it."

The NDP had "caved in" and voted to defeat the Liberals after seeing the minority government produce good programs for 18 months.

He flew to Saskatoon in the evening where he was to make an agriculture policy statement today in the Saskatoon-Humboldt riding of Otto Lang, minister responsible for the wheat board.

In Thunder Bay, Ont., Mr. Stanfield told a packed legion hall the prime minister "has not got the courage" to be established about his anti-inflation program, adding that Mr. Trudeau "can run but he can't hide and we're going to chase him."

New Democratic Party Leader David Lewis was flying Thursday east from Yellowknife, N.W.T., to Toronto, his last trip by commercial aircraft before getting his chartered turboprop plane on Monday for the rest of the campaign.

Social Credit Leader Real Caouette spent the day in the Montreal area, lending verbal support to people at Ste. Scholastique whose properties are being expropriated for construction of a new international airport.

At a coffee party in Terrace, B.C., Mr. Trudeau was with his wife when an elderly woman complained that the provincial NDP government of Dave Barrett has reduced her pension by $20 a month.

"Get rid of Barrett then," Mrs. Trudeau said. "that's something we can't do much about."

Mr. Stanfield mixed criticism of Mr. Trudeau and professions of concern for local problems as he visited the Ontario centres of Thunder Bay, Kenora, Red Lake and Fort Frances.

He said he did not share the sentiment expressed by Mr. Trudeau that Canadians should not get excited about inflation.

Perhaps I'm just the excitable type, but I'm not prepared to see millions of Canadians suffer from pernicious inflation."

After his visit in Saskatoon today, Mr. Trudeau was scheduled to return to Ottawa with a dense campaigning on route at Winnipeg. Mr. Stanfield was to continue his Ontario tour in Toronto, Brampton and Mississauga.

Mr. Lewis was to remain in the Toronto area through the weekend, with private meetings and a rally in his own York-South constituency scheduled for today. Mr. Caouette was to travel to the Ottawa area.

Candidate Nominates Opponent

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — George Olesevich, Social Credit candidate in Niagara Falls riding for the July 8 federal election, helped nominate one of his political opponents Wednesday.

Mr. Olesevich was one of 30 persons who signed the nomination papers of Pat Piccinville, New Democratic Party candidate in the riding.

"I don't feel any animosity to the other candidates," said Mr. Olesevich, explaining his sign the nomination papers.

Poll Gives Liberals Slight Edge

TORONTO (CP) — The CBC says that 33 per cent of more than 1,000 adults surveyed at random across the country last week said they expected the Liberals to form the next government.

But only 31 per cent of those questioned said they would vote for the Liberals while 18 per cent said they probably would vote for the Progressive Conservatives, 10 per cent for the New Democratic Party, two per cent for Social Credit. Thirty-eight per cent declined to answer or were undecided.

The CBC made results known in a news release. The poll was conducted for the corporation by an independent research organization which the CBC did not name.

Asked, "Which party do you think will form the next government?" 53 per cent said the Liberals, 20 per cent the Conservatives, three per cent the dissident NDP, two per cent Social Credit, one per cent expected another minority government but 46 per cent thought this would be bad for the country.

PM Rescues Little Bird

PENTICTON, B.C. (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau dived into a swimming pool Thursday to save a drowning bird.

The rescue occurred while Mr. Trudeau was giving his wife Margaret a dunking during a three-hour break from the July 8 federal election campaign.

Mrs. Trudeau noticed the small, brown bird flutter into the outdoor pool at a motel. The bird began to struggle for its life and the prime minister, 54, dived in and cupped it in the palm of his hand.

He carried it from the pool and stroked it a few times. The bird found its wings again and took to the air, apparently no worse for the experience.

Volunteers Promised Aid

FREDERICTON (AP) — Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan said Thursday that if re-elected he will work hard to stabilize farmers' incomes and attract young men into farming.

Standing on a flat-top wooden wagon at a poultry farm, Mr. Whelan said legislation to help achieve those ends was on the order paper when the Liberal government fell.

Mr. Whelan, a farmer himself, said legislation in the works includes money for stabilizing farmers' income and for making advance payments to producers or fall commodities so they will not have to push their produce on the market when prices are low.

He said the government is stepping in to prevent "cheap surpluses" from other countries flooding into Canada and "destroying your livelihood."

Mr. Whelan said he also wants to see dairy farmers set up a 10-year program related to their costs rather than operate from year to year as they do now. National talks to this end are going on now, he said.

Stable Income Whelan Pledge

VANCOUVER (CP) — Secretary of State Hugh Faulkner said Thursday that federal government funds will be more accessible to volunteer organizations under a new project called the Advisory Council on Voluntarism.

Mr. Faulkner announced the project at a conference of volunteer administrators meeting at University of British Columbia.

The council which is to be in operation early next fall will steer volunteer groups in need of financing to the appropriate government department as well as advise the government on the kinds of support it can usefully provide. Its 15 members will be appointed from the volunteer sector itself.

Mr. Faulkner said the Opportunities for Youth and Local Initiatives Program have usurped the role of the traditional volunteer and were getting financial support when the finances of established volunteer groups remained precarious.

Garden Gassed

NOTTINGHAM, England (CP) — For six years, Mr. and Mrs. John Harrison have planted bulbs in their garden—a total of 300—without a single flower resulting from the effort. In contrast, neighboring gardens were a blaze of colour. Now experts have discovered that gas from a leaking pipe has been poisoning the soil of the Harrison property.

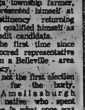
BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, FRIDAY, JUNE 14, 1974

Socred Enters Fray



A latecomer fourth candidate unobtrusively made his official entrance in the federal election hastings. In Hastings riding late Thursday afternoon.

Floyd Hawley, 49-year-old Tweedsmuir township farmer, quietly presented himself at the constituency returning office and qualified himself as Social Credit candidate.

It is the first time since 1962 a Socred representative has run in a Belleville - area constituency.

But it's not the first election campaign for the lively, amiable Amelisburgh township native who spent much time in what once was Social Credit country — the prairies.

In 1962 he sought election in Alberta's Wheatkin electoral district where he had been a general store operator 20 years after leaving the Quinte district.

FLOYD HAWLEY

It's what was to be expected, returned to Ontario in 1964 and went into nearly in Orill-ia. Just two years later he moved down to Tweedsmuir's second concession where he now does annual farming.

Immediately after finishing the qualification formalities with returning officer Reg Denham in Belleville he agreeably admitted he didn't expect to win this election "beyond a miracle".

But his sights are on the future — which he believes is closer than others may estimate.

His candidacy will serve as a focus to re-organize Social Credit in the area.

"This is the beginning of what we hope will turn out to be a grassroots organization," he said.

The way he figures, the Liberals will be returned to power again with a minority government. Only this time the New Democratic Party may lose seats to Social Credit which has come out of the splinter support group, Party leader Real Caouette already holds 15 Quebec seats and there are 27 ridings — mainly in Western Canada — where the Socreds came second in 1972.

Nonetheless, a basic reason won't create a personal campaign style of negativism. He's out to "make a very good showing" against the rival Conservative, Liberal and NDP campaigns.

Married and the father of a 20-year-old daughter, Sarah, he will use joint-candidate assemblies for public meetings and door to door and hold coffee parties.

Assault Charge

Belleville police have arrested a 19-year-old Belleville man and charged him with assaulting a police officer, following an early morning scuffle Friday on Alexander Street.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said that Christopher Emmanuel Georgiou, of Alexander St., has been charged after he allegedly got into a fight with a police officer who had stopped the car in which he was riding around 3:25 a.m.

The police had stopped the vehicle to see why its tail lights were not working and a passenger in the car fled to the rear of a house at 11 Alexander Street.

One of the police officers followed the fleeing man and when he tried to arrest him and put him in handcuffs was hit in the face, bitten and kicked.

The man managed to escape from the injured police officer with only one hand in handcuffs.

Georgiou was arrested a short time later on Forin Street, when two other police officers found him wearing one shoe and a set of handcuffs.

Meeting the Minister

Donald Irvine, (left), Ontario minister responsible for municipal affairs, was keynote speaker at Four Seasons Hotel conference Friday night of Ontario Municipal Administrators' Association. Meeting the minister were Mayor Robin Jeffrey and Gerry Tamblyn, newly-elected association president.

Regional Authority Costs Lower Than Critics Say

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Donald Irvine, Ontario Minister without portfolio, Thursday night accused opposition critics of wildly exaggerating statistics to make regional government spending seem higher than it actually is.

At the same time he told some of the province's top local government administrators that reform must be concentrated in fewer municipalities to provide services the people want.

As a minister within the treasury, economics and intergovernmental affairs department, Mr. Irvine has been a key government spokesman and trouble-shooter in municipal affairs.

His speech was a keynote event at the annual conference of the Ontario Municipal Administrators Association at the Four Seasons Hotel.

He said Opposition Leader Robert Nixon has been "most irresponsible" in using wrong statistics to attack the costs of regionalizing local governments.

He cited these two instances: In Ottawa-Carleton costs after regionalization increased by 14 per cent, not the 36 per cent claimed by the opposition. The increase in Niagara region government was expected by 16 per cent.

New organizations are bound to spend more money in their formative period, he said. And bigger local governments are bound to cost more when first established because they provide more, improved services than the smaller municipalities they replace.

"But people don't consider their factors when they're presented with a few cold figures," said Mr. Irvine. "Exaggerated wildly exaggerated figures that makes regional government a whole lot more far higher than it actually is."

"No one can tell me that we're not able to improve a system which was established in 1940," he added.

Both elected and appointed officials have a right to improve local systems at the present time.

"Now is not the time for us to go back to the old system where we had way too many municipalities. Now is the time to try to make sure that our services are efforts in fewer municipalities with full-time revenue and payors and services our people want.

"I think to do anything else is irresponsible," he said.

Municipal Officials Elected

MUNICIPAL index ma

Gerry Tamblyn, Barrie city administrator, has been elected president of the Ontario Municipal Administrators' Association, at the organization's annual conference in Belleville.

Other executive officials elected at the OMAA convention at the Four Seasons Hotel were Don Evan, city administrator, Sault Ste. Marie and Jim Darrah, Kitchener city manager, as vice-presidents; Dick Travis, Windsor assistant city manager, secretary-treasurer; Jim Sage, Sudbury municipal administrator, director. Past president is Fred Woods, Guelph city administrator.

Competent decision-making now is vital in the complexities of modern municipal affairs, he told the administrators. Urbanization has created increasing demands for services and environmental protection.

"We are all more conscious than ever before that the difference between a community that has character and a city that is merely an urban sprawl is the very large measure — in the quality of services that the municipality provides ...

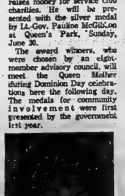
Ratepayers now no longer are satisfied with "minimum service."

Woman Injured In Collision

A Woodstock woman, Kathleen Slater, 28, is in serious condition in Belleville General Hospital this morning following a car-transport collision on Highway 401, just west of Highway 37, around 11:30 p.m. Thursday.

Officers from the Belleville detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police report that Mrs. Slater was injured when the car her husband, Harold Slater, 27, was driving ran into the left rear dual wheels of a transport truck driven by Lucien Martineau, of Quebec.

The Slater vehicle received $1,000 worth of damage as a result of the accident, while the transport sustained $500 damage.



Neither Mr. Slater nor the transport driver were injured in the accident.

Musician Honored

The Intelligencer
TORONTO — A Belleville man is among 10 persons to receive the Ontario Good Citizenship Medal later this month, Premier William Davis announced Friday.

Stephen Choma, 43, will be honored for his work as founder of the Eastern Ontario Concert Orchestra which raises money for service clubs and charities. He will be presented with the silver medal by Lt.-Gov. Pauline McGibbon at Queen's Park, Sunday, June 30.

The award winners, who were chosen by an eight-member advisory council, will meet the Queen Mother during Dominion Day celebrations here the following day. The medals for community involvement were first presented by the governments last year.

STEPHEN CHOMA

The province has been reorganizing regional offices in order to step up contact between high levels of government, and wants to deconcentrate its staff, authority and resources.

"It's important that we get autonomy and authority and the ability to use it back to the local level," said Mr. Irvine.

All-candidates Meeting

Wage, Price Controls Major Election Issue

By PETER GOODSPEED
Staff Reporter

Election fever grew in the Quinte area last night as seven federal politicians met and argued together at Centennial Secondary School in a public forum sponsored by the Quinte District Labor Council.

The seven politicians, representing four parties in both Hastings and Prince Edward — Hastings riding, were cheered, jeered and pelted by an audience of about 175.

With less than one month left in the general election campaign the politicians and the public ignored arguments about the "leadership question" that was so prominent in the early days of the campaign and instead concentrated on the issues of inflation, economics and foreign investment.

Each of the seven candidates addressed the audience for five minutes at the opening of the meeting and outlined their party's stand on what they considered to be the issues of the day. Once the speechmaking was over, the candidates fielded written and oral questions from the audience.

George Hees, the Progressive Conservative candidate for Prince Edward — Hastings was the first politician to speak and during his address concentrated upon inflation saying it was the focal point of the election and was currently so bad in Canada that his party was prepared to introduce wage and price controls as a form of "short term cure" to stop the rapid rise in the cost of living.

Referring to figures released Wednesday by Statistics Canada, that showed an annual increase of 10.9 per cent in the consumer price index, Mr. Hees said that he believed the main cause of rising prices was "the people are buying in anticipation of more and more inflation".

Today, in this election, the main issue is whether or not we are going to have the cost of living continue to rise at a rate of 11 per cent a year, as it is today. Or are we going to have a program to bring our cost of living down to a much smaller increase in the kind we have had for the past 75 years — or an average increase per year of three per cent," Mr. Hees said.

Dubbing the Conservatives' policy of wage and price controls as a "form of double-talk" he told the audience that a 90 to 90 day freeze would convince people suddenly that inflation would not continue.

The freeze would eliminate, what Mr. Hees termed as "the false buying power" that is created by people borrowing money to purchase goods in anticipation of increased inflation. At the same time it would give a Conservative government time to meet with the business, labor and industrial leaders of the nation so that they could set up a "cooperative set of guidelines" for a system of price and wage controls, that might be in effect for an additional period of 18 months to two years.

In discussing the flexible guidelines, Mr. Hees said that a Conservative government would be willing to grant wage increases that corresponded strictly with the rise in the cost of living and that increases in the price of commodities, over the amount outside Canada would be allowed in cases where the international price had increased over the Canadian market.

The second politician to address the audience was Marie Kurchak, the Liberal candidate for Hastings.

Mrs. Kurchak lashed out at the Conservatives and the New Democrats, saying that they have used "inflammable language", "distorted information" and "easy promises".

Saying that the country didn't need an election and that no one wanted it, Mrs. Kurchak attacked the opposition parties of defeating the Liberal budget for purely political reasons. The Conservatives opted for an election simply because they felt "power was just too close". The NDP initially had been forced to support the government for financial reasons but in the end had to defeat it in order to save face, Mrs. Kurchak said.

Outlining some of the features that were contained in the Liberals' April budget, Mrs. Kurchak said that it was mainly in favor of the government for all the ills of the 20th century and added that her party would take action "responsibly and without gimmicks" to solve the economic problems.

Canada has an industrial growth rate that is second only to that of Japan with just half of the present inflation rate, Mrs. Kurchak said. She described the Conservative policy of a wage and price freeze as being unrealistic and termed the NDP policy of a two-price system for Canadian goods as a vague and unrealistic proposal.

Mrs. Kurchak claimed that wage and price controls had been used in other countries and had failed. She cited Bob Stanfield and Harvey Gottfried, the two NDP candidates for Hastings and Prince Edward — Hastings, attacked the issue of inflation and condemned the Liberals for what they termed "their hands-off fiscal monetary policy", while saying that the Conservatives' idea of a price and wage freeze was unrealistic.

A system of wage and price controls had failed in other countries, Mr. Gottfried said. No matter what the Conservatives did, they would find it easier to control wages than prices.

The NDP advocated the creation of a two-price system for Canadian goods for the domestic and the international markets, Mr. Gottfried told his listeners. His party would tie such a system of controls to other policies that would be designed to reduce the bank interest rate to six per cent, from its current 11% per cent; a floating and strict corporate power and profits by revamping the Prices Review Board and introducing a new anti-profiteering bill. At the same time the NDP would seek to encourage growth in the economy by promoting the creation of new secondary industries in Canada, Mr. Gottfried said.

The Ivan Social Credit candidate for Hastings riding, told the audience that his party would control the "right to borrow" and "distorted information" and "easy promises".

Saying that the country didn't need an election and that no one wanted it, Mrs. Kurchak attacked the opposition parties of defeating the Liberal budget for purely political reasons. The Conservatives opted for an election simply because they felt "power was just too close". The NDP initially had been forced to support the government for financial reasons but in the end had to defeat it in order to save face, Mrs. Kurchak said.

Sorting Out Labor Woes

The student project providing information on employment rights for the labor force (SPIEL) set up shop in front of Towers Thursday and Friday to disseminate information on labor laws. Querying the ministry of labor team is Janice McCoy, right. Students on the provincially funded team operating out of Kingston for the summer are Doug Halstead, Keith Kinash and Susan Marten.

Ticket Wicket Information Booth

The Liberal campaign organization for Hastings is using its headquarters, the old Belle Theatre, to full advantage.

Bill Kurchak, husband of candidate Marie Kurchak and her campaign manager, has converted the old ticket booth into a voter's information booth.

"People wanting voting information can stop at the ticket booth and don't have to be embarrassed by going into a campaign headquarters," he said.

The campaign office manager, Janette Berry adds that "a lot of people don't vote because they don't know how to vote."

The voting information booth will allow people to get answers about how to vote in the advance poll, where to vote, when to vote and important little things like making sure their name is on the voters list," she adds.

The information booth will be open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Saturday, beginning today.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Kurchak continues her "people campaign." She is "mainstreeting," in all areas where people congregate, in order to meet as many people as possible.

Car, Truck Collide

TWEED — A Thomasburg man was taken to Belleville General Hospital Friday morning following a car-truck collision on Highway 37, two miles south of here.

Ernest Bleeton, 69, of Thomasburg, was in hospital early today with undetermined injuries.

Provincial police said the Mercury vehicle was northbound on Highway 37, and in the process of making a left-hand turn when struck by a transport-trailer driven by James Smith, 25, of Burke's Falls.

Damage to the transport was estimated by police to be $100. The Mercury vehicle sustained $1,000 damage.

Seven Named to Hall of Fame

MONTREAL' (CP)—Seven new members were named Thursday to the Hockey Hall of Fame.

Named in the builder category were the late Charles Hay of Toronto, former president of Hockey Canada; Tommy Ivan, current general manager of Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League, and the NHL's first referee-in-chief.

Former players selected were left winger Dickie Moore of Montreal Canadiens defenceman Art Coulter of Black Hawks and New York Rangers; the late Thomas Dunderdale of Winnipeg who played centre and rover with professional teams of the pre-1917 era; and the late Billy Burch of Weston, Ont., who played centre with New York Americans.

Formal induction of the seven will be held in Toronto, Aug. 22.

Hay, a retired oil company executive, died last October, one year after organizing the now famous Canada-Soviet Union hockey series. Born at Kingston, Ont., in 1902, he moved to Saskatoon in 1913 and was a member of the University of Saskatchewan team that lost the 1921 Allan Cup to Toronto Granites.

Ivan, 63, born in Toronto, joined Detroit Red Wings as a scout and became coach in 1947-48. His teams won six consecutive NHL championships and three Stanley Cups in seven years.

In 1954-55, Ivan joined Chicago as general manager, and coached for 1½ seasons after the death of Dick Irvin. His Hawks won their first Stanley Cup in 23 years in 1960-61 and their first East Division titles in 1967 and 1970. In the West Division, the Hawks added titles in 1970-71, 1971-72 and 1972-73.

Voss, born Jan. 6, 1907, in Chelsea, Mass., was a member of the Memorial Cup finalist Kingston juniors of 1926. He turned professional with Toronto in 1927 and played with Rangers, Detroit, Ottawa, St. Louis, New York Americans, Montreal Maroons and Chicago. Moore, 43, played 12 seasons with Montreal Canadiens and single years with Toronto Maple Leafs and St. Louis Blues. He was all-star on the NHL first team twice 1957-58 and 1958-59 and the second team in 1956-61. He led the NHL in scoring in 1957-58 and 1958-59, winning his first scoring crown despite a fractured left wrist.

Winnipeg-born Coulter broke into the NHL with Chicago in 1932 and was traded during the 1935-36 season to New York. He was captured at the Rangers in that team's last Stanley Cup victory in 140. Burch, born in Yonkers, N.Y., Nov. 30, 1900, was captain of New York Americans for four season 1926-1930 before finishing his career with Boston Bruins and Chicago in 1936.

He won the Hart Trophy as the league's most valuable player in 1925 and the Lady Byng Trophy as the most gentlemanly player in 1927. He died in 1956.

Sanderson-No Conflict

NEW YORK (AP) — Derek Sanderson said hello to his new hockey home Thursday and declared that his mod style would not conflict with the traditionally conservative values of his new boss, Emile (Cal) Francis.

Francis, general manager-coach of the National Hockey League's New York Rangers, acquired Sanderson from Boston Bruins Wednesday.

The Ranger boss has always had a strict rules about short hair, no moustaches, and neat attire. Sanderson wears his hair long, has a thick moustache above his lip, and has been known to go without a tie.

Asked how the clash of styles would be resolved, Sanderson smiled, and said:

"Well, the Cal is coming around a little. He wore a striped shirt one game this year and I said him I'd grow a moustache. I'll buy him some plaid form shoes."

Then Sanderson fingered the hair under his nose.

"If Mr. Francis wants it off," he said, "it's off.

"So far he hasn't said anything. Realistically, though, the Cat is the boss. What he says, goes. We had a meeting and everything was fine."

Included in the meeting was agreement on a six-figure contract.

"A good, high six figures," said Sanderson, "with a good raise."

Also on hand for Thursday's news conference was lawyer Bob Woolf, who negotiated Sanderson's move to New York after the controversial centre was suspended by the Bruins late last season.

Dick Cherry Signs Multi-Year Deal

BOSTON (AP) — Don Cherry, a multi-year contract with which I am satisfied."

coach and general manager of Rochester Americans of the American Hockey League moved up to the National Hockey League Thursday when he was named coach of Boston Bruins.

Cherry, 40, was signed to a contract of "more than one year and less than five years," said Bruins managing director Harry Sinden.

Cherry piloted the Amerks for 7½ seasons. In his first full season of coaching, he brought the club to third place in the AHL East, and last year he coached Rochester to first place.

The Rochester coach replaces Bep Guidolin, who led Boston to the NHL East title but left following a contract dispute. He has since signed on as coach of the NHL Kansas City Scouts.

Guidolin quit the Bruins after his demands for a five-year contract were rejected. He sought the long-term contract after the Bruins lost in the Stanley Cup finals to Philadelphia.

Cherry, who played his lone NHL game with the Bruins during the 1967 playoffs, has been voted the AHL Coach of the Year the last two seasons.

"I'm really very honored to get the job," he said. "I have strong ties in Rochester and they're tough to cut, but the opportunity afforded me in Boston was just too good to pass up."

Earlier, Cherry said he had initial doubts about taking the job, turned down earlier in the week by John Ferguson at the hockey meetings in Montreal.

"When I went to see Harry Sinden, I was saying 'no,'" Cherry said. "When I came out I was saying maybe."

He said he had been offered

25 Per Cent Of Blazers Sold

VANCOUVER (CP) — June Sitton of Winnipeg has acquired 25 per cent of the World Hockey Association Vancouver Blazers in a $750,000 deal with Neonex interests controlled by Jim Patison.

Mrs. Sitton, widow of John Sitton of the Publishers Ltd. newspaper chain, concluded the deal Wednesday with Pattison following approval by the Pacific National Exhibition of some technical changes in the team's Coliseum lease.

Mrs. Sitton will receive a limited partnership in the Blazers, while Neonex will continue operating the financially troubled Blazers Hockey Team Ltd. has been re-organized as a partnership which is owned 75 per cent by Neonex.

Leafs' Top Pick
Valiquette May Turn Pro Now

TORONTO (CP) — Jack Valiquette may turn professional even though the 19-year-old has said he'd prefer another season in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

The 6-foot-2, 200-pound centre was Toronto Maple Leafs' initial choice in the National Hockey League's recent series draft of amateur hockey players.

Valiquette has two more years of junior eligibility and informed that Leafs had drafted him, said he'd look at soon pro in another year or two of junior hockey before turning pro.

However, his agent, Toronto lawyer Alan Eagleson, said Thursday the youngster may not be able to afford to remain a junior.

"There's just too much money involved to ignore," said Eagleson, who based his thinking on negotiations he conducted for other juniors taken high in the draft—defenceman Rick Hampton from St. Catharines Black Hawks, by California Golden Seals and defenceman Dave Maloney, another 17-year-old from Kitchener Rangers, by New York Rangers.

Maloney signed a multi-year contract Thursday with the Rangers.

Eagleson said that by returning to juniors without some future guarantees from the Leafs, Valiquette risked injuries that might permanently ruin his hockey career without adequate insurance coverage. He said that unless Toronto can guarantee a future for Valiquette should he decide to remain a junior, he will strongly recommend his client turn professional.

Pelyk Signs With Cinnci Stingers

TORONTO (CP) — Mike Pelyk, a 30-year-old defenceman who excelled last season at killing penalties for Toronto Maple Leafs, signed Thursday with Cincinnati Stingers of the World Hockey Association a contract that might bring him more than $1 million in the next five years.

The signing was announced jointly here and in Cincinnati, a franchise that won't begin operating until the 1975-76 season.

In the meantime, Pelyk will be on loan to the WHA's Vancouver Blazers.

Financial terms of the contract were not disclosed although his agent, lawyer Alan Eagleson, said that bonuses might bring the seven-year National Hockey League veteran about $1 million.

A no-trade, no-cut clause during the first four years was included in the contract and apparently played a significant role in spurring Pelyk's move to the WHA.

Andy Bathgate, assistant to Vancouver's general manager-coach Joe. Crozier, who attended the news conference called to announce the signing, said all he can think about was "how much Mike is going to help us defensively."

Vancouver finished fifth in the Western Division, 16 points out of a playoff spot.

Pelyk said he would have more to say about leaving the Toronto organization.

"But after talking it over with my friends, other players and my financial advisers, I know I had to go," said the 6-foot-1, 188 pounder.

Sandford Only Quinte Racer

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

When the second round of the Ontario Motorcycle Championships get under way Saturday night at the Quinte Exhibition Raceway the Belleville area will be represented.

Dave Sandford, a 19-year-old Bridge youth, will run his 360 cc Bultaco in the Junior Class.

"I've been around bikes a long time," commented Sandford, "but I haven't much experience at racing them."

Even with a very limited amount of experience on the track Dave travelled to the first round of the provincial championships in Tillsonburg and finished fifth in a field of 24.

"The bike is really running well for me," he added, "I keep it in top shape all the time."

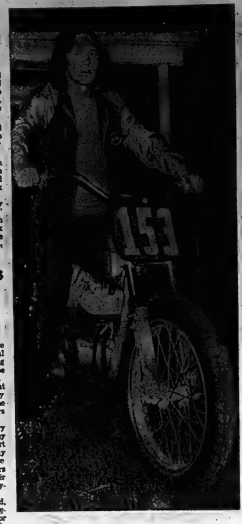
Dave first got an interest in motorcycle racing through the cycle magazines he used to purchase.

He's had motorcycles of his own since he was 14-years-old.

"I worked in a cycle shop in Toronto last year and got my first chance to race while I was there," he said.

He only went to two races in 1973. The first was a write-off as far as placing was concerned and the second was a write-off as far as his bike was concerned. His second start, at Peterborough, was a very futile trip for Dave because his 250cc Carabella blew up on him in the warm-ups.

This year, with his Bultaco, and a lot of "sweat and guts" Sandford hopes to really get into the racing field.



He has a few problems right now though, the first of which is trying to find a job in his field in the Quinte area.

"I've been looking around for quite a while now," said Dave, "I was to find a job as a motorcycle mechanic but there just isn't any place around here to work."

Dave wants to run in all five rounds of the Ontario Championships, but "money is a real hassle," he said.

Sandford has never run on the Belleville track although he is aware that it is rated the safest and fastest track in the province.

"The competition is really upgraded from last year," commented Dave, "so with my experience and the track as fast as it is going to be it's hard to say where I'll finish."

CMA Meets Here Saturday

The Canadian Motorcycle Association's (CMA) National Executive will be holding their spring meeting in the Belleville area this weekend.

On Saturday morning at 10.30, Mayor Robbie Jeffery will welcome the CMA to the Piston Pushers headquarters in Foxboro.

Marylin Bastedo, secretary of the CMA explained why this area was chosen, "part of the agenda of the two-day meeting will be to assess the activities of Piston Pushers Motorcycle Club Inc. in their field of promoting motorcycling."

"In particular," she added, "we want to look at the results of the Pilot Project for Motorcycle Safety Week, which was co-ordinated by the Piston Pushers in May."

Ethier Fans 14 in One Hitter

Behind the solid, one hit pitching of Bob "Stud" Ethier, Howard and Robert Printing took a 3-0 win from Bardon Supplies in Quinte Fastball League action. The game was the nightcap of the twinbill, which saw Rollins' Construction edge Devolin Motors 3-2 in the opener.

The stocky southpaw Ethier is picked up the Printers' fourth victory of the season, left 14 men standing at the plate on their strikes.

The only Bardon batter to reach base with a hit was Bill Dewey, with a fourth inning single. Ethier allowed only two bases on balls.

Losing hurler Wayne McConnell didn't have such a difficult night on the rubber as well, allowing only two hits. The right handed McConnell fanned eight, while walking three.

The only Howard and Robert hitters to touch McConnell were Jack Hughes, with a triple, and Dwight Rathwell.

Firefighters Hold Tourney

Eighty-one golfers from as far away as Toronto and Brockville made the trip to CFB Trenton yesterday to play 18 holes of golf in the Belleville Professional Firefighters' fourth annual golf tournament.

John Guthridge, of Cobourg, one of the guests invited to the tournament, was the winner of the over-all low gross score award with an 18-hole total of 81.

Bob Lloyd won the low gross award for the Belleville firefighters, while Fred Smith of Scarboro walked away with the out-of-town firefighters low gross awards.

Awards given to police officers who participated in the tournament went to R. Oliver of the OPP for the lowest gross score, while Bill Reis of the Belleville OPP walked away with the lowest net score award.

Larry Fritz, one of the Belleville firefighters won the award for the most improved golfer in his tournament and Bob Andrusi won the Belleville firefighters award for the most honest golfer.

Belleville firefighters who placed in the top four for the lowest gross category included Don Smith, Eugene McGrath, and Larry Fritz.

Behind the solid, one hit pitching of Bob "Stud" Ethier, Howard and Robert Printing took a 3-0 win from Bardon Supplies in Quinte Fastball League action. The game was the nightcap of the twinbill, which saw Rollins' Construction edge Devolin Motors 3-2 in the opener.

The stocky southpaw Ethier picked up the Printers' fourth victory of the season, left 14 men standing at the plate on their strikes.

The only Bardon batter to reach base with a hit was Bill Dewey, with a fourth inning single. Ethier allowed only two bases on balls.

Losing hurler Wayne McConnell didn't have such a difficult night on the rubber as well, allowing only two hits. The right handed McConnell fanned eight, while walking three.

The only Howard and Robert hitters to touch McConnell were Jack Hughes, with a triple, and Dwight Rathwell.

The Printers got their first run in the second inning, when Ken Genereaux drew a walk to lead off the frame. Rathwell unloaded his double to score Genereaux, two putouts by McConnell, ta-

Wayne Woods drew a walk, scoring when Hughes pounded his three bagger to deep left centre field. Hughes was left stranded at base, with McConnell fanning Ken Genereaux to end the inning.

It was the sixth loss for Bardon, who have picked up only three points, on one win and one tie, leaving them in the league basement, two points behind the Ellis Printing Juniors.

The win lifted the Printers into a second place tie with Devolin Motors and Augur Men's Wear, all three teams with eight points an identical four and four records.

In the first game of the pair, Rollins Construction rolled to their eighth consecutive win without a loss in league play this season with a 3-2 edging of second place Devolin Motors.

An unearned run in the bottom of the seventh inning gave the Constructionmen the win.

Ken Demille, the winning pitcher in the game, stroked one out double, with Randy Lambert following with a single.

On the succeeding play, Devolin catcher Lyle Thompson was charged with an error, allowing Doug Adams, who had been sent in to run for Demille, to score.

Dewey had opened the scoring in the contest in the first inning. Terry Meagher led off with a ball hit, followed by another, by Rick Rosebush. Ralph Plaxe committed an error on the play, with Meagher scampering home.

Rollins' made it 2-0 in the game with a run in their half of the second, with Paul Goodfellow leading off with a three base hit. Wayne McTaggart's deep fly ball to centre field drove Goodfellow home.

The second Rollins' run came in the bottom of the fourth, with Doug Dafoe drawing a two out walk. Demille replied with the second triple of the night for the team to send him home.

The Motormen forced the game to the bottom of the seventh with a run in the top of the frame. Ray Lumsden was hit by a Demille pitch, but was erased on the next play on a fielder's choice to pinch hitter Bruce Sickle.

Meagher added his second base hit of the game to advance Sickle to third, with Rosebush's single, also the second of the night for him, driving him in.

Demille gave up five hits in picking up the win, striking out four while issuing only two walks.

Darryl Kramp absorbed the loss for Devolin, evening his record for the year at one win and one loss. He whiffed four while walking a pair.

Demille's triple and single earned him top honors in the hitting department, with Goodfellow next in line with his three bagger. Carl Boonbower, Dale Duval, and Lambert had the other base hits for the winners.

Meagher and Rosebush each had two singles to lead the losers, with Jim Horwood adding the other basehit.

We asked fishermen what they wanted in an outboard motor.
Here's their answer.

We knew it would take an exceptional new motor to replace our classic 9½ hp Sportwin. So, before we designed our new 9.9, we asked fishermen, both sport and commercial, what changes we should make.
We did what we were told.
We kept all the good features of our old Sportwin. The reliability. The fuel economy. The planing power. The steady power at dead slow trolling speeds. And the 8 quick-tilt positions.
We made the new 9.9 leaner and cleaner, and smaller. And we added a lot more to our 9.9. A new water-cooled mid-section. Evinrude pop-hob exhaust. More precise idle speed control. A new Quick-Gas ignition system. And a pre-set shallow water drive.
On top of all this, we came up with a few neat answers of our own. We developed an electric start model with the starting motor under the hood where it ought to be. (For remote fishing trips, you just disconnect the battery and you've got a lightweight manual start outboard.)
So if you're a fisherman who knows what he wants in an outboard motor, see the new Evinrude 9.9 and also the new 16 hp Fastwin (manual & electric).
See Evinrude's complete fishing fleet — 2, 4, 6, 8.9 & 15 hp at your dealer's now.
Every Evinrude for '74 is designed to conserve energy by recycling unburnt fuel into additional power. And becomes every Evinrude is drainless, we've keeping our waters clean too!

NAMATH SUES

BOSTON (AP) — Joe Namath, quarterback for New York Jets, and his football camp for children have filed a $1-million damage suit against Boston sports concessionaire Eddie Feldman of WNAC-TV and the station's owner, RKO General Inc. The suit charges that Andelman held falsely and with malice during a nightly newscast last year that Namath did not take a personal interest in the boys enrolled in his camp, appeared only occasionally and was lax in seeing that quality food and medical care were provided.

Lack of Scoreboard Aids Giant's Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

For six innings, the scoreboard at Candlestick Park wasn't working, which was fine as far as pitcher Jim Barr of San Francisco Giants was concerned.

Then, in the seventh inning, the scoreboard and Giants came to life and Barr had a 1-0 National League baseball win over Chicago Cubs.

"I don't like to look at the scoreboard when I'm in the dugout because, if I see who's coming up the next inning, I might get worried," said Barr.

The scoreboard started working just in time to register the game's only run, scored on a Cub error, a wild and a single by San Francisco's Gary Thomasson.

That was all Barr, who pitched a six-hitter, needed.

Rain prevented Thursday's only other National League game, Atlanta between the Braves and New York Mets.

Kansas City Royals edged Milwaukee Brewers 5-4 in Thursday's lone American League game.

Steve Ontiveros led off San Francisco's seventh inning with a grounder that first baseman Billy Williams let go under his glove.

Ontiveros made it to second, went to third on Bill Bonham's wild pitch, then scored when Thomasson singled to centre.

Chicago manager Whitey Lockman, noting that Bonham had tossed a losing five-hitter, mentioned:

"Sure he pitched a good game. But no one will know that tomorrow. They'll just see that his record is 6-6."

Barr, 3-3, has bounced back and forth between starting and relieving roles the past two seasons.

John Mayberry's two-run homer in the first inning and Vada Pinson's solo shot that started a three-run second carried Kansas City past the Brewers.

Cookie Rojas' sacrifice fly and Amos Otis' double provided the winning margin.

Gene Garber replaced Kansas City starter Paul Splittorff in the sixth inning with three runs across the nobody out, choked off a Milwaukee rally and preserved the triumph.

"It was the same old stuff I've always had," said Garber, who struck out six and yielded only three hits and one run.

"I don't have any explanation for the strikeouts. I was throwing the ball over. They had to swing at some borderline pitches. I just kicked out."

John Briggs hit two doubles to drive in two of the Brewers' six runs.

MacDonald Paces Whitley's Win

Jim MacDonald fired four goals to pace Whitley Insurance to a 4-0 win over Cooney Haulage in Bay of Quinte Soccer League play Wednesday night. In other games played, Golden Mile Olympics dumped Brighton 6-1, and Trenton Spartacus tubed Parsons by a 1-4 count.

Whitley's were without their top scorer, Henry Somerveld and full back Harry Lamers for their game with Cooneys, but still managed the win.

Len Taft set up the first goal for Whitley's, taking a shot on the net which MacDonald deflected for the marker, the wording one.

Another deflection accounted for the second goal, with a sharp defensive move turning into a score. MacDonald forced Cooney defenseman Louis Forbes to kick the ball off his foot, into the net.

Terry Hore recorded the shutout in the Whitley net, his third of the season. He has allowed only two goals in five games.

A highlight of the game was the play of Shawn Coldwater, a 13-year-old called up from the Trenton Minor system to fill in for missing players. The young winger played an excellent game at wing for the winners.

Charlie Nesterovski also potted four goals for his team as Golden Mile swept over Brighton. Joe Iasenza and Nick DeGroseo had the other markers for the Olympics, who also recovered strong play from Petros Vlasidis.

Bruce Mohr scored the only Brighton goal on a penalty kick in the second half.

Spartacus clinched up their first victory of the year with a win over Parsons. Ted Abrams scored the only goal of the game in the second half.

Parsons dominated play in the first period, but Spartacus went into a defensive shell after the marker by Adams.

In games played Thursday night, Cobourg dumped CFB 4-1, while Warkworth upset United 4-3.

Ray Hore opened the scoring for the CFB squad after only 10 minutes had elapsed, but Peter Babe tied the game for Cobourg just two minutes later.

John Van Boies, John Hayward and Alex Ensart all scored for Cobourg in the second half when CFB seemed to fall apart.

Andy McWilliams and Dave Goulden each had outstanding games for the winners, playing well in their defensive roles.

Warkworth picked up their second win of the season with the victory over United. Names of scorers were not submitted.

BIRTHS

WEESE — Tim and Anne (nee Barlow) are proud to announce the arrival of their daughter, Sarah Margaret Anne, born Thursday, June 15 at the Belleville General Hospital. Special thanks to Dr. Berchtold.

MOIR — Marco and Lori are pleased to announce the birth of their daughter, Tara Lynn, on Tuesday, June 13, 1978, a sister for Jason and Jeremy. Thanks to Dr. Woodley and staff of 1st level.

BATEMAN — Bob and Sandy (nee Hammond) of Hillcrest wish to announce the arrival of their son, Ryan Chad Robert on May 31st, 1978 at the Belleville General Hospital. Thanks to Dr. Mac Mackenzie, Dr. Rutledge of Madoc and 12C/D staff. Ryan is a brother for Jeff and a nephew for Mr. and Mrs. Alan Hammond of Pine Street, Belleville, Mary-Lou and Bob Bateman of Madoc and Mr. and Mrs. Ken Bateman of Toronto.

ANDOVE — Bill and Nancy (nee Fuhrer) are happy to announce the birth of their son, Jeffrey Scott Andove, born June 14th, 1978, weighing 8lbs. 13½ozs. Special thanks to Dr. Jones, Dr. Woodley and Dr. Rosen and nurses of the birth room.

RUKSEPPOD — James and Judith are pleased to announce the birth of their daughter, Jessica Lynn, born June 1, 1978, weighing 8lbs. 4ozs. at the Belleville General Hospital.

IN MEMORIAM

McCAFFREY, Wilbur (Bill) — In loving memory of a dear friend who passed away June 16, 1977. Just to see it was the road sinus—Instead of grief, I'll remember But to all there knows a comfort Who knew him well, a friend indeed. You are not here, a part of us has gone Love and care, Ann. But you live within our hearts forever.

I will treasure through the years Two memories of you dear, Your smile did not betray, Your heart was true and clear. Until the very end, You thought of others weary, So kind, so true, so dear, His garden rests so beautiful, His flowers bloom so well.

Sadly missed by Mom.

TERRY LYNN FISHER — In loving memory of our dear cousin who passed away June 16, 1977 and remembered always.

We saw a flower too sweet for earth
And took him with a smile,
We planted and lovingly remembered by Uncle Dave, aunt Ruth, aunt Christine Bev, Sharon, and Aunt Carol.

loving memory of a dear father who passed away one year today, June 16, 1977.
Gone from his best tasting sweetcorn Death can never take away,
Remembered by his loving daughter Wilma from the garden he was in.

McCAFFREY, William (Bill) — In loving memory of a dear friend and grandfather who passed away one year ago today, June 16, 1977.
It hurts we now your absence,
We miss you more each day,
Your memory is our keepsake
With which we'll never part,
But when the heart is breaking,
We humbly turn to God,
It was His will to take you home,
His will be done.
Sadly missed by daughter Wilma, son-in-law Bill, grandson Billy and daughter, Joan, son-in-law, grandson Jeffrey.

In loving memory of a dear brother or friend who passed away June 16, 1977.
Memories are golden the call,
We sadly loved by you and all,
No memory is a sweet today,
As in the hour he passed away.
—Sadly missed by sisters, brothers and Irene Hamilton.

In loving memory of a dear son Ronald G. Dean, who died June 16, 1977.
We cherish the memory of a loving son once to you,
And those who think of him today, Are those who knew him best.
The sorrows we say upon his grave, No one sees.
But when we need him most,
He's the boy for him who lies Will never be forgotten,
Sadly remembered by Mom and Dad.

STOKES — In loving memory of a dear husband and father who died June 16th, 1977.
Two years have passed since that day,
When God took you away,
To bless him to our sides.
The one we thank of you,
Are very hard to find.
—Sadly missed and ever loved by wife Marguerite and family.

CARDS OF THANKS

I wish to thank Dr. Price, Dr. Perry, Dr. Hall and nurses and staff on 2nd floor for their kindness and care during my recent stay in hospital. Also, friends for gifts, flowers and cards received. Special thanks to the Hospital General Hospital. Thank you so much. Mrs. Pearl Spafford

IN MEMORIAM

FISHER — In Terry-Lynn.
Just a year ago today that sad day when the family circle was broken by your passing.
Sadly we reached up to God and asked Him why, But realized that God knows best, Just wanted to live with him to rest.
Sadly missed and ever remembered by Mommy and Daddy and Grandmother Rogers

CARDS OF THANKS

We sincerely wish to thank all our friends, neighbors and friends for their generous contributions, cards, flowers and for all other acts of kindness shown to our family in the recent bereavement of our sister, Mrs. Augusta Bonisteel. Special thanks to Dr. Rutledge for his kind care and to the nursing staff of 2nd floor Bridge Memorial Hospital, Harry J. Clarke Funeral Home, Rev. Bonisteel and Rev. Bradley. Thanks to all those who sent cards and flowers. May God bless you all for your kindness to us.
—Mrs. Lenore Miller and Family

The family of the late Edith Rodd would like to thank their friends and neighbours for their many acts of kindness during their recent bereavement. Thanks for the cards and flowers and especially for the donations to the Heart Fund. Special thanks to Rev. Bradley, Mrs. Ross and to Bert Leslie Funeral Home for their kindness and all arrangements. Thank you one and all.

I would like to express my sincere thanks to my friends and neighbours for their many acts of kindness during my stay in hospital. Special thanks to Dr. Rosen, Dr. Rutledge and Dr. Hall and the nursing staff of 2nd floor Bridge Memorial Hospital. May God bless you all for your kindness to us.

THERE'S ROOM FOR EVERYONE
In this well-kept spacious home that has 2 bedrooms, 1½ baths, kitchen, dining room, living room, eyes a mud room. It is economically heated in the winter and cool in the summer because of the all-new insulation and wall panelling installed not long ago. This would be an ideal spot for the larger family. Access to the Bay can be arranged and the Vendor will hold a 1st mortgage for purchaser with substantial down payment.

GINGERBREAD & STAINED GLASS
This farm home, close to Belleville, is just waiting for someone to move in and, with minor decoration, turn it into a real showplace. Four bedrooms, double living room, kitchen, dining room, 1 bath, plus the bonus of 141 acres of good land, a barn and other buildings all combine to make this a very good buy. Why not call now!

MEDICAL CLINIC ?
This large, modern building close to the hospital is ideally situated and suited for conversion to a medical clinic. It presently contains a business office and a beautiful apartment with 2 bedrooms (and 3 baths) on the main floor. The second floor contains 4 apartments (and 4 baths). Each has an air conditioner, stove and refrigerator. There are many extras such as the built-in P.A. system, and a central vacuum cleaning system. It is situated on a large lot, which could provide ample parking. Call today for viewing.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Saturday, June 15

Aries (March 21-April 19) Be ready to retract an impulsive decision you'll be making today. Move fast to correct matters once you spot your mistakes.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Check carefully all bills and statements for any work or service you're having done at this time. There's a big error somewhere.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) There's something special you're shopping for. Don't purchase it impulsively without more comparison pricing.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) You will be a bit edgy early in the day. Later, you'll calm down and be much more sure of yourself. Take things slowly.

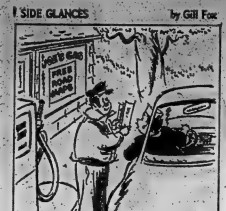
Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) Wait a bit before you impulsively make changes to your social plans today. After second thoughts you'll want to adhere to your original program.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) What you reach for the check to try to make a good impression, don't be shocked when the other party lets you pay without a fuss.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) "A friend has a pretty good idea for you. It would be to your benefit to have him explain it in its entirety.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) There's a nuisance-type task facing you today. You'll feel uneasy until it's out of the way. One you know well can help you with it.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're going to find yourself more in demand than usual. Others recognize you're an asset to any gathering.



Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Someone you'll be associating with is going to be very helpful where your work or career is concerned. This person likes your style.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Fortunately, you spot thi flaws in some well-meaning but flimsy advice you'll be offered by a friend.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) You should notice an improvement now in conditions that have an effect upon the size of your bank balance.

To Your Good Health

Don't Leave Baby Alone in Bathtub

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I just read that oil particles in the lungs could damage them. About four months ago my baby had scares and on my grandmother's suggestion I rubbed him in buttermilk.

I keep let the bathroom for a minute but he fell in the tub and I'm sure quite a bit of milk got in his nose.

I am so worried, since reading about lung disease, that he may have gotten some in his lungs, bronch or sinuses, and may get pneumonia or T.B. or pneumonia.—J.J.

True that one should be careful about oil particles getting in the lungs, but this happens chiefly from use of mineral oil drops in the nose.

In your case, remember that the fat content of buttermilk is low, and your baby undoubtedly coughed up any buttermilk that may have gotten in his throat.

It wouldn't cause T.B. even if it had gotten some in; if lung irritation were going to develop, it would have done so long before this. And I wouldn't worry about any harm in later life.

But I hope now you and everyone who reads this will remember that it isn't safe to leave a baby alone in a bathtub even for a minute. If you have to go to the phone or answer the bell, wrap the baby in a bath towel and get him out of the tub. Or take him along with you which is even safer.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Suppose you were cast on a desert island for a year and had available to you only two foods to keep you alive and healthy. Which would provide the most nutritional strength? Which foods provide the most nutritional punch to the ounce?—F.E.W.

I'll answer by telling you a little true story. It happened several years ago when I was on a fishing expedition in Canada. A friend and I and our Indian guide had been canoeing all day. It seemed that our guide would never pull up so we could make camp—and eat.

Finally we pulled over into one of those delightful little bits of paradise to be found only on a northern lake, and our guide opened his knapsack which consisted of—bacon.

He extracted some smoked trout, some oranges and some beer.

It was all there. I thought at the time, this was a perfectly balanced meal this old Indian fellow has prepared.

The trout provided the necessary protein and fat. The oranges the carbohydrates, vitamins and minerals, and the beer the fluids.

So I guess if I were to have to make my choice, I'd opt for the fish and the oranges and probably forsake the beer in favor of fresh water, which I certainly have available on your desert island.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I need your help bad. I'm 18, single, and in school, age 5th. I thought I was normal until I found out I can't have intercourse with my boy friend. There is something wrong with me and he can't either.

What's wrong with me? I'm afraid I'll never be able to have sex. What can I do? Is there any special doctor I could talk to or see? I don't have much money, I can't tell my parents. Will anybody be able to help me?—Scared.

Two principal causes of this. One is tension—you just can't relax. The other is an unusually tough and elastic band across the hymen being a membrane at the entrance to the vagina). When that is the cause, it is a quite simple procedure for a physician to correct it. All I can suggest is that you see a doctor—a good general physician will take care of this problem. Otherwise, he can refer you to a gynecologist.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Why is a person's temperature 98 in the daytime and 97 in the late afternoon or evening? I am 62 and have an adequate diet and get plenty of rest.—Mrs. J.J.C.

The temperature ranges you mention are not unusual for your age. The higher temperature later in the day is merely the result of your daily activities.

As we grow older, bodily functions tend to slow down and the body temperature reflects this general lessening of activity. As long as you are getting rest and maintenance you say you are, don't let the temperatures you speak of bother you.

By Oswald and James Jacoby

There is nothing wrong with South's six-spade contract except that most players would manage to get themselves set at it.

After this pretense you ought to be able to work out the one winning line of play. It also happens to be by far the best from a percentage standpoint.

You win the first diamond and promptly cash the second one. If West ruffs you are going to be set, but that would mean a 7-1 break.

Now comes the surprise play. You discard your ace of hearts on it!

Now you lead dummy's queen of hearts. If East covers you plan to ruff and eventually discard three of your clubs on the rest of the heart suit.

It turns out that East plays 8 low heart so you discard a club right then and there. West takes his king and has anything he wants to. You win the trick, lay down your ace of (trump) and continue with the king; lead a third trump to dummy's queen and discard your last three low clubs on the good hearts.

Six Hitter Paces Brooke Bond

Ross Geen tossed a six hitter to lead his Brooke Bond team to a 9-1 victory in Belleville Industrial League action Thursday night, to the tune of four games played in the loop.

In the other games, UIC took a 10-8 decision from Consolidation, with Belleville Yardmen dumping Quinte Refrigeration by a 5-3 count, while Bell edged Stewart Warner 16-6.

Geen struck out four batters and walked two in finishing up the win for Brooke Bond.

Jim Northey started for Independents, lasting four innings, allowing ten hits, and all nine runs. He failed to fan a batter, while walking three. Paul Trompour checked the three frames, allowing three hits, whiffing two and walking one.

Jack Walsh led the winners with a double and single, with Theo St., John doubling; Geen, Rod Stratton, Don Goodfellow, and Larry Hilbert each had a trio of singles, with Brian Rapai and Bob Pozzo adding one hit each.

For Independents, E. was Georgs Frons and Bob Dwyer collecting two base hits, with Dave Healy, Ken Brethour, Hunter Fournier, and Charlie Ferguson each adding a base hit.

UIC orbit Constellation 14-11 in their game, although they could only manage one extra base hit, Joe Clark crashed a home run to go with two singles for the Consolidation.

Bill Healy and Al Walker each had three singles, with Don Northey and Jon Stanley each contributing a pair. Ron Kirby socked one base hit to round out the 14 hit barrage.

For Constellation, it was Ken Mitchell with a double and single, with Wayne May and Ron Wilson, Clark, John Cole and Earl Reid each had a trio of safeties, with Mike Callaghan and Ken Kerik each collecting one.

Joe Schwartz and Rick Sulvaso combined to pick up the win, striking out seven and walking three.

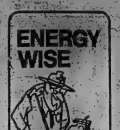
Wheeling hurler Randy Van Norman gave up 17 hits; also walking two and fanning four.

Bob Bogle had the big swat, a home run, for the winners, with Ron Wade and John Bowen each doubling. Steve Ebbler had two base hits, with Eric Williams had a double for the Irish, with Fred Stickman, Ron Calliden, and Mike Bradshaw singling.

Brian Plumbe went the distance for CNR, allowing only four hits. He walked two and fanned six.

Pearson was charged with the loss, allowing six runs on three hits, walking four and fanning none. Four runs up one run, walking one and striking out one.

At CNRA Park, Rod Bennett fired at seven hitters on the Stewart Warner round, but still lost the game by a 10-8 margin. He walked two and struck out four.



Jay Miller and Van Norman adding base hits.

Doubles: Leonard and Steve Bears each had three singles, in a losing cause, with Jim Heun, Great Collet, Jim Nichol, and Lenny Hegadorn adding two each.

HABS SIGN LUPIEN

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens announced Thursday they have signed defenseman Gilles Lupien to a three-year contract. Lupien, who was one of the National Hockey League club's choices in the second round of last month's amateur draft, was selected from Montreal's Juniors of the Quebec Major Junior A Hockey League.

Pepper's HR Ties Game

John Pepper cranked a ninth inning, three run homer to salvage a point for Melrose Wednesday night in South Hastings Baseball League action.

With the score 5-3 for the Reserve, Pepper's blast, with two men on, tied the game up at 5-5.

Other Melrose hitters were Rick Meagher with two singles and Don McTaggart, Larry Pascoe and Randy Pascoe with one single each.

For the Reserve, Maracle punched two singles and Murphy, Kemp and Brant each got one.

Steve Heffernan went eight and a third innings for the Reserve before giving way to George Hill. The pair combined to fan 10 and walk four.

Pepper started the game for Melrose, but was replaced in the sixth inning by Ted Abrams. The two issued one walk while striking out 10.

In another league game Wednesday night, Shannonville edged Read 7-6.

Glenn Carleton was the man with the stick as he blasted a first inning grand slam home run to give Shannonville a 4-0 lead. Carleton then added a single. Other hits went to Jason Morris with a double and a single, Mike Brant with a pair of singles, Junior Brant, Blake Lott and Rob Young with a single each.

Bob Reid took the win fanning 13 and walking two.

Larry Coffey absorbed the loss, striking out nine and walking three free bases.

For the losers, Johnson, Carm Milligan and Pete Welch collected two singles each and Pat O'Connor got one.

The only other South Hastings contest had Carrollton squeeze past Latta 2-1.

Gary Tweedy was the star of the game, both offensively and defensively. Tweedy drove in both of the Carrollton runs and stopped Latta from scoring the losing run with a nice catch at second base.

John Maddock went the distance on the Latta mound event, striking out nine and allowing four hits. He walked two and struck out seven.

For the winners it was Bob Reith on the rubber losing two walks and fanning six.

Tweedy and Larry Adams got the only Carrollton hits. Adams had a single and Tweedy a double.

Latta hits went to Bob Smith and Dale Bentley with a pair of singles each while Masterson and Allison singled once.

PORTER MAKES JUMP

CHICAGO (AP) — Ron Porter, a seven-year National Football League linebacker, has signed with Chicago Fire of the World Football League, it was announced Tuesday. Porter, a veteran of two Super Bowls, played out his option with Minnesota Vikings last season.

Purinaettes Keep Perfect Record

Purinettes kept their record clean as they stretched their win streak to eight straight with a 16-3 victory over Robert Lambert Construction.

In the only other Belleville District Ladies Softball League game, Thursday, Quinte Antenna trounced Simpson-Sears 21-16.

Sandy Fleming took the win on the Purinettes mound and Sandra Cann took the loss.

No other information is available for the game.

Aileen Barr went the distance for Quinte Antenna fanning two and walking nine.

Joan Gervin was the losing pitcher issuing five walks and putting one down on third strikes.

Heather Maracle smashed a pair of homers and added a single to lead the Antennas to the victory. Jackie Fraser punched a single, two doubles and a triple and Nina Flieger got three singles, a double and a triple.

For Simpson's Bernice Ryan got a single and a triple and Nancy Pound had two singles and a triple.

Trudeau Out West

Farm Aid Promised

By JIM POLING

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau ended a three-day western campaign Friday with a denial that the Liberals have evaded the inflation issue.

"You're not telling me it's a difficult problem," he told one of several hecklers at an outdoor rally for Defence Minister James Richardson and other Winnipeg-area candidates. But Canada was dealing with the problem better than most other countries.

The heckler had complained that inflation hurts the poor.

"Have you no compassion or feeling" the man shouted.

Mr. Trudeau, who spent much of his second western campaign trip discussing transportation and agriculture, reiterated his view that Progressive Conservative-proposed wage and price controls, or the selective price controls suggested by the New Democratic Party, will not bring down food and housing costs.

His answer to high food costs was more food production, but farmers needed more income stability before they could increase production.

That statement tied in with a speech he made in Humboldt, Sask., earlier in the day. There, he told a friendlier audience that jammed a tiny park that another Liberal government would have to stabilize the incomes of not only grain farmers but those of producers of other farm commodities.

He told the rally, in support of Justice Minister Otto Lang, the only Liberal MP in Saskatchewan, that the Liberals would amend the Agriculture Stabilization Act to help farmers cope with rising production costs.

He also promised a storage program for up to 180 million bushels of grain. This would include wheat, barley, oats and corn and would cost $60 million a year.

But in Winnipeg, much of the talk was about housing.

Mr. Trudeau said the Liberal policy is to restructure the housing market to provide more low-and middle-income housing.

"Why not take off the federal building tax?" shouted another heckler.

Increasing housing supply was the way to handle inflation in housing, said the prime minister. Then he launched an attack on the Conservatives.

He said he can't understand how Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield can hope to control the country's economy when he can't control his own party. That was a reference, used over and over again by Mr. Trudeau, to the Liberals' belief that there is dissension among the Conservatives over income and price controls.

The prime minister said there hasn't been so much disarray behind a leader since Napoleon retreated from Moscow.

"I'll be your adviser for $1,-200 a month," bellowed a heckler, while another complained about government spending.

Earlier, at the campaign headquarters for Joe Guay, the Liberal member for St. Boniface, Mr. Trudeau said subsidization of high mortgage interest rates would bring on higher house prices.

He said such a program, proposed by the NDP, would lead sellers to say that buyers were being subsidized and they would increase prices.

Eh?

Canada Will Watch Beef Negotiations

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canada, her leaders already shut against United States beef, will be a spectator Monday during White House deliberations that may restrict the flow of Canadian herds into the U.S.

American meat packers, grocery chain executives, cattle feeders and ranchers have been invited to the White House to discuss ways of lowering the depressed U.S. beef industry.

Import curbs have been advocated, but a Canadian source who asked not to be identified said such curbs are not the answer.

He said the U.S. has a beef surplus, originating in the 1973 holdback on cattle sales caused by a beef price freeze.

Canada shipped $51.7 million worth of beef and livestock to the U.S. last year, down from shipments of recent years which were hitting about $100 million.

"Canadian cattle growers haven't the price incentive to sell to the U.S., with prices up in Canada," the source said. "Trade within Canada is more attractive at the moment."

Canadian negotiators have taken over that portion of the Canadian market blocked to U.S. exporters two months ago because of the Canadian ban against the use of diethylstilbesterol (DES), a cattle-fattening hormone.

Canadian and U.S. officials continue to negotiate conditions that may be too delicate to servers here, however, feel the issue may be do delicate to permit announcement of a solution before the July 8 Canadian general election.

The U.S. is the last major beef-exporting country to use DES. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) now is embroiled with manufacturers of the compound in an effort to re-impose a previous FDA ban overturned on a legal technicality.

Public hearings are to begin later this year on whether the ban can be re-instituted.

Sentiments are clear-cut no the controversial issue. Manufacturers and ranchers want DES. So do feed companies and feed-lot operators.

Environmentalists and those private citizens and veterinarians who have been in touch with the FDA are against its use.

Nixon Promises Arms to Faisal

JIDDA (AP) — President Nixon ended his visit to this Arab kingdom today with a pledge of increased arms aid to King Faisal, then took off for Syria as a Saudi cannon boomed a 21-gun salute.

The president looked tired as he shook hands with a long line of Saudi dignitaries before boarding his blue and silver jet. A hot, dry desert wind seared the runway, lined with Faisal's personal bodyguard of white-robed Bedouins armed with golden daggers.

"The United States will see to it that the level of security consistent with its responsibility to the Middle East is raised," Nixon said in remarks at King Faisal's palace.

"If Saudi Arabia is strong and secure, as it will be. It will enhance the chances for peace," the U.S. leader said as he prepared to fly to Syria for the third leg of his Middle East tour.

Nixon flies to Israel Sunday for the last leg of his journey Monday with a visit to Jordan.

Faisal responded to Nixon's words by expressing the hope that all problems and obstacles that have existed between the United States and some Arab countries will be removed."

The exchange of remarks followed more than two hours of private talks between Nixon and Faisal. Unlike the toasts made at a state dinner Friday night, there was no mention, direct or indirect, of oil.

Faisal had gently reminded the United States Friday of its vulnerability to the Arab oil weapon.

King Faisal used the toast of a state dinner Friday night to remind Nixon of the crucial role played by the Palestinian question in the region.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat referred to the matter in a toast to Nixon Wednesday, saying: "There is no other road for a durable peace without a political solution to the Palestinian problem."

Nixon was welcomed to Jidda Friday for an overnight stop by a friendly but traditionally low-keyed population, contrasting to the almost hysterical crowds who greeted him in Egypt.

Faisal, who also was warm but subdued in his greetings, rose at the end of the state dinner and said: "We believe that there will never be a real and lasting peace in the area unless Jerusalem is liberated and returned to Arab sovereignty, unless liberation of the occupied Arab territories is achieved and unless Arab peoples of Palestine regain their rights."

"We hope," he said, "that the U.S. will continue all efforts for a just and lasting peace in the area so that we may live safe and security." Faisal continued: "It is peace and security that form the basis for American development and prosperity."

Nixon's response to Faisal was the same as he made in Egypt.

"We want to play a helpful role," he said. "But we are aware that we cannot produce an instant formula to solve all long-time difficulties."

King Faisal considers himself responsible for the protection of the Moslem holy place in Jerusalem and wants all Jewish participation in the biblical city ended.

Russia Ready To End Tests

MOSCOW (AP) — Communist party chief Leonid Brezhnev said Friday the Soviet Union is prepared to agree immediately with the United States on ending underground nuclear testing.

But Brezhnev did not indicate whether the Kremlin is prepared to allow on-site inspections a major obstacle in previous talks.

U.S. negotiators have consistently asserted that on-site inspections are necessary to prevent cheating, but the Soviets have argued that underground blasts can be detected electronically and have rejected on-site checks.

Editors Ask Liaison With Police

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — News editors of Ontario's daily newspapers decided at the annual regional meeting of the Canadian Press Friday to try to improve liaison between police and the press.

The editors said some restrictions imposed by police on news events involving law-enforcement activities are against the public interest. They asked their nine-member News Study Committee—comprising news editors from different papers in the province—to study the problem.

A resolution passed by the meeting said:

"There is a general feeling that there is a deterioration in relations between police and the press and that the Ontario News Study Committee should take the initiative to have authorities approached to remedy the situation."

"We are ready to reach an agreement with the United States right now on the limitation of underground nuclear tests and we shall fulfil terminations according to a co-ordinated timetable," Brezhnev said in a final campaign address before Sunday's elections to the Supreme Soviet.

While the outcome of such elections is predetermined, campaign speeches are often used as a vehicle for major policy statements.

Brezhnev's declaration, coming less than two weeks before the start of President Nixon's visit here, indicated the Soviets hope that an agreement can be signed during the summit.

U.S. technical experts have been in Moscow for two weeks exploring ways to broaden the 1963 test ban treaty, which prohibits atmospheric and underseas tests but made no provisions for underground test.

Brezhnev's address coincided with an announcement that Nixon will attend a North Atlantic Treaty Organization meeting in Brussels on June 26, the day before he departs for Moscow.

Brezhnev stringly defended Nixon's visit against "speculation" and "ill estimations" in the foreign press. "Of course, nobody is going to give in a rash question which have not yet matured. But it is impossible, comrades, to make no headway."

He hailed the agreement to limit strategic arms signed by the United States and the Soviet Union in 1972, but he added: "We urge that the Soviet Union and the United States by mutual accord show the maximum restraint in further development of their armaments."

In Washington, Paul Nitze quit his post as the top Pentagon member of the U.S. nuclear arms negotiating team, saying that the "depressing reality" of the Watergate scandals make a successful SALT agreement unlikely.

Bird Man

Every day, Albert Deluitis visits the grounds of Metropolitan United Church in Toronto to feed the pigeons that congregate around the big old church. At the sight of Mr. Deluitis, the birds climb all over his head, arms and shoulders eager to get the tasty bits of wheat he brings them. Not even the church bell, which can be heard for blocks, frightens the greedy pigeons away. (CP Photo)

Bugs Said Kissinger's

BEAUMONT, Tex. (AP) — Representative Jack Brooks says evidence before the House of Representatives judiciary committee shows State Secretary Henry Kissinger ordered telephone taps of reporters and government officials.

Kissinger has denied under oath that he ordered the taps.

"When the taps are made public the country will know he is guilty," Brooks, a Texas Democrat and senior member of the committee, told reporters Friday night.

On Tuesday, after reporters questioned his testimony to the Senate foreign relations committee last September, the state secretary asked the committee to take another look at his testimony. Kissinger said he will resign if his name is not cleared.

Mr. Minifie retired to Victoria in 1968 where he wrote two nostalgic volumes of memoirs about his Prairie boyhood.

OPP Support Hanging

KINGSTON (CP) — The 14,000-member Ontario Provincial Police Association OPPA wants hanging used for persons convicted of the murder of policemen and prison guards, G. F. MacDonald, OPPA executive manager, said Friday. Canadian law provides for hanging when a policeman or prison guard is killed on duty, but the death penalty has not been used since 1957, Mr. MacDonald said the federal cabinet has commuted every sentence of questioned clemency when the judge and jury hearing the case have not recommended mercy. He said in some cases the death penalty is a definite deterrent. Without the death penalty, a criminal already facing a life sentence has nothing to lose if he kills a policeman in an escape attempt, Mr. MacDonald said.

Tweed Man Killed

TWEED — An unidentified Tweed man was killed in a single car collision on Highway 37, about three miles south of here early Saturday.

Madoc provincial police are withholding the man's name pending notification of next of kin.

Police said today the driver lost control of his vehicle on a section of highway locally known as Martin's Hill.

The northbound vehicle went off the roadway onto the east shoulder, careened across the paved portion and into a ditch on the west side of Highway 37, before hitting a ramp and travelling 137 feet in the air.

Police said upon landing, the vehicle struck a wooden fence before coming to rest, leaving against a piece of farm machinery.

OPP Cruiser In Accident

Two Hamilton men remain in Belleville General Hospital today with injuries received in a two-car collision on Highway 14, 12 miles north of Belleville early Saturday morning.

Roy Douglas Cooper, 25, of Hamilton remains in hospital with a fractured wrist. Passenger in the Cooper vehicle, Larry Lasli, 27, is also in hospital with heavy head and facial injuries.

Driver of the second vehicle, a cruiser with the Belleville detachment of the Provincial Police, James Devereux, 33, was treated for multiple cuts and bruises in hospital and released.

An OPP spokesman said today details are still sketchy.

Preliminary investigation revealed the Cooper vehicle was northbound on Highway 14, north of Oak Lake, when it struck the police cruiser, parked on the east side of the roadway.

Police estimate damage to the Cooper vehicle, and the boat and trailer it was hauling at $2,000.

Damage to the police cruiser were termed extensive. Police estimate the cruiser sustained $2,500 damage to its left side.

5 Escape Injury

TWEED — Five people escaped serious injury on a sideroad off Hastings County road two, in a two-car head on collision 13 miles north of here Friday.

All five were treated by a Tweed doctor for minor injuries.

Madoc detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police said the collision occured on a curve at the crest of a hill Friday afternoon.

Police said $750 damage was received by a car driven by Jack Frederick, 20, of Kingston when it collided with a car driven by Malcolm Rogers, 50, of 255 Byron St., Trenton.

Passengers in the Freeburn vehicle, Margaret Freeburn, James Freeburn, 13, and his wife Gladys, 72, both of Flinton, escaped serious injuries. Mary Mc Roberts was the sole occupant of his vehicle.

Police estimate damage to the Rogers vehicles at $400.

Front St. Mall For July Sale

The Belleville Businessmen' Association has announced the hiring of Paul Regan to head the organization of this year's Front Street Mall.

The project to be known as the Front All Your Cares Festival is to be held July 18, 19, 20, on a blocked-off section of Front Street.

The festival aims to bring to the public craft displays, band concerts, and service displays in the open air setting of Front St. The full list of sponsors is in the works to provide further announcements. The banks will provide free transportation in and out by Trans Ad Friday from 2 p.m. to 8 p.m.

Paul Regan is a former radio announcer with CFRB Toronto, who now makes his home in the Belleville area.

Traffic Held Up

Traffic at the intersection of Bridge and Front Sts. was momentarily held up Friday at noon while city police cleared the roadway of a lower car collision.

Police said today no one was injured in the accident. Total damage was estimated at $325.

A police spokesman said a vehicle, driven by Dominic Lentini, 24, of 2 Albany St., was in the process of making a left hand turn south onto Front St. when it came into contact with the vehicle of Evert Dersemaa, 25, of 378 Farley Ave.

Foxboro School Start in Fall

CANNIFTON — The Foxboro school, in the works for the past two or three years, is now only short months from a construction start, Hastings County Board of Education engineer Keith Hawkins told Thurlow council here Wednesday.

On a township road north of Foxboro, the school will house an estimated 400 children from kindergarten to grade eight, Mr. Hawkins told council.

Children from 12 other schools will use the new facility. Portables at Harmony Public School will be eliminated when the Foxboro school opens some time in 1975.

Construction of the pre-engineered steel building is set to start in November or December, 1974. With a brick exterior, air-conditioned and electrically heated, the structure will be built through an essential tendering of various portions of the building.

This method, said Mr. Hawkins, is expected to cut cost of construction. Budgeted for actual construction is $616,000. When architect's fees and furnishings are included in the cost, it rises to an estimated maximum of $940,000.

Nearly all necessary approvals have been obtained for a construction start on the structure, built in accordance with a modified open space concept.

Responding to questions from councillors, Mr. Hawkins said the school will be built on 13 acres of land bought by the school board in 1971.

More Looking for Work

There were nearly 400 more people registered for jobs in the Belleville area during May than a month before, Belleville and District Employment Committee was told Wednesday.

And the caseload at the Belleville district Unemployment Insurance claims office has risen "significantly" in the last two weeks.

Vaughan Storey, UIC claims office manager, said his office had processed about new claims in three days since last Friday than for the total 204 a week earlier.

The UIC office administers claims in Hastings and Prince Edward counties, and the increased caseload represents a mixture of occupatidis throughout the area.

But UIC officials had not been able to identify a specific reason for the increase.

James White, Belleville Canada Manpower manager, also said there appeared no specific reason for the increase in job registrations at his office.

"There have been no big layoffs during the month," said Mr. White, whose office covers the city, Ameliasburgh township and Hastings County.

One contributing factor could be that people from the Shannonville area in the district also were registering for work in Belleville.

The number of people registered for work with Belleville CMEC Employment Centre was 1,773 at the end of May. This compared to 1,483 in April and 1,818 in May 1973.

Some 670 of last month's total were students seeking summer jobs, Mr. White said.

Requests from Quebec For Exchange Higher

By ROBERT WHITELAW
Tweed News Bureau
The Intelligencer

TORONTO — The number of Quebec students seeking to develop skills in English this year outdistances applications from English speaking Students for the first time in the 30-year - summer exchange program.

More than 1,500 students, from Quebec have applied to the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews to participate in the four-week national program.

"I'm absolutely delighted but can't account for the increase from Quebec, looking at the legislation to strengthen the French language," says Rev. Richard Jones, president of the Council.

Mr. Jones told the Toronto bureau Quebec students from every village and town, some not even on the provincial map, have applied this year.

Fraser Earle, director of the council, says the more than 1,300 applications from Quebec may result from the desire by parents to have their children have a working command of the second language.

Area students participating in the exchange which begins June 23 are: Thelma Chapman, Frankford; Brenda Bell; Shelleyville; Janet Hutton, Brighton; Kathy Indewey, Trenton; Joanne Kirby, Belleville; Lori Lee, Joanne McMullen, Rhonda Smith, Janet Sudden, Debbie Thrasher, Clarice Vandervelde of Bayshore and Mowris, Coxbyville; Susan Schisler, Carrying Place; Cathy Beaver, Bath

Village Plans For Youngest Citizens

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

TWEED — This village is waiting to formally join the communities with a committed interest in the youngest of its young, in a flow of social changes.

Now rapidly maturing are founding plans for this village's first regular nursery school.

The project has evolved from the work of a 18-year-old local girl.

Charmaine Fleiser has had a day care centre for preschool children underway here since last summer. But the project now needs new funding sources if it's to remain viable and available to the community at large. In response, a group of involved citizens has moved to solve the problem.

Now underway are plans to form a corporation and administer the project, extending it from a rare centre into a full - fledged nursery recognized by the provincial government as a community asset.

The number of such nurseries have been increasing in recent years as social trends make it necessary for families to have both fathers and mothers as wage earners.

Origins of the project date back to last year when someone suggested to Charmaine — a graduate of Loyalist College's early education program — that she open a day care centre.

The start was modest. First registrations totalled four, she recalls. By fall, enrolment had doubled. Then Charmaine successfully applied for a $9,400 federal Local Initiatives Program grant. With the funds, quarters were rented in a church basement and two other girls hired to assist.

Now the number of tots left in care, by working mothers and other families for various reason and lengths of stay — averages anywhere between nine and 15 a day.

It's more than a babysitting service. The youngsters are taught basic skills, involved in creative preschool education programs and socializing.

The LIP grant runs out in July and without some form of subsidy it would be impossible to carry on, says Charmaine. Fees run to $3 a day per child. $4 for two from the same family.

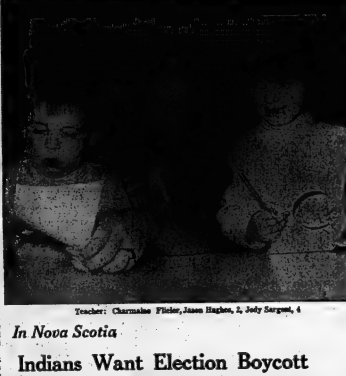
"But it couldn't just run on fees. They wouldn't cover the operating costs, she says.

But local citizens by then wanted to perpetuate the project — not only for working mothers but for the community at large as a nursery centre.

A citizens group under the chairmanship of Mrs. Barbara Johnston was formed and has been working out the solution.

Resolution of the problem rests in new provincial legislation. An amendment to the Day Nurseries Act permits a chartered private organizations to deal with subsidy offsetting capital costs for such project.

To make up financial differences the planning group would run fund - raising projects in the community.



Reeve Barbara Allen estimates it might cost only an additional $2,000 a year to keep the nursery operating.

Turning the centre into a nursery would also give it a more educational emphasis, says Charmaine, who sees such projects as a modern social need.

Some indication of the need comes from the hours the present centre now opens. The day begins at 7:30 a.m. when some mothers must get to work — and ends at 5:15 p.m.

Some women can make arrangements to have their children cared for, but such centres and nurseries are no longer a phenomenon but a fact of modern life, indicates Reeve Allen.

"There is no question about the need," she says. "These care centres are here to stay — as working mothers are here to stay. Now it's necessary for many families to have two incomes."

Demorestville Price Protest With Hoy

Demorestville — Haying will be commencing soon on Prince Edward County farms, but at least one ars farmer has decided to return to the old way of bringing it in.

Stanley Peeling, RR 2, Demorestville, in protesting the high cost of baling twine, will be hauling in his hay loose this summer.

Although owning a baler, Mr. Peeling says that until baling twine drops in within a reasonable price range, he "absolutely refuses to buy it."

Baling twine has more than tripled in price this year, from last year's approximate seven dollars per package to $2 and higher.

Quinte Farm Labor Pool Underway

A committee to streamline Quinte country farm labor supply and working conditions is expected to take a fundamental organizational step in Belleville next week.

The Quinte Local Agricultural Labor Board will hold a meeting to review applications for the full-time post of manager.

James White, Belleville Canada Manpower Centre manager, says he expects the group to start reviewing applications from applicants next week.

The committee is the Quinte district's response to a growing movement which has already produced similar groups across Canada, on the initiative of senior governments.

The committees are being established to assess manpower needs of farmers and farm local labor pools. They also will "identify wage-rate guidelines and establish working and accommodation conditions in their areas.

One major function of such a pool in the four Quinte counties would be to provide relief for dairy farmers now tied to the farm daily because of a shortage of help, says Mr. White.

Relief workers could also ease a more general situation.

One factor discouraging modern farmers is that, in a society increasingly enjoying leisure activities, they often can take little time away from daily chores.

Local seeking farmers make up much of the membership on the committee, which is seeking to organize a Quinte labor pool for Hastings, Prince Edward, Northumberland and Lennox and Addington counties.

Its chairman is Percy Reid, of Campbellford, Hastings County Mills committee chairman. Other members include Gary Fox, RR 1 Bloomfield, vice-president of the Prince Edward County Mills Committee; Clayton Hall, provincial agriculture and food ministry representative at Stirling; Donald Hough, Lennox and Addington representative.

Applications already have been received for the management post. When committee's selection is approved by the federal government which helps fund the organization — offices for the labor pool will be established. These likely will be in the Belleville-Stirling area which is central to all four counties, says Mr. White.

The program drew comment this week at a meeting of the Belleville District Employment Committee.

"I think the program has a lot of merit in this area," said Vaughan Storey, Unemployment Insurance Belleville district claims office manager. It was important to identify needs and subsequently get workers to the farms requiring help.

Higher wages might also stimulate the project's success, he indicated.

"A lot of people will work on farms if the pay is commensurate with other work they can do," he said.

Newsletter Is 'Forward Step'

By MARGARET HAYLOCK

PICTON — Prince Edward County board of education has taken a forward step with preparation of a newsletter informing the public of the destination of the taxpayer's education dollar.

The six page leaflet, slated for distribution this month, is titled What Is Being Done with Our Children, With Our Schools and Our Money?

"As parents and taxpayers you are entitled to a complete answer to that question," asserts the newsletter's opening line.

The publication does more than promise to "tell all". It clearly and concisely does explain education costs in the county and details the present operation of the school system.

"The board is most anxious that you, the residents of Prince Edward County, are fully informed concerning your educational system," the board is elected to direct the public education system within Prince Edward County in accordance with your desires for the education of your children, the control and upkeep of your buildings and the expenditure of your money."

"It is assumed if the board is going to serve your needs and the needs of your children that you let the board know these needs," states the letter.

The newsletter represents a sincere effort by trustees to communicate pertinent, firsthand information to taxpayers concerning educational costs and goals in the county.

Key educational personnel such as John McNeil, director of education, and Lorraine Shortt, business administrator for the board, include messages to the public explaining their aims.

The publication lists the names of all trustees and states the committees on which they serve, emphasizing lines of communication for interested parents.

The board of education has explained that because of the cost involved, regular newsletters cannot be published. This is the first to be released by trustees in more than five years.

Board members stress, however, that efforts are made to provide the news media with all pertinent information in addition to routine stories that may be printed or broadcast as a reader-listener service.

The newsletter does an excellent job of grouping all important information "under one roof" and should provide the public with facts that can be filed for future reference.

The board deserves congratulations for its fine effort and, hopefully, future newsletters will prove well worth the extra cost. Once is not enough.

CAS Role Explained

CANNIFTON — Brenda Kerr, executive director of the Hastings County child care's aid society, attended Wednesday's Thurlow council meeting here to explain services the Belleville-based association provides area municipalities.

Mr. Kerr urged councillors to use the society's services should any need arise.

Through county levies, Thurlow township is one of the largest contributors to the society. Funding is split between Trenton, Belleville and the county, with the latter paying the major portion of the bill.

Tennis Boom

Speaking of sport and fitness, we hear that the city's inland courts have been in use as late as two in the morning.

Now that's what we call keen — and it is one sure way of finding courts free, for who but the most enthusiastic (or insomniac) would want to be out at that hour.

One way to avoid the heat of the day as well.

There is another explanation, though, and it comes from the Parks Department. The court lights remain on now from 8 p.m. until 8 a.m. the next day — a concession to the courts' increased popularity, as well as catering to people on shift work.

Meanwhile it is interesting to dwell on the phenomenal rise in popularity of the game of late. One reason for its emergence from a somewhat rarefied sphere of interest to become one of the great popular games of the day is television. Viewed by millions as the game of power and finesse that it is, and given added impetus by old pros such as Bobby Riggs (who likes to challenge the ladies) tennis is big time.

And with the advent of World Team Tennis, the game now attracts boisterous and partisan hockey-style crowds. An example in recent days was a match between teams representing Los Angeles and Houston.

The irony of this is that a high proportion of the players representing the U.S. cities are from Australia (rather in the manner of Canadian hockey players in the U.S.) and they include such top exponents as John Newcombe and Evonne Goolagong. Australia of course is where many tennis greats were born and they now display their talents to the cheers (and boos) of U.S. fans.

Times certainly are changing on the tennis court.

Those Gremlins

The gremlins which can be the bane of any publisher's life have struck again — this time at Prince Edward Board of Education's first-ever meeting.

Publication is being delayed pending correction of biographical information attributed to Hillier trustee Dave McPaul. It seems he was identified wrongly with Ameliasburg.

These things happen. There was the map for instance put out by Belleville Chamber of Commerce which identified a number of locations incorrectly.

It all goes to show that human beings are fallible, error-prone, no matter in what sphere. Sometimes it can be a matter of life or death, and that is why there is an investigation in the United States just now into the flight operations of one of the country's major airlines — the result of four major crashes in the last two years or so.

An error-free operation is the ideal in any sphere, but it is something that even the computers (which depend initially on secret-to-human programming) have not yet achieved.

And Spelling

Teaching the young people the "Three Rs" is something all are agreed needs more attention these days, though the emphasis on the spelling errors that we see occurring among adults — and not just in the routine process of writing, but where familiar names are concerned. Names that are in the public eye every day. Names such as Jeffrey (referring to Mayor Robin Jeffrey), Kissinger, even an uncomplicated name such as Stanfield. Yes they all have appeared in letters to the editor spelled incorrectly and have been corrected before publication. Is it the gremlins again — or is it simply inattention to detail? A bit of both perhaps, but with all the furfare about our better-educated society it makes one wonder.

Early Training

Congratulations to the young people who took part in the Fire Prevention poster contests, and especially to six Hazelfield (Harry J. Clarke school) and Susan Empson (Prince Charles school) who won provincial honors. This is a subject with which young people need to be made familiar early in life and the schools are helping to do just that.

Party Faithful Lap It Up

Trudeau Speech Writers Spice Corn With One-Liners

By RICHARD JACKSON
Ottawa Bureau Chief

OTTAWA — Been listening, really listening, recently to Prime Minister Trudeau?

Must have got himself some hot new speechwriters.

Nobody seems to have told them that Trudeau is a philosopher who prefers to be serious rather than politic from the campaign platform.

So they are feeding him some pretty sharp stuff — good, punchy one-liners — a nice, spicy mixture of smarties and sarcasm.

Word is that Jim Coutts, once an aide to former Prime Minister Pearson and now a lawyer in Edmonton, gets the credit for hiking up the Trudeau speechwriting with great, old pain-taking politics.

And Courtney Tower, formerly of TIME magazine and more recently of the Prime Minister's office, is being given credit for putting it all in easy-to-read journalese.

But wherever it is — Coutts, Tower and Company — it is not Professor Trudeau who, for these last six years, has been delivering theses rather than speeches, or platitudes from the campaign or press conference platform.

Like the night he blew into the Toronto riding of Etobicoke to put some weight into the renomination of Alastair Gillespie, his minister of Industry Trade and Commerce.

He was sending the familiar note of leadership being the issue, and leadership, he allowed, was "a cabinet including Michael Starr, John Turner, Don Macdonald and Alastair Gillespie."

Wrap-scheme were such bright cabinet lights as Jean-Pierre Goyer, who he boasted, that Romanian oil at 99 cents the gallon, or Warren Allmand who has been so busy finding the convicts on holidays out of Millbrook and other federal prisons, or Herb Gray, the fearless Consumer Affairs Minister, who gave us Beryl Plumptre at $40,000 to tell us to eat cake if we couldn't afford bread?

Not a mention of them.

And then, the Prime Minister revealed that he knew "what leadership is not" and have he got off some of those smarties.

Leadership is not, he chuckled, a Conservative cabinet made of Peter Reilly (the MP who booed John Diefenbaker in the Commons and dictated himself as the other oddball) ways), Steve Roman (boss of Dominion Textile and Chairman Corporation), Jack Horner (the Tory individualist from Alberta), or Luther Zink (the right-wing columnist of the Toronto SUN), all of whom have run or are running for the Conservatives.

But not to despair of the Tories, purred the Prime Minister, for they were "rushing in reinforcements by air from faraway places."

Not since the expansion of the National Gallery of Canada, he laughed, had there been so many new faces.

"Jon Callaghan (late of CBC TV news), Duff Roblin (former Tory Manitoba premier and ex-CP Investments senior executive), Ron Ritchie (ex-chief from Imperial Oil).

"You know what they're going to call it from now on?" he twinkled. "They're going to call it the Big Blue Flying Machine.

"The Tories are operating the largest airlift since World War II."

"If Bob Stanfield is going to lower it on Tory parachutes it is going to replace hockey as the national sport."

And this is Professor Trudeau talking?

Not from a carefully prepared text, written by the resident jokers who with their lines have lifted him out of the university lecture hall and planted him down on the stump stage where laughs are always worth more than votes.

So Bob Stanfield's got a head with him on his jet, the Big Blue Flying Machine.

"They had a head on the Titanic, too," cracks the Prime Minister.

Corny?

Well, yeah.

But at least it is keeping the Liberal faithful telling themselves happily that this time the Big Man is in there above the politics instead of subsidizing.

And that is something.

Saudi Arabia Nationalizes Big Oil Company

By JOHN D. HARRRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

On the verge of the Nixon visit to Saudi Arabia, that country's government has completed an inevitable event, 40 per cent majority ownership by the Saudi government of Aramco, the world's largest oil producing company.

Aramco, the acronym for the Arabian American Oil Co., was founded in 1933 as a wholly-owned Arabian subsidiary of Standard Oil Co. of California.

Over the years, Aramco's ownership was diversified but always into other U.S.-owned oil giants. In 1950, 50 per cent of it went to Texaco and in 1948 the pie has been divided twice again to include a 25-per-cent Saudi Arabian government minority participation. The agreement would give the Saudi ownership gradually to 51 per cent by 1983.

Other U.S. oil giants who finally came in were Mobil with a 7.5-per-cent interest up to this week and with Texaco, Exxon and Socal each holding 22.5 per cent.

Aramco's staggeringly big daily flow through from its desert pipelines into nearby super-tankers exceeded that of the U.S. output of domestic petroleum. In other terms, Aramco production is 20 per cent of Soviet U.S. markets in a year than the United States herself produced.

The Saudi Arabian director on the old Aramco board, before the Saudi Arabian take by government, was none other than Crown Prince Feisal, a sharp businessman in his own right who is a Yale graduate with an American master of business administration degree also under his belt, (in a manner of speaking).

Saudi Arabia's move completes a round of major intrusions of the oil-producing countries of this world into ownership of their own.

Kuwait has already announced its 60-per-cent takeover by the Kuwaiki government of its foreign-owned oil properties. Nigeria, a 55-per-cent nationalization of her big oil industry and Libya's control of all concessions in her territories.

Venezuela's inevitable move to total control of an oil industry which like the Canadian is largely entirely foreign-owned, will take place long before the planned date of 1983.

However the Venezuelan formula will be "gradualization" with some planned future role for the foreign operators in a nationally owned or controlled industry.

The Venezuelan plan takes into consideration the facts that their big foreign oil giants have most of the technical expertise and have been the main developers of the nation's oil and gas reserves.

A future functions anticipated by them might be as technical advisers to the government, operating on a fee-for-service basis instead of the currently not very profitable cost-per-barrel to the companies.

The trend was an inevitable one, stimulated by last winter's world-wide energy crisis and by growing resentment in all the major oil producing countries over what is considered the inequities of the past.

The OPEC (Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries), will meet again soon to discuss even higher oil prices increases. The Saudi Arabians will resist any more of these, it is thought.

The Aramco deal was made in good faith with everyone and the Saudis appear pleased with the willingness of the oil giants to change the ownership basis.

The politics of oil continue therefore to dominate other economic considerations in the world of the 1970s.

Spectre of Depression Looms Over the World

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

It was 46 years ago this month that North American stock markets were riding for their biggest collapse in history.

At the end of the summer came the Great Crash on Wall Street, to be followed within the year by the Great Depression.

Over and over since then, the public has asked whether it could happen again.

One of the best selling books of 1974 is Can Capitalism Survive? Monetary Crisis, by Harry Browne of Vancouver—confounds that it can and will happen again.

The enormous sales of his book suggest that thousands of people believe that Mr. Browne is right.)

The book advises its readers to buy gold (it could go to $500 an ounce) silver (the record $168.80, the author says), silver ($30 an ounce from $2), Swiss francs ($1.50 from about 23 cents), "trading items" such as medicines, canned foods, textiles, tools, tobacco, liquor.

Also a hide-away to be safe from looters, and automatic rifles in case the looters do discover the hide-away.

Browne's idea is that those who follow his advice would survive the crash, such as a crash as the panicking people survive the crash of his airplane.

One investment authority believes not only that the stock market could experience another 1929-type crash, but that there are well into just such a crash.

An article in the June 3 issue of Barron's recalls that the Dow Jones industrial average fell 89 per cent between 1929 and 1932, but reasons that the real loss was 85 per cent, because of price deflation over the period.

Since late 1968, Barron's unweighted price index has fallen 54 per cent—the real loss has been 74 per cent when the 432-per-cent inflation for the period (as measured by an average of consumer and wholesale price indexes) is factored in.

The Barron's article then authoritatively reduces the 1929-32 drop to 77 per cent to recognize the "ridiculous" 10-per-cent margin requirements in force. (That is, stock purchasers had to put up only one-tenth of the purchase price, and borrowed the rest from the broker.)

Leaked at that way, 1929-32 was just three percentage points worse than 1968-74.

"All this suggests the end is at hand for either the bear market or for the validity of Barron's article. "We'll wager on the former."

The current crisis involving the franklin National Bank in the United States has eerie similarities to the 1929-32 situation.

Its big losses have been compared to those of the Kreditanstalt which collapsed in 1931, touching off the second and final phase of the worldwide loss of confidence in the financial system.

When some of the newer and more venturesome British banks collapsed during the past year, the established banking fraternity joined together in a rescue operation that preserved public confidence in the system.

Not so in the United States. Far from co-operating with the troubled Franklin National, major American banks have added to its difficulties by squeezing it out of the interbank money market.

The still unanswered question is whether the rest of the American banks are totally insensitive to the serious danger of a loss of public confidence in banking.

Or it is possible that they feel themselves to be on such shaky ground that they must conserve all their resources on their own survival as individual banks?

Egyptian Investment Boom

By JOHN D. HARRRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Egypt, one of the main countries of the Arab world and a key one in the continuing ceasefire in the Middle East, has little oil but is receiving record foreign investment income this year.

As President Anwar Sadat continues to unlimber the various intelligences of the Nasser era, to include the role of his many state corporations, U.S. and European investments are pouring into the country.

Chase Manhattan Bank, also expanding in Eastern Europe and southeast Asia, is heading a syndicate to loan the Egyptians $80 million after opening a Cairo branch in April. First Boston Corp., is putting together a $200-million loan.

There was even signature loans of about $280 million at a low, low interest rate of 3.5 per cent. And the Nixon administration, which has already supplied $250 million and a crack diving team to clear the Suez canal, is asking Congress for an additional $250 million in economic aid.

Present developments include a massive American bean and vegetable growing program on 200,000 acres in the desert south of Alexandria. Fiat wants to build trucks and buses, various European oil companies plan to expand oil explorations and a West German fertilizer plant is planned.

Whatever oil Egypt possessed in any abundance was lost during the 1967 Six Days' War when Israel conquered the Sinai where considerable oil exists, and has held it there.

The reason for the shifts in Egyptian reliance on foreign funds appear to be two-fold. They are Sadat's own rejection of the Russian way of life and Soviet presence in his country and the realization that the Kissinger mission to bring about the first Middle East disengagement between Egypt and Israel.

There are always important personal relationships in these major changes in international affairs and the affection of Sadat and Kissinger for each other appears to have been a major revelation.

As well, the Sadat moves in another ideological direction and the rapprochement with the U.S. has brought to the fore again an important group of senior Egyptian public administrators who have been a part of Egyptian economic life since the revolution of 1952.

President Nasser had several of them operating the Suez canal, the central bank and the most efficient state industries. He has brought to the fore again an important group of senior Egyptian public administration after it became Egyptian in 1956, ran it with great competence and finally was making profits as high as $300 million annually.

Nasser's enemies had scoffed that the Egyptians could not do it as well as the canal's long, time foreign owners. They were all wrong.

This time the top Egyptian bureaucrat is Abdul Aziz Hegazy, deputy prime minister who appears to have President Sadat's ear to direct the new inflows of technology and investment funds.

All this is important to bear in mind on the eve of President Nixon's visit to Cairo to compare the Kissinger ceasefire or two months ago.

The Soviet presence has not entirely disappeared nor will it ever be so.

The great High Dam at Aswan, one of the modern world's technological marvels and essential to Egypt's food supply, is finished now and functioning, a credit to Russian engineering and a tribute to the help of the West in 1956 in withdrawing harshly from the scheme.

Nixon Trip to Middle East

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

America's biggest embarrassment, Richard Millhous Nixon, is out of the country on a trip to the Middle East to "further the cause of peace". One must have to admit that this is the most laudable even if Mr. Nixon's previous activities in his field were advanced by massive clever bombings of helpless people.

However, most people will be pardoned, if, in light of the president's past performance they take his statement with a grain of salt.

The "Wizard of Watergate," with his demonstrated obsessional hobby of tape recording conversations at any meeting he is involved in unless all present are subjected to body frisks and de-bugging procedures.

Undoubtedly this Nixon is bent on capitalizing on the visit of Henry Kissinger in the hope that he may be able to help him in his impeachment procedures at home.

Of course the tragedy of this trip is the credibility of the president. With his own countrymen unable to believe in him how does he hope to convince other representatives from other countries?

Perhaps the greatest service this president can render his country is to step down from office or submit to impeachment.

WILLIAM HOCKLEY

PCs Come Under Attack

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I am fed up with the Conservatives' ridiculous name calling, wage and price controls. That is all they are ridiculous and I don't see how any relatively intelligent human being can take them seriously. The Conservatives realize that it has not worked anywhere in the industrialized western world? It is a fact that wage and price controls are a symptom of a worldwide problem, but are not really willing to accept wage controls.

Secondly, if the Conservatives ever want to win a majority they should get rid of Stanfield. He is the worst leader that any party could have. He is indecisive, weak, and a horrid politician. Recently, in Toronto, he would not debate students on the party's policy. He won't debate with a few students on politics, can you actually see him debating the country? Everyone would be so mixed up that we wouldn't know whether we're coming or going. I think that the Conservatives should drop "Progressive" from their name and add "Reactionary".

Well, I suppose that just every now and then we should elect a Tory government for a very short while. That way they can clean up the government as they have consistently done in the past, and we can have an election to re-elect the Liberals. Therefore, we will be assured of a long life of a stable Liberal government that has given us so much progressive legislation in the past.

The season has come full cycle and it's growing time again.

But this is a significant summer. It seems, at long last, the farmer has finally gained the full recognition due by society. BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, SATURDAY, JUNE 15, 1974

Area Jersey Cattlemen Attend Invitational Sale

Two Belleville area Jersey cattlemen, Lorne Jarrell, RR4, Belleville, and Ron Hamilton, RR3, Trenton, offered cattle at this year's Ontario Invitational Sale held at Guelph on June 3.

Thirty-two Jerseys were offered at the sale with an average price of $800 being realized.

The highest price paid was $3,000 for Milady Supreme Sleeping Xenia, consigned by Hatchet Jerseys of Rochester, Massachusetts and purchased by David Merriel and Son of Warkworth. The three-year-old came in a 305 test produced 9,946 pounds of milk, 474 pounds of butterfat and is currently milking over 59 pounds per day.

The $3,000 price paid was $500 over the previous record of $2500 set in 1968.

Second highest price at this year's sale was $1,525 paid by Wm. J. Schrame of Lake Field for a two year old white Stanley Kerr and Sons of Campbellford paid $1,300 for a four-year-old.

The Youth Production first prize of $200 and the Cecil Morrison Memorial Trophy went to William Matheson of Lennoxville, Quebec, for his record on Avonlea Adfance Brenda of 9,406 pounds milk and 418 pounds 4.97 percent fat at two years and 30 days.

Second prize went to Kenn Kerr of Campbellford and fourth prize to John Nixon of Norval.

The Belleville area heifer offered by Mr. Jarrell, a sister of his class leader, sold for $535, while the two-year-old cow sold by Mr. Hamilton brought $700.

Farmland Going Out of Production

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Much of Prince Edward Island's good farming land is being bought by cottage seekers and put out of production, Donald Mason, planning consultant for the Maritime provinces, said Monday.

"This, coupled with the local attitude of get off the land is the cause of the small family farm, is weakening the island's agricultural base," Mr. Mason told planners at Queen's University.

Farm Safety Information Available

TORONTO (CP) — The province is working through a number of agencies to spread information on farm safety, Agriculture Minister William Stewart said Monday.

Mr. Stewart said the Workmen's Compensation Board, the Farm Safety Association, the Farm Machinery Advisory Board and the Ministry's branch offices all are working to help promote safety practices and education.

Raymond Haggerty (L—Welland South) raised the subject of safety during consideration of the ministry's spending estimates, commenting on the deaths during the weekend of three persons apparently killed by gas fumes inside a wheat storage tank on a pig farm.

Senior citizens and fishermen, once forced to farm in order to survive now are finding old-age pensions and unemployment insurance benefits providing alternatives, and this leads to a further decline in farming, Mr. Mason said.

Workers from Charlottetown are buying homes in the surrounding countryside, he said.

"The long-range view was one of continued choking-off of the land and some kind of land reclamation seems necessary."

As a result, he said, a royal commission into land ownership and land use was set up by the provincial government.

A similar problem exists in the Niagara Peninsula, the meeting was told.

Allan Veale, director of planning for the regional municipality of Niagara, said speculators are buying good fruit land to turn into residential areas.

In the southern section of the municipality, large tracts of land are available for suburban growth because they have already set unsuitable for fruit growing, Mr. Veale said. But he said they want the areas of greatest expansion.

The regional council had its chief fire officer complain and it issued a policy statement that said good fruit and grape land should be preserved.

This, Mr. Veale said, should result in the continuation of a viable agriculture industry.

Minister Forecasts Land Lack

TORONTO (CP) — William Stewart, Ontario agriculture minister, said today that unless there is a "drastic change" to preserve more prime agricultural land, Canada will be forced to import more than 60 per cent of its food by 2000.

Mr. Stewart was addressing a conference of the Community Planning Association of Canada. He said that long-term, landuse planning is necessary to preserve more farm land. The loss of prime agricultural land for other purposes must be curtailed, he said.

He said there has been a flow of urban people to rural areas near Guelph and the land they own must not be left idle, but be put to "effective and proper use" if it is prime farm land.

Land-use control must be implemented along the Canada-United States border where the richest farm land is located, he said, or people may "starve to death 100 years from now" because of insufficient food production.

Garnet Budd: Rabbits give rabbit-raising new prestige

Rabbit Business Booms

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

ELDORADO — Garnet Budd's rabbitry business is growing again.

"They're beginning to call me the rabbit king now. Someday this will be the biggest commercial venture of its kind in Canada," he says.

He's a forthright man and if his prediction rings with a bit of pride, it's justified. Virtually singlehanded, he's raised one of the country's biggest rabbit ranches from the sparse grassroots of the local Canadian Shield countryside.

And—he's blind.

This is the sixth year of operation since he and his wife Joyce quit the big city and sank their savings in what was then a new business enterprise.

Now he's built more facilities and is preparing to almost double production of the rabbits he breeds and ships live to packers in Montreal and Toronto.

The growth marks success in a business in which, says Mr. Budd, there are many failures, mostly because it looks easier than it is.

It also demonstrates his optimism for the future of Budd's Rabbit Ranch.

World meat shortages have raised new prospects for the industry which he's mastered.

"The thing is," says Mr. Budd, moving effortlessly around the building he helped build himself, with the advantages and prices of beef and other meats we know that rabbit is going to be a staple meat in the next 10 years."

With his wife helping with veterinary needs and keeping accurate records of breeding strains, he built the ranch to a capacity of 3,000 rabbits.

A new building he mostly constructed himself will increase capacity to about 5,000 rabbits. The ranch presently ships out anywhere from 8,000 to 9,000 live rabbits a year to packers.

Loss of his sight long ago stopped being a handicap.

"I feel I've got at least 95 per cent of my total capacity," says Mr. Budd. "You see, you lose your sight — but you gain back your concentration and compensate by using your other senses more."

His business proves his point, he indicates. It's established, widely-known and making money. He's optimistic about the future.

"It's like anything else in producing food these days," he says. You have got to put everything you can get your hands on into it—and you've got to work hard at it."

Rotate All Foods

OTTAWA (CP) — Even foods which are refrigerated or kept in the freezer should be rotated, says the department of health, as bacteria continue to grow at any temperature. Cold temperatures only help slow down the growth. Certain foods, including gravy, stuffings, cooked meat and other organ meats, fish and poultry, should be eaten within two days.

Prime Farmland Said Going Fast

TORONTO (CP) — Peter Hannen, chairman of the resource development committee of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, said Monday that every hour, 26 acres of prime farmland in Canada go to other uses and if this trend continues there will be no farmland in good growing climates in Canada in 40 years.

Mr. Hannen was speaking in favor of increasing food crops to preserve more agricultural land, in a debate at a conference of the Community Planning Association of Canada.

Murray Gaunt, Liberal member of the Ontario legislature for Huron-Bruce, opposed the idea. He said that higher food prices to preserve more agricultural land would be "totally unacceptable" and the way to preserve land is through landuse planning controls.

Mr. Hannen said an increase in food prices of 25 per cent per level would provide larger incomes to farmers in Canada and create the incentive for farmers to stay on the land.

He said that because of the low income farmers receive, they are unable to hire "good wages."

Mr. Gaunt said that the silence of the consumer lobby would mean more farmers leaving the land and that would be bad. "I guess, Canada might become dependent on other countries for food."

Mr. Gaunt said that if the farmer can sell his land for $5,000 an acre, it is more profitable for him to sell than to farm.

He said that a consumer in the $15,000-a-year bracket spends 13 per cent of his wages on food while a person in the $3,000-a-year bracket spends 40 per cent on food. With an increase in the cost of food, he said, "there will be food for the rich and crumbs for the poor."

Mr. Gaunt said that through land-use planning, prime land could be preserved for farming instead of being sold to speculators for other uses.

He said 2,000 families leave the farm each year in Ontario—in some cases because it is more profitable to sell.

Apple Crop Threatened By 'Tents'

HALIFAX (CP) — An entomologist with the Nova Scotia department of agriculture warns there will be large numbers of tent caterpillars in the Annapolis Valley this summer.

R. L. Hennigar said: "Observations show that parasites and disease organisms caused a significant decline in population last year. But they were not sufficient to prevent a further increase in spring."

The caterpillars hatch in May and commonly feed on deciduous foliage. In apple orchards they are usually controlled by spraying, but they frequently develop unchecked in some woodlands, particularly in poplar trees.

The Annapolis Valley in western Nova Scotia is the province's best farming area and the valley is known for its apples and other fruit.

When food becomes scarce, the caterpillars move out of the woods in search of a further food source. In their migration they feed on any crops such as tomatoes and strawberries.

Farmers equipped with sprayers can control the insects by use of insecticides while home owners without equipment may find it easy to band together with their neighbors to hire a sprayer.

If the insects are left unchecked, they will develop parasites and disease which will get the upper hand and the pests will return to a low level for a number of years.

Loyalist Child Care Specialists Find East German Day Care Impressive

By SHARON AIRHART

Three Loyalist College teachers have returned from a three-week study trip to the German Democratic Republic excited by that country's day care facilities.

Amelia Storms, who teaches Counselling of the Mentally Retarded, Erla Komar who teaches Early Childhood Education and Betty Exelby, head of Loyalist's Early Childhood Education department, visited East Germany as guests of the country's Teachers Trade Union.

What they saw impressed them.

"We found communities the size of Trenton with 20 or 30 day care centres," Mrs. Storms says.

"There, when you go to work, you take your child; when you go to school, you take your child. Virtually every industry and profession had a day care centre attached to it.

"By comparison, we're only beginning day care in this country," Betty Exelby adds.

For that very reason, the women initiated the trip, paying their own travel expenses to East Germany.

"The idea ultimately was to look at everything available in the way of day care and to come back and make choices to incorporate the best of those things in day care for this community," Mrs. Exelby says.

In East Germany, the women learned there are day care facilities for babies — known as creches — which accommodate children from six weeks to three years of age. Pre-school day care centres look after older children and school-age children stay in day care centres before and after school.

There are live-in day care centres for children with special needs and day care centres which accommodate the children of shift workers or persons who have to work weekends.

Although the centres accommodate infants as young as six weeks, most women take an eight-week leave of absence before the birth of a child and a three-month leave of absence after, all at their regular salary.

"What interested us was the interplay between the community and the schools and day care centres," Betty Exelby says.

"All the day care centres were in operative ventures between the state and the municipality or the industry or the professional association and it seemed that industries had just as much interest in the education of the children as the parents did."

Much of the success of the day care centre program, they believe, can be attributed to the fact "we found women all over in key positions".

"They told us 'Mothers know, mothers care'," Amelia Storms says.

Besides the sheer numbers of day care facilities, the Loyalist women were impressed with the quality of care in the centres they were shown.

"The centres are new were of the same quality as our day care centres," Betty Exelby says, describing new or remodelled buildings with bright paintings and toys.

MORE

Betty Exelby and Erla Komar were particularly impressed with the country's emphasis on nutrition.

"It seemed to be everyone's concern," Erla Komar says.

"In the day care centres, the schools, the industries, everyone received their hot main meal of the day at noon — then when Mom got home from work, she need only prepare a light lunch," says Betty Exelby.

The meals and the day care cost about $1.30 per day per child. The women believe salaries to be comparable to Canadian salaries.

Amelia Storms points out that in the case of illness, there are sick rooms in day care centres for minor complaints and that either parent can choose to stay home with a child and still be paid.

"It seems that whatever the family situation or whatever the problem, there is a solution available," Erla Komar says, speaking of family life."

Betty Exelby adds, "It removes the harassment working parents feel here. It allows parents to go home and be with their children relaxed and without guilt."

Parents felt relaxed and satisfied with the rest part, the women believe, because of the quality of care.

"There seemed to be staff everywhere," Amelia Storms says.

"There were training schools in every district, graduating teachers," Erla Komar says, pointing out that the child care workers hope to reduce the teacher-child ratio — currently about one to 20.

"It was ironic," Mrs. Storms says, that the day we returned from our trip we were greeted by news stories that the Ontario government has raised ratios in the province from one to 11 to one to 14."

"All without consulting the people involved — parents and child care workers," Mrs. Exelby says.

If the women have complaints about lack of day care and increasing ratios in Ontario, they also found things they didn't like in the East German system.

To start, the three were bothered by the fact there didn't seem to be any choice about wanting to be involved with children. And all were bothered by regimentation in the day care centres.

"We tend to want our kids to be individual and independent but these seemed in East Germany to be more emphasis on group activities and doing things in a conforming way," Betty Exelby says.

Apart from this aspect of East German life, the women found much to emulate in the day care system.

"The day care centres play a very important part in the economics of the country because of them Mom and Dad can go to work without worry or care," Mrs. Exelby says.

"I guess you could sum it up by saying, that East Germany they believe the future is in the children and for these children, you do the best of everything," Amelia Storms concluded.

Betty Exelby, left, who heads Early Childhood Education at Loyalist College with Amelia Storms and Erla Komar talk about East German day care centres with Mrs. Exelby's daughter Kim. Puppets, bright toys and paintings are all part of the modern and extensive children's day care system which functions in the country. The women visited the German Democratic Republic to study day care.

Soothe Baby With Safety

New safety standards for baby pacifiers and similar products have been announced by the minister of consumer and corporate affairs, Herb Gray.

"There have been a number of incidents of harm to children with which pacifiers were involved," Mr. Gray said.

Effective immediately at all levels of trade, the regulations prohibit the advertisement, sale and importation of pacifiers which do not conform to new standards.

In part, the standards require a shield with one dimension at least 1¾ inches to prevent swallowing. Rings and handles of pacifiers must be firmly attached and must be flexible or hinged to prevent injury if the child inadvertently rolls face down while sucking.

Above all, Mr. Gray stressed that parents must do their part. Chains, long cords or the like should not be used to hang pacifiers about children's necks and parents should periodically examine pacifiers to ensure they have not deteriorated through normal use to a point where they might be a source of injury.

Some radios and home entertainment equipment imported into Canada by the Consumer Corporation may be potentially dangerous, the department of consumer and corporate affairs warns.

A radio-tape player, model ST 752 and a radio-record changer, model TA311 were recently recalled by the Markham, Ont., firm because of possible shock and fire hazard.

Marketed through Peoples Credit Jewellers Towers and Woolco, the equipment has been marketed under various names including Xonex, Sonex, Actron, Ultima and Supertech.

Not all the products involved have been established as dangerous but a general recall of all radios, console music centres and other equipment sold by the firm was necessary since it is impossible to identify noncomplying products at the retail level.

The department urges consumers to return with the equipment to the place of purchase.

Experiment Will Test Pre-marriage Counselling

TORONTO (CP) — It's better to consider marriage breakdown before it happens than when it's too late, says Ed Bader.

And he's about to test that thesis scientifically, with the help of a $98,885 grant from the Physicians' Services Incorporated (PSI) foundation.

PSI has provided the funding to find out whether, as Mr. Bader believes, couples given premarital education fare better in marriage than those who have no advance preparation.

"I've always felt pre-marital counselling helped keep marriages together," says Mr. Bader. "There has never been any evidence to prove it because no studies have been done in this area.

The research project, which will last for at least two years, involves co-operation between medical doctors, a social agency and a variety of churches.

Representatives from a wide variety of fields—family physicians, social workers, clergymen and psychologists—agree that overly romanticized expectations of married life and a lack of practical preparation are causing serious strains during the early years of many marriages today," says Mr. Bader. "There has never been any

Successful Living

Shape Up Your Mind

By DORIS CLARK

Last week we did some thinking about the morals boost given any one of us by sprucing up. We told about the lady of the house who got admiring looks from children and husband when she developed the habit of doing a re-make just before the family all returned from wherever they had spent their day. We said this applied to dress, face, hair, hands, nails — you name it.

You can't do these physical things without giving some thought to the rest of the picture — the mental and spiritual side.

How about giving a lift to dinner table conversation? Just at the time when many families have their one opportunity to share like a group and feel like a family. It is not easy, sometimes, to get a young people and youngsters going in friendly conversation at table. It calls for thought.

Otherwise, when there is a silence at dinner, he is going to notice how talk-less-or how self-talk-centred — the family is.

Here's where the spiritual strength comes in. Maybe mother did have a hard day, but it could be part of the program for her to help her young people develop good manners and conversation. Something more than pass-me-the-salt, or can-I-have-another-helping, talk.

One mother — and I'm sure there are many others — made a real campaign of getting each individual person in the family going on the conversational gambit. She started with selecting one individual a night. She gave this individual the responsibility for either describing a historical event learned about at school or dealing with a current item of news. Even the seven-year-old was not let off the hook — although his contribution was permitted to be limited to somewhat different.

Then the others at the table were challenged to ask the conversation-starter questions which would carry the subject further; and they did. All of them learned some interesting facts about Aristotle and Ceasar and Queen Elizabeth and how we got where we are— in Canada today.

They did not shy away from spiritual talk. Young people don't. If you give them half a chance. And with the far-out ideas which are being explored these days, all need a forum where we can try out our ideas.

Glimpses of Margaret's Private Life

By JIM POLING
The Canadian Press

MARGARET TRUDEAU

Margaret Trudeau is back on the campaign trail with the prime minister, but the voters will not be seeing much of the couple's two young children.

She said in Terrace, B.C., Thursday she has decided that Justin, 3½, and Sacha, six months, will not be travelling during the 3½ weeks that remain in the July 8 election campaign.

Mrs. Trudeau, who generally remained out of public view until earlier this year, has been campaigning on her own recently in British Columbia, her native province. She rejoined the prime minister Wednesday in Edmonton for a western tour which ends late tonight.

Mrs. Trudeau sometimes gives personal glimpses of herself and the prime minister during chats with those in the crowds.

"Lucky guy, riding a bike on a day like today," she said cryptically to a boy in a Penticton park where crowds had gathered in warm sunshine to see and hear Mr. Trudeau and his wife.

In Terrace, she met some people who live in a nearby commune. She said it is good for people to live their own lives and added:

"We're not going to do this forever," referring to politics. "We hope to have our own lives, too."

Walking through the same crowds she mentioned she and her husband had noticed the beautiful Skeena River the night before and had talked about how they would like to take a canoe trip down it.

A Penticton youth, Gerry Diel, 14, stepped in front of her Thursday, offered his hand and said, "Hi, cutie."

"My, you're cheeky," she laughed.

A few minutes later, she stopped to talk with two women holding babies. It wasn't long before she was rocking one of the children on her shoulder and talking about Sascha.

She can be political at times. Thursday morning, in Terrace, she gave a brief speech in support of the local Liberal candidate, a woman.

In Penticton, an elderly woman complained to her that B.C.'s NDP government of Dave Barrett had cut her pension by $20 a month.

"Girl of Barrett then," she replied.

When time permits, she gives autographs. After signing her name, she always writes in capital letters: "Work hard!."

She told a young girl in Kamloops she includes that message because she believes everyone should work hard for a goal.

Women at Work

VANDERHOOF, B.C. (CP) — Wages and working conditions are prime attractions for women employed at a sawmill near this northern British Columbia community.

The Engen division of the government-owned Plateau Mills, 12 miles west of Vanderhoof, employs seven women on its two shifts, some operating machinery, some using zoomie power.

Dressed wood emerges from the noisy mill in sizes ranging from two-by-four inches to two-by-10-inch boards, 16-feet long, and when the flow increases, workers stacking the lumber by hand hustle to keep up with the pace.

They dress in heavy clothing to defy the cold; work boots, coveralls, woollen shirts, topped by hard hats, while carrying on hard, demanding physical work.

Among the workers, in spite of the sharpless clothing, one can spot a few with more delicate features. Women, their faces flushed, are cheerfully hurling around heavy lengths of lumber.

They have little time to talk, for the sawmill conveyor is unrelenting in its supply of lumber which must be stacked promptly.

"You caught us at a busy time," said Joanne Thornton, 25. "We do not normally have to work as hard as this."

Asked if she liked this sort of work, she said:

"Sure. I do it because the pay is good—$4.61 an hour. I used to work as a teacher's aide and cook for disturbed children in Montreal. That was really hard work."

Lee Triggs, 41, who also stacks lumber, agreed that the pay is a prime attraction. Her husband is employed as a welder at a nearby mine and they have three adopted children ranging in age from 8 to 14.

Mill superintendent Ike Fehr said the mill began employing women more than a year ago and that they had worked out well although some women objected to outside work during the winter. "They don't always like to come."

Mr. Fehr said employing women to work side-by-side created a problem. He said male employees "like to work with the ladies well enough as long as they are not too ladylike."

Giggles Are Her Defence

Dear Ann Landers: If you think I'm crazy, please tell me. I am 18 years old and have been dating for nearly two years, so I'm not a shy beginner with boys.

My problem is that whenever I'm with this guy that I really care for, and he begins to turn me on, I start to laugh. This giggling at the most inopportune time started about six months ago, and now it's on the verge of ruining our relationship. Every time he takes me in his arms or kisses me, I bust out laughing. It has nothing to do with anything being funny and I don't know why I do it. What's wrong with me and what can I do to help myself?—No Laughing Matter

Dear No: Laughter can be an automatic response to embarrassment. It can also be a release for repressed or pent-up emotions.

In your case, it's probably a combination of guilt (for getting turned on) and an unconscious mechanism that protects you from going further. A girl who laughs when a guy turns her on is sure to turn him off.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband has been a heavy smoker for years. Three months ago he lost his fifth close relative to cancer and decided he had to quit smoking. So he took up a substitute that is making me sick. He has started to chew tobacco, and it is more than I can stand.

The corners of his mouth and his teeth are always terrible looking from the brown stuff. He smells just terrible.

I get nauseated when I have to clean the sinks because he spits all over the house—in the kitchen, the bathroom, it makes no difference. Please tell me how to cope with this problem. It's driving me crazy.—Rope's End

Dear End: I can recall few questions that I couldn't answer myself or didn't know someone to call for help. This one has me stumped. Does anyone out there have a solution to this woman's problem? If so, please let me know so I can help her.

Churchgoers Like Banquet Guests Forbidden to Partake of Feast

By DR. GORDON C. SMYTH

The London Economist recently commented that "the religious appetite of the age is for direct experience of God". Obviously many earnest men and women are not finding their hunger satisfied.

Perhaps they have been looking for God in the wrong direction; they have tried to find him where he cannot be found.

A few years ago Dr. Neil F. S. Ferre was speaking on the subject. We (think of God as everywhere, he said, and we claim that he is equally alive in all the world. But that is not strictly true; for if it were, our human freedom would just be an illusion.

In the impersonal sense that his power undergirds all things, God is truly present. But in the PERSONAL sense of his conscious being he resides out to touch our own. God deliberately absents himself in order that we can have freedom even from him.

The flaw in the popular statement that you can worship God anywhere is that the most important parts of God's nature are not to be found everywhere. Have you seen his truth during a pure fight? Have you felt the tug of his love as you landed that big fish?

In one of my early manses the heating was of steam. In the basement we had conventional furnace and from it the pipes ran up to the various rooms of the house, in each of which there was a radiator.

We had thought that each room would be equally warm. But whenever we shut the door of a room, isolating it from the rest of the house, that room got cold. The radiator was still there, the heat still on, but none to any difference. The temperature fell.

It should not surprise us that the New Testament urges Christians to come together for worship. And yet the reason for deserting unsatisfied is often our own fault.

"Some people in church", wrote Dr. W. R. Maltbie, "look like guests at royal banquet who couldn't afford to be left out, have been forbidden by their doctor to eat anything".

So many do not really pray in our services, do not listen to the Bible with any actual conviction that God is trying to speak to us, do not sing the Gloria Patri with any significant awareness of God's majesty or the Doxology with any more attention than a casual "thank you" to somebody passing us the butter at the dinner table.

More's the pity. If the world is to be saved, it is to be through worship. At any rate, that is what William Temple, archbishop of Canterbury, concluded. He was no mere pietist. He was an activist. He was a great statesman, patriot and social reformer. But he knew the difference between the circumference and the center of a circle.

Dr. Temple bequeathed to us a definition that we might well make our own. "For to worship is to find with the conscience by the holiness of God, to feed the mind with the truth of God, to purge the imagination by the beauty of God, to open the heart to the love of God, to devote the will to the service of God."

All this is gathered up in that emotion which most cleanses us from selfishness. I mean humble, selfless adoration. In the process over the year, one grows in glad awareness of the ever-present Presence of God.

Presbyterian Paper Denies Calvin Humorless, Dogmatic

By R. J. ANDERSON

The Canadian Press

Presbyterians have their distinctive characteristics from the teachings of John Calvin (1509-1564).

He was the Swiss Protestant reformer, historians portrayed ecrupulously, the Presbyterian Record says, as the humorless, dogmatic tyrant of Geneva who, when not heading a lowbrow section of predestination, busied himself depriving his flock of all the pleasures of life.

Histories have not been kind to Calvin, says the Record, official publication of the Canadian church.

Starting in Switzerland, the Calvinistic movement moved to France, Germany, the Netherlands and other European countries and acquired the name "Reformed." In the British Isles, the movement and its churches were called "Presbyterian." It took firm root in Scotland.

The opening sentence of The Book of Forms, the official rules of procedure for the Presbyterian Church in Canada which this year observes its centennial, states that the church is in "historic continuity with the Church of Scotland as reformed in 1560."

But it is pointed out in A Short History of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, published by the church in 1967, that the Canadian church, while greatly influenced by Scottish Presbyterian churches in doctrine and form of worship, is not subservient to the Church of Scotland.

That there is a Canadian church to celebrate a centennial is viewed with thankfulness by Presbyterians looking back a half-century to the "civil war" of 1925 when the issue of church union rent the church. It was then the third largest Protestant denomination in Canada with about 180,000 communicant members in 1,071 congregations.

The Presbyterian Church in Canada had its beginnings June 15, 1875, when the first general assembly was constituted in Montreal. The church was formed of a union of four different branches of Presbyterianism: The Presbyterian Church of Canada in connection with the Church of Scotland; the Canada Presbyterian Church; the Presbyterian Church of the Lower provinces and the Presbyterian Church of the Maritime provinces in connection with the Church of Scotland.

A total of 534 ministers, 1,119 congregations and 90,653 communicants entered the union of 1875.

In telling the story of Presbyterianism in Canada, the Short History goes back to the beginnings in 1600 and says:

"The preponderance of the Scots and Irish in the Presbyterian Church has at times obscured the solid contribution of other racial groups of the Reformed persuasion. Indeed, the first permanent church of the Reformed outlook and practice on Canadian soil were the Huguenots, the French Calvinists'."

The real thrust of Presbyterianism came after the founding of Halifax in 1749 when Scottish and Irish settlers poured into the colony of Nova Scotia. In time, other branches were established in Upper and Lower Canada.

By 1870, as a result of regional unions, the number of Presbyterian groups in Canada had been reduced to four, two in the Maritime provinces and two in Central Canada, and five years later all came together in the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

Says the history:

"As in all church-union negotiations, there were difficulties to be overcome, accommodations to be made, compromises to be accepted. . .

"The union was not absolutely unanimous. Twenty-two ministers and about 25 congregations, most of them connected with the former Church of Scotland synods, declined to enter the union . . . but gradually these nonconcurring congregations were absorbed into the main Presbyterian body."

In the half-century after union, synods grew to eight from four, presbyteries to 70 from 23 and the number of communicant members to about 380,000.

That harmonious period closed with disruption of the church.

Organic union of the Methodist, Congregationalist and Presbyterian churches in Canada was first proposed in 1902 in Winnipeg by Principal William Patrick of Manitoba College, a Presbyterian.

Methodists and most Congregationalists favored union but many Presbyterians balked. A 1912 report to general assembly on a referendum showed that at that time less than half the membership favored union. The proportion changed little in succeeding years.

The Short History deals extensively with the controversy that became increasingly bitter. Not only were congregations divided but the issue had divisions developed within families that took years to heal.

In 1925, when the United Church of Canada was formed, 154,343 of a reported Presbyterian membership of 279,762 refused to join it.

A leading theologian reported to the Church of Scotland later:

"The civil war within the Canadian Presbyterian Church for bitterness, intensity and long continuance has had no parallel since the Scottish disruption in 1845. The melancholy thing is that all this un-Christian strife has been going on in the name of Christian unity; and without doubting their good motives, it is permissible to say that the statesmanship of those who in the second place engendered so lamentable a disruption."

What was left of the Presbyterian Church in Canada found itself in a difficult position. Many congregations were left without ministers and minority groups were left without churches in which to worship.

"The church came through this trying period remarkably well," says the history. "It is certain that the church is in a better position now and in a more hopeful position for advance, than at any time since 1925."

Soviets Sidestep Summit

By SIDNEY WEILAND

VIENNA (Reuter) — Soviet leaders appear to have sidestepped a threatening ideological battle by postponing a world Communist conference in favor of a meeting limited to European Communist parties.

The compromise, finally over attitudes towards China, ends months of backstage discussion involving the ruling parties of the Soviet bloc as well as Communist parties in Western countries.

Communist sources in Eastern Europe say the world conference plan has not been abandoned—only pigeonholed—and may be revived if the projected conference of European parties is successful.

Under present plans, the European conference will be held this fall and will bring together leaders of Communist parties from Eastern and Western Europe for what may be a summit-level gathering. There is no indication where the conference will be staged.

By agreeing to postpone their long-cherished plan for a world conference, the Russians have apparently bowed to political realities.

Only Moscow's closest ideological allies are prepared to side in public judgment on the dissident policies pursued by China. For Moscow, the China problem is a cardinal issue, both in terms of global politics and because of the Soviet Union's pivotal role in world communism.

Elsewhere, many Communist leaders, particularly in Western Europe, prefer to stay officially neutral even if they privately share Soviet fears about developments inside China.

Interest in a world conference, never high outside Russia, dimmed even further when it became clear that Moscow was pushing for a debate on the China problem.

Within the Soviet bloc, the plan was endorsed by Bulgaria. Czechoslovakia; East Germany and Hungary. Poland's public position was ambiguous, while Rumania's President Nicolae Ceausescu opposed any discussion about China.

The Italian party, the biggest in Western Europe also was reported hostile. The powerful French party, although closely aligned with Moscow, appeared lukewarm and the Japanese were opposed.

Yugoslav President Josip Broz Tito, himself expelled from the Soviet bloc fe- cially nearly 25 years ago, takes the view that foreign interference in any party's domestic affairs is unacceptable.

The compromise plan for a European conference appears more generally favored. The agenda can be drafted to deal with regional issues such as European security, eliminating the need to discuss China in the broader context of world communism.

The new formula, as started by several Soviet bloc documents made public in recent weeks, calls for a European conference as a first priority step leaving the door open for a world conference at an unstated later time.

Lenders Wary

Belleville Can't Lure Extra Mortgage Money

Tight supplies of mortgage money in Belleville will not be greatly loosened by the influx of dollars from other municipalities. This was learned at a meeting Friday of Mayor Robin Jeffrey, city realtors and builders, and representatives from 11 lending institutions.

The meeting in the works for several months, was called by the mayor following requests from the Quinte Real Estate Board and the Quinte Home Builders Association.

Realtors and builders hoped to force lenders into bringing more mortgage dollars into the city by placing them on the hot seat during the meeting.

Twice before the tactic worked. Three years ago, according to one realtor, such a meeting brought in another $14 million into the city. At that time, small cities were without mortgage funds while larger cities were well stocked.

During Friday's meeting, few new dollars were promised by city mortgage lending institutions.

Gerald Joyce, real estate board president, said, "the only direct new money came from Canada Permanent Trust."

After speaking to the trust company representative, Mr. Joyce said he received an indication that the new money supply was prompted by the meeting.

"I don't think it was an exercise in futility," said Mr. Joyce, "The headquarters of all lending institutions have been made aware that the mayor was concerned enough to call a meeting.

"We've got their attention. We've made them aware of Belleville's problems."

In a letter from Canada Permanent Trust Co. offices in Toronto, $100,000 a week was promised for borrowers in Belleville.

City banks indicated speculative builders' mortgages are almost non-existant in Belleville. Money for conventional mortgages — up to 75 per cent of appraised value — is available, but increasingly becoming scarcer. High rate mortgages are few and far between.

The Mutual Life Assurance Co. representative said his company had not been active in the city because of the lack of serviced land in Belleville.

Builder president Miles DeMark said after Friday's meeting, he does not think the city will receive any increased supplies of mortgage money. "There just isn't any around.

"They can't take money from other centres to supply us," he said.

Most at the meeting agreed the supply of money across Canada is limited.

Mr. DeMark said lack of speculative builders' loans, coupled with high interest rates, will slow down building. "It won't be noticed, until of homes in the city, September," Mr. DeMark said.

The builder said he will not build a home with a 12 per cent mortgage for fear it will not sell. Interest rates could fall suddenly, leaving the house unsellable.

Boating Requires Safety

The key to safe boating lies not so much in the boat as in the boater, Cpl. Ron Hartlen of the Belleville detachment of the RCMP, says. Last year alone, 1,078 persons drowned in residents in Canada and the Canada Safety Council predicts that at least an equal number of persons will drown this year. In an effort to cut back on the number of drownings that are related to boating the RCMP are trying to remind boaters to review their safe boating practices. People who operate their boats out of the Belleville harbor, or anywhere else, are reminded to pick up a copy of the federal government's Safe Boating Guide at the RCMP detachment offices or to write to the Marine Branch of Transport Canada, Ottawa, to order a copy.

RCMP Enforces Water Safety

By PETER GOODSPEED
Staff Reporter

If you don't think about it, there is one sure way to destroy your summer holidays.

Go out in a boat on one of the many waterways in Hastings and Prince Edward Counties and ignore the tenets of safe boating.

If you do, you won't be alone in your sorrow. According to Canada Safety Council, nearly 1,000 of Canada's five million water sports enthusiasts will drown this year.

Approximately 200 of those deaths will be directly related to boating accidents that could have been avoided.

Corporal Ron Hartlen, of the Belleville detachment of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, finds that kind of statistic appalling.

As a detachment commander in the police force that is charged with enforcing the Canada Shipping Act in both Hastings and Prince Edward counties, Cpl. Hartlen is concerned with the lack of knowledge of safe boating practices displayed by many area yachtsmen.

"You have to call a spade a spade," Cpl. Hartlen said. "There are a lot of people out on the water right now who haven't a clue about what they are doing."

"The large majority of boating accidents result from three basic causes," Cpl. Hartlen explained. "Some people just have knowledge or skill involved in boating. Some people who operate boats are physically or mentally incapable of doing it properly. They may be suffering from fatigue and overexertion or they may be intoxicated. And then we have the daredevils and show-offs or the experienced sailor who becomes blase. They all have the wrong attitude for safe boating."

The RCMP is determined to cut back on the number of fatal boating accidents in the country, Cpl. Hartlen explained, and in Belleville the force's four-man detachment will tackle the problem by combining a stiff law-enforcement policy with a program of public education.

Following this year's theme for Safe Boating Week (July 1 - July 7) the RCMP is encouraging boating enthusiasts to join a club of some sort where they will learn the skills of water sports.

Each year we have more and more new people who are taking to the water for the first time," Cpl. Hartlen said, "and it is this segment of the boating public that we would like to reach. We want to encourage clubs to put on safe-boating classes and we want new and experienced yachtsmen to review their safe boating practices."

To assist the yachtsmen the RCMP are distributing a small Boating Safety Guide that has been prepared by the marine branch of Transport Canada.

The bright, blue and white pamphlets, available at the RCMP detachment offices on Haig Road, deal with a wide variety of topics including a description of the Canadian buoyage system, notes on the proper lights to be displayed on boats and a guide to the correct use of life jackets.

According to Cpl. Hartlen, the ministry of transport pamphlets is an excellent guide for the amateur yachtsman and should be consulted before anyone sets out to enjoy a summer of the water.

In addition to promoting public education programs offered by other institutions, the RCMP detachment here is active in enforcing existing safe boating laws.

Last year alone, the RCMP checked 285 boats in the Quinte area. Four persons were charged with violations of various shipping acts and 36 people were issued with written warnings.

But as Cpl. Hartlen said, the police would rather spend the summer patrolling the two counties without having to lay a charge or investigate a drowning.

"We just don't want to see people become statistics", he said.

Sod Turning Ceremony For Wellington Arena

WELLINGTON — The provincial government has approved a grant of $75,000 toward reconstruction of the Wellington arena, says James Taylor, MPP Prince Edward-Lennox.

Mr. Taylor made the announcement yesterday during a sod-turning ceremony at the arena site in Wellington village.

Construction on the new building began early this week and the arena management board hopes to have the concession stand open for the 1974 hockey season.

The old Wellington arena was destroyed by fire in December, 1972, and since that time the community has staged an ambitious fund drive to raise money toward reconstruction on the same site.

"This is a long awaited day," remarked Prince Edward County warden Keith MacDonald as he prepared to assist in the sod-turning.

He added that the new building is possible through the efforts of the arena management board, county council and hundreds of individuals who have made donations.

Warden MacDonald said that completion of the new arena would mark the highlight of his term in office.

James Taylor commented, "I think its just a great occasion." He emphasized the importance of teamwork and observed that through a team art approach grants were made to four municipalities instead of just one.

Mr. Taylor added that "this type of building" is needed in a community as it builds both the boy and the spirit.

Reeve of Hillier, Lewis Wright, commented, "On behalf of my townships, we are very happy and proud to be part of the project. We are so close that we feel part of it."

Wellington reeve Robert Boyce remarked that the arena will become a reality through the efforts of the persons attending the sod turning ceremony. He referred to the unfortunate fire that destroyed the old arena but noted that the new building will represent a great improvement. Its community hall will be available for use by all persons in the county.

Rev. Ralph Jackson of Wellington United Church spoke briefly at the ceremony, commenting that sports teach teamwork and develop the bodies and minds of youth. He expressed appreciation to the County Centre in Picton for the ice time provided for Wellington-area youngsters when their arena burned last year.

Success Leads To Success

Some successes make successful meals.

Pieter Geerkins, 18, of Belleville, a former Harry J. Clarke pupil who won an entrance scholarship to Trinity College School, Port Hope, four years ago, has ended his college days with top honors.

He has been awarded the Governor-General's Medal for mathematics and physics. He is the national Mathematics Olympiad winner, Trinity's first prize in physics and chemistry, was head boy and Prefect in his last year.

Pieter is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Geerkins, Bleecker Ave. He will now go to Queen's University where his specialties will be physics and mathematics.

Aviation Strike Could Hit Here

A possible strike at a Toronto civil aviation company has involves Quinte district workers.

A meeting will be held Monday in Toronto between Field Aviation Co. Ltd. and the International Association of Machinists Local 2412 in an attempt to reach a settlement, a local union spokesman said Friday.

The union local has 42 members in the Belleville area who are employed by the company which has national defence maintenance contracts at CFB Trenton and Mountain View airbase. The firm handle aircraft aircraft, mostly fighters, at Mountain View.

A strike is legal June 20, the union spokesman said, and has been ratified 95 per cent by membership of the local which rejected a conciliation report.

Chamber Music Ensemble To Come to Belleville

It's more by accident than design that Belleville audiences and young musicians will have the opportunity to hear and learn from musicians, bordering on professional rank, during a performance of Chamber Music Canada Monday, June 24.

The 12-member ensemble, funded by an Opportunities For Youth (OFY) grant, has been collared for Centennial Secondary School next Monday at 8 p.m.

Most of the credit can be placed on Steve Potter's shoulders. He is a young musician currently attending McGill University in Montreal.

The Belleville man persuaded the company's coordinators to come to the city on their three city swing through eastern Ontario.

"I thought the people in Belleville would be interested by high calibre musicians," said Mr. Potter.

Douglas Hallman, company information officer, said recently the troupe was not initially slated to appear in Belleville. Concerts had been arranged in Ottawa, Cornwall and Cobourg.

He said, "Steve's enthusiasm persuaded us to come."

Operating under an $18,000 OFY grant, for period in two years, the chamber music ensemble is scheduled for 19 concerts and workshops in eastern Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes. Only a limited number of formal concerts will be held during the tour.

The majority are structured to provide a one hour concert followed by a workshop session that will give local young people the opportunity to learn from the company's musicians.

All players, says Mr. Hallman, are "on the verge of professional careers."

"We've caught them just before they go on to symphony orchestras and into freelancing solo." he said. Most are McGill University students. All have graduated from high schools in where they have studied and with whom they will perform.

Area youthful musicians are invited to bring their instruments to the concert.

There is no admission charge.

The purpose of the workshop, said Mr. Hallman, is two-fold.

"It's to have them experience some of the music that we play and to tell them where they can get sheet music," he said.

Thurlow Parks Awarded Grants

Parks in Thurlow township are expected to be livelier places this summer as the municipality's recreation committee prepares to make use of two recently announced provincial government grants.

In total, $2,800 will be applied to township playgrounds through Ontario Youth in Action (OYIA) grants from the Ministry of Community and Social Services.

Ray Mason, a member of the sponsoring recreation committee, was the person instrumental in preparing the two grants now in the ministry's sports and recreation branch.

In the Fun and Fitness program, $2,000 will be applied to salaries for 36 playground supervisors, mainly high school students. Two supervisors, or leaders, will man each one of 12 playgrounds in the township.

Lorraine Farguy, a 19-year-old Centre Hastings Secondary School grade 13 student, is coordinating both the Fun and Fitness, and Nature's Playthings programs.

She said Friday, plans are underway for the latter program, starting July 2 and ending August 22.

Two teachers from Harmony Public School, the site of one playground, will be showing supervisors next week various activities that can be passed on to youngsters for their own entertainment.

Activities also hopes to bring the supervisors and a St. John's Ambulance volunteer together. This she hopes will make her playground leaders more aware of first aid procedures if any accident should befall youngsters at the township's parks.

Primarily, says Mrs. Sarmeers, the Fun and Fitness program will emphasize fitness, games, and feats of skills rather than feat of competition.

Some crafts will be learned by youngsters from pre-school to 16-21 years.

The second program will, in part, provide youngsters with equipment they lost their prowess on.

For five weeks after the July 2 starting date, three students will be constructing playground equipment from materials found in the township's woodlots and roadsides.

"The program will make children more aware of their surroundings," said Miss Farguy, Friday.

Logs, stumps, rocks in short, anything found naturally — will be used to create teeter-totters, balance beams, climbing trees, swings, for two township playgrounds. Hamilton and Plainfield parks are slated to benefit from the new playground equipment.

Enforcing The Rules

After months-long warning Belleville General Hospital now intends enforcing parking regulations on emergency routes around hospital. To enforce city bylaw Judge J. L. Clendenning swears in BGH security guards Aiva McAlister and Clinton Rushnell.

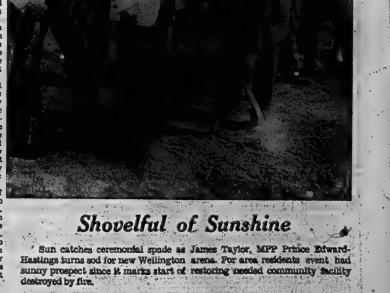
Hospital Cracks Down On Illegal Parking

The days of free warnings against illegal parking at Belleville General Hospital are over.

Now the law will be enforced, warns a hospital spokesman.

BGH — and the law — have now moved to give substance to the warning.

Two BGH security guards have been officially sworn in as bylaw enforcement officers so they can legally ticket cars illegally parked around the hospital. This means from now on any driver will cost a $5 fine.



The tickets will be issued under terms of city ordinance regulating traffic on emergency routes around the hospital. The regulation was passed some months ago by city hall to back up hospital authorities frustrated in attempts to control the steady stream of vehicles which were left parked on driveways around hospital buildings. The vehicles pose a potential hazard since they would block quick access to various parts of the hospital in the event of an emergency.

Keeping the traffic lanes clear would have meant constant patrolling by city police, as the only immediately available agency legally permitted to hand out parking tickets.

Since the law was passed hospital authorities feel the most part have had security officers handing out warning tickets.

Late this week provincial Judge J.L. Clendenning swears in two security officers who will now be available to patrol hospital vehicle routes throughout peak traffic periods.

The parking restriction also provides for towing away vehicles if necessary.

Expos Lose 5-4

Thomas Bounces Ball Off Wall

MONTREAL (CP) — Second baseman Jerry Thomas threw Willie Davis and Singleton could field four runs with an inside-the-park homer and a bad-hop single, to power San Diego Padres to a 5-4 National League baseball win over Montreal Expos Friday night.

With the Padres leading 1-0 and two out in the third inning, Willie McCovey drew a walk and moved to third when John Grubb lofted a high fly which fell between Ken Singleton and Jim Cox for a double.

Thomas smashed a towering fly ball which bounced against the fence in right centre, 400 feet from the plate. Before Grubb could get the ball and relay it to the infield, Davis and Singleton had scored.

The Padres added another run in the fifth when McCovey drew another walk, this time with one out, and moved to third on a single by Grubb. Thomas then hit a routine grounder to Cox which took a strange bounce, shooting over the infielder's head and into right field to score McCovey.

Montreal got a pair of runs back in the third inning when Ron Fairly hammered a Dan Spillner fastball over the right-field fence with Tim Foli on second and added another in the seventh when Ron Hunt scored on a double-play grounder by Davis.

The Expos added another run in the bottom of the eighth when Davis cracked a run-scoring single with two out.

Hank Aaron bit a solo home run—No. 11 this year and No. 724 for his career—and added a run-scoring double while Rorie Harrison drifted a two-run homer as Atlanta Braves beat St. Louis Cardinals 6-1 Friday for their 20th victory in the last 27 games.

In other National League games, Chicago Cubs outlasted Houston 10-7, Pittsburgh Pirates beat San Francisco Giants 4-3, Los Angeles Dodgers edged New York Mets 3-2, Cincinnati Reds defeated Philadelphia Phillies 7-4

"I've been lucky off (Bob) Gibson," said Aaron, who has hit eight homers off the Cardinals' ace in his career. "It has a fast ball. He was throwing the ball good but he got it in a bad spot," Hank said of his second-inning shot.

Burt Hooton, a pitcher who wasn't hitting well, became a hitter who wasn't pitching well as the Cubs' victory over Houston.

He doubledhis first hit of the year in the third inning and a seven-run third inning and completed the rout with a run-scoring single.

After Chicago built an 8-3 lead, Houston bombed the Chicago starter in the fourth with a four-run fourth, three of them coasting on Bob Watson's homer.

That gave Jim Todd a chance and he secured his first major league victory with 4 1-3 innings of one-hit shutout relief.

Pittsburgh's Dock Ellis pitched a four-hitter and got help from Richie Zisk, who belted a two-run double, and Willie Stargell, who slugged his 10th homer of the year.

Tom Paciorek drove in two runs with a triple and a single to help the Dodgers beat New York.

Tommy John was sailing along with a perfect game until Rusty Staub singled with one out in the fifth. And John still led a shutout going until Cleon Jones hit a two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth.

That brought Mike Marshall out of the Los Angeles bullpen for the 39th time in the Dodgers' 62 games, and he chalked up his ninth save.

Mike Schmidt helped the Phillies by belting two home runs—but he hurt them by making a costly error in Cincinnati's six-run third inning which ultimately gave the Reds the victory.

Joe Morgan's double and Johnny Bench's run-scoring single tied the game 2-2 off Tony Perez singled, Dan Driessen laid down a sacrifice bunt and Bench scored the lead run when Schmidt fielded the ball and threw wildly past first. Pete Rose later capped the burst with a two-run single.

Despite feeling under the weather, Jim Bibby started for Texas Rangers Friday night and pitched strong baseball for five innings.

But Bibby finally bucked, and manager Billy Martin had to call on Steve Foucault to shut down a 7-3 victory over Milwaukee.

Bibby showed me a lot of guts tonight," said Martin. "He picked up a very bad cold two days ago in Detroit, felt lousy Thursday and Friday but he told me he had wanted to try to pitch six or seven innings. He was too weak to throw his fastball hard enough after awhile, so I got him out as soon as trouble developed

Mayor Robin Jeffrey made the trophy presentation to Paula Wellwood registered owner of Paul's Peanuts, winner of the first Sires Stakes race at the QHR Friday night. Paula's father, Bob, jockeyed the horse to its victory. Past QHR President, John R. Bush, presented the raceway cooler.

Belleville Sires Stake Races Attracts Over 1000 Fans

Although the track record of 2:09.4, held by Dusty Lake John still stands at the Quinte Exhibition Raceway, today, the 1041 patrons who crowded the Fairgrounds Friday night to see a division of the Ontario Sires' Stakes were certainly not disappointed.

All three of the heats, which went for purses of $4,472, were all well under the usual Quinte times.

The first race of the three went to Chickopee Gene, in somewhat of an upset over J.R. Bill. The lady colt, owned by Effie Cunningham of Dugwell, covered the oval in a time of 2:06¼, the best of the year, until the sixth race of the night.

He took the lead at the head of the horse stretch, hanging on to take the one length win from the favourite in the mutual tote board.

The winner paid $9.10, $3.30, and $2.60 with JR. Bill checking in with a $3.50 and $2.50 mutuel Price.

Cowan's Boy was another length and a half back, payed $5.10.

Clint Hodgins' Terry Parker set the fastest time of the night a 2:09:1 mark, with a win in the second heat of the Stakes, the sixth race of the ten race card.

Hodgins, from Clandeboye, Ontario, waited until the back stretch the second time around the half mile oval to take the lead, winning handily over Replica Creed. Terrific Night was third.

Bill Wellwood, known to many harness racing fans for his feats at the track in Ontario was behind Paula's Peanut in the third leg of the Stakes, the ninth race on the regular card. He guided the chestnut gelding to a 2:08 win over Paul Bye Pat, taking the victory by a length and three quarters.

He returned $5.50, $3.80, and $2.70. Paul Bye Pat, paid $4.80, and $3.20, with T. R. Pixie paying $2.80 to show.

In the regular featured race on the card, Charity M rallied to a 2:10:1 win over Kurt's Tuxedo. Tender Gender was third, with Dominion Lad the fourth place finisher.

No driver recorded more than one win in the ten race lineup.

The crowd, not the largest ever at the track, were in a beeting mood, however. They hi'shed a record $48,17 through the mutuel windows, topping the old mark by over $7,000.

Edelweiss Wins in 11

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Kitchener Edelweiss scored an unearned run in the bottom of the 11th inning to register a 1-0 victory over Niagara Falls McIlvee in the only Ontario Football League game Friday.

Two Niagara Falls errors, one by losing pitcher Jake Neufeld, accounted for Kitchener's game winning run. Neufeld gave up five hits, struck out 15 and walked one.

Meanwhile, winning pitcher Keith Wagler allowed three hits. Ed Neuders had two of the three Niagara Falls hits. Wagler struck out 13 and walked one.

Chickopee Gene was the underdog winner of the third race at Quinte Exhibition Raceway, Friday night, defeating J. R. Bill by a length. Doug Rollins presented the cooler to the horse on behalf of the QHR and Bob Topping of the Ontario Racing Commission was on hand to present the trophy.

"What d'you mean, wait your turn to see the revising officer—I AM the revising officer!"

It's your last chance...

to get your name on the voters' list and be eligible to vote in the July 8th election.

If you live in an urban area...

Final revision of the voters list ends June 21st. If you live in a community of 5,000 or more population, you should have received a copy of the official list of electors for your urban polling division. If you have not received it, or if your name has been left off the list, or if any of the particulars on the list regarding your name, address or occupation are incorrect, telephone the number at the bottom right of this advertisement. Get the information you require, so that you will be able to vote in the July 8th federal election.

The methods for revising the lists of electors in urban communities (with a population of 5,000 or more) are relatively simple. The revising officer is a judge or an elector appointed by him. Two revising agents assist him. The revising agents are also available to your returning officer and, at your request will call at your home to obtain the required information.

You can also see the revising officer in person. The address where the revising officer works and the days and hours that he is revising can be found at the top of your copy of the printed list of electors. You can also find this information posted in most post offices or you can call the telephone number listed at the bottom right of this ad. Your returning officer will then give you the required information.

If you live in a rural area...

In a rural polling division, the person who enumerated you for the July 8th federal election is also the person who does the revision of the list. So he is the one to contact in a rural area.

You can vote before election day, July 8th.

If for any reason, you will be away from your normal place of residence on July 8th, you can, providing you are on the voters list, vote at the advance poll for your polling division on Saturday June 29th or Monday July 1st.

The list of electors, mailed to urban voters, carries full information regarding the Advance Poll...or your Returning Officer can give you the location and times of your advance poll. Phone him.

Remember...you can't vote in an urban polling division unless your name is on the list. This is your last chance to get on that list.

Palmer and Player Back in the Swing

MAMARONECK, N.Y. (AP) — It is like a page out of the books. Arnold Palmer and Gary Player tied with two others for the lead and Jack Nicklaus is making menacing noises from six strokes back.

The long, lingering shadow of Ben Hogan's Big Three again fell across the U.S. Open golf championship at Winged Foot today.

"I can't consider myself out," said Nicklaus, his confidence unbroken by two bogey rounds of 75 and 74. "The weather has been a piece of cake so far. Suppose the weather changes. It could be a real dog-fight."

Palmer, shooting a 73, and Player, battling back from disaster with a blazing finish for a 73, were tied at 143 with former PGA champion Ray Floyd, who had a 71, and Hale Irwin, 70.

Two 36-year-olds who have never won a pro event. Tom Shaw and Dave Hanson, were tied at 144, followed by Forrest Fezler and Bert Yancey, at 145.

Defending champion Johnny Miller, this year's leading money winner with four top-10 stories and more than $200,000, took a quadruple bogey seven on the seventh hole, where he hit the ball in a trap three times, for a 76-75-151.

"I peaked too soon," he said afterwards. "For a year I was the best in the world, better than Nicklaus or Player, but I am not superman."

Some of the glittering names in golf didn't survive the 150 cutoff point—England's Tony Jacklin, 1967 amateur champion Craig Stadler, also 154; former British Open champion Bob Charles, who also failed to break 155; Billy Casper, the winner of the Open in 1959, and two-time champion Lee Trevino, each 156.

But Toronto's George Knudson, who shot a 75, had a two round total of 153 to qualify for the third round.

Robert Green, whose latest of three tour victories came less than a week ago at Philadelphia, tied the Open record over this course with a three-under-par 67 and saved his place in the tournament with a 148.

Larry Ziegler shot a 68 and Frank Beard fired a 69 and wound up at 146. Bert Yancey also had a 69.

Player started the second round with a one-stroke lead over the field, fell six strokes off par through the first six holes and then started scrambling back.

He refused to be shaken by events—a shot into a waste bunker and a triple-bogey seven almost before he warmed up.

"You can't afford to be shaken," he said. "This course would shake you right into the ground. This is a round of golf I will never forget as long as I live. What I did today was a miracle.

Palmer, whose last major victory was the 1966 Masters, said a victory in the Open here would bring a new life to his game.

"It would mean a great deal to a lot of ways, but more for a personal reason than anything I could gain in business," he said.

Rosie Leads Loves

Florida Flamingos won their sixth straight home World Team Tennis match by defeating Toronto-Buffalo Royals 26-23 Friday night.

The Royals' Wendy Overton was the only player to figure in more than one match, playing before 1,053 fans.

She defeated Florida's Betty Ann Grubb 7-6 in the women's singles and then teamed with Mike Estep to beat Mary Ann Cox and Laure Fleming 6-4, in the mixed doubles.

Derek's Rosie Casals defeated Kathy Kuykendall 7-6 to lead the Lovers (8-4) to a 23-17 victory over Baltimore Banners.

Miss Kuykendall's debut with Baltimore also was spoiled in mixed doubles where she substituted for Betty Stove, losing 7-6 to Derek's Mary Anne Beattie and Butch Seewagen.

In men's singles, the Lovers' Phil Dent beat Bob Carmichael.

Sue Roberts In Front

MEDINA, Ohio (AP) — Sue Roberts, winner in the Ladies Professional Golf Association season carved out a three-under-par 68 Friday for a one stroke lead over JoAnne Carner in the $62,500 Medina Open.

"I was just very consistent," the 25-year-old leader from Columbus, Ohio, said after her three-birdie first round.

Miss Roberts, whose best finish has been a fourth place, has won less than $4,000 this year and needs 28th on the 1974 money-winning list.

Mrs. Carner, winner of three of the last four LPGA tour stops, wheeled into threatening position with a 70.

Four players, Murle Breer, Lenore Beserra, Pam Barnett and Gloria Ehret, were deadlocked for third place with 71s. Sandra Post, formerly of Oakville, Ont., and Sandra Haynie matched par at 72.

Miss Roberts needed only 26 putts, including three from four feet or less for her birdies on 10, 14 and 15.

Most of the game's big names were back in the pack.

Jane Blalock, No. 2 on the money list this year, settled for 73 while leading amateur Carol Jo Ann Prentice and Carol Mann struggled to 77, along with Jocelyne Bourassa of Shawinigan, Que.

The low 60s and ties will survive the cut after today's second round.

Ken Archdeacon scored four times to lead Bramalea Expos to a 11-10 victory over Rexdale Warriors in Ontario Lacrosse Association Junior A action.

In the only other game, John Campbell's four goals led Mississauga PCOs to a 9-5 win over St. Catharines Legionnaires.

At Bramalea, other Bramalea scorers were Bob Burk and Greg Whannsley, with two each, Terry Mastine, Nigel Cook and Ian Robinson.

For Rexdale, it was Blair Campbell, with six, Dan Walker, with three, and Bill Bellino with a single.

At St. Catharines, Ian Joyce and Rob Gizzarelli each scored twice for Mississauga, and Dave Legree and George Chandler each got single goals.

For St. Catharines, it was John Howe and Mike McGraw, with two each, Tom Patrick, Joe Martin, Scott Hudson and Mark Pothier.

Roberts and Giroux Make Finish Count

TORONTO (CP) — Some days you can do a lot of things wrong and still have most come out right, as Kelly Roberts and Phil Giroux demonstrated Friday in the first round of the Ontario open golf championship.

Roberts fired a 67 on the 6,-900-yard, par-71 Barrydowne Country Club course for a share of the first-round lead with Art Rondeau of Sarnia. Giroux of Grand Bend, Ont., and Roberts, a University of Toronto graduate, finished one stroke ahead of the pack in the first $30,000 tournament.

"I started with two good breaks on No. 1," said the 30-year-old Roberts, the Ontario amateur champion the last two years.

"I hooked my first shot into the trees and then my second shot just missed a trap. I two-putted for a birdie."

Roberts, a resident of Islington, Ont., said his iron shots and the green only 11 times all day but he still managed five birdies against only one bogey.

Most of the starting field of 127 found the front nine the easiest. Jeff Roberts fired a three-under-par 33 on the back nine and played the last four holes in three under.

Meanwhile, Giroux, a Montreal club pro, said he felt tired most of the day and was bothered by problems.

"I happened to hook a couple of shots but never got behind any trees," said the 38-year-old amateur champion the last two years.

"Another day if I make those same shots I'll be in real trouble," said Giroux who fired a three-under-par two on the second hole with a six-iron shot from about 125 feet.

McBride had seven birdies, including four on the front nine. Then he ran into bogies on the 12th, 14th and 16th.

Tied with Giroux in second spot are Ben Kern of Lakeside, Ont., and Moe Norman of Guelford, Ont., who played in the same foursome with McBride.

The group at 69 included Ken Palmer of London, Ont., Bob Cox Jr., of Richmond, B.C.; John Morgan of Victoria, B.C.; Gerry Schoenfeldt of West Hill, Ont., and Steve Groves and John Jacobs of the U.S.

Bob Panasiuk of Windsor, Ont.,was among a big group at 71, while Wil Hemerodi of Winnipeg shot a 75, as did defending champion Rafe Botts of Los Angeles.

Bill Wright of Edmonton, the 1973 Ontario Open winner, shot a 78, and veteran amateur Nick Weslock of Mississauga, six-time Ontario Open champ, had a 72.

JOE BACK IN RING

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe Louis, looking as Brown Bomber, was licensed Thursday as a referee and designated to work the Joe Frazier-Jerry Quarry fight by the New York State Athletic Commission. Edwin B. Dooley, chairman of the commission, said the decision was made on the recommendations of four physicians who examined the former heavyweight champion. The scheduled 12-round heavyweight contest between Frazier and Quarry will be held Monday night in Madison Square Garden.

Orillia Boxer In Hall of Fame

HAMILTON (CP) — Walter Henry of Orillia was among six former boxers and trainer inducted into the Canadian Boxing Hall of Fame Friday.

In a ceremony in the Football Hall of Fame building, the six received the boxing Hall of Fame's Max award for their achievements in the sport and contributions to the community.

Henry, a former Olympic boxing contender, is a former Orillia citizen of the year.

Other award recipients were:

—Tony Brandino, of Hamilton, a former boxer and referee;

—Bill Jenkins, of Hamilton, founder of the city's Shamrock Boys' Town club;

—Dan Ross, of Oakville, former boxer and referee;

—Ed Beattie, of Hamilton, former Canadian champion;

—Mike Donnelly, a former boxer and now a sports writer for The Spectator.

The Tony Unitas award, named after the director and founder of the Boxing Hall of Fame, was given to Football Hall of Fame director Larry Smith of Hamilton and Boxing Hall of Fame member Joseph Fallata, a Hamilton physician.

OUT OF HOSPITAL

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Pirate pitcher Bob Moose was released Friday from Presbyterian Hospital where he underwent a May 30 operation for removal of a blood clot from his throwing shoulder. Moose has been placed on the disabled list.

BACK DISC REMOVED

ANAHEIM (AP) — Pitcher Bill Singer of California Angels had successful surgery Friday to remove the ruptured lumbar disc in his lower back, the American League team said. The 30-yearold right hander will remain in St. Joseph Hospital in nearby Orange for another week, then begin rehabilitation, the Angels said. Singer was a 20-game winner last season.

DINGHY CHAMPIONS

WINTHROP, Mass. (AP) Harvard cruised past 14 other competitors Friday to capture the Morss Trophy and the North American Intercollegiate dinghy sailing championship. Harvard's low point score of 168 gave them the victory in the three-day series of races. Royal Military College, Kingston, Ont., 389, was 15th.

VETERAN TRADED

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Veteran right-handed pitcher Steve Arlin was traded Friday night by San Diego Padres to Cleveland Indians for two players to be named later. Arlin, 29, has a 9-7 record and a 3.01 earned-run average in 16 National League baseball games this season, 12 of them as a starter. He has been used as a reliever recently and has one save.

BATHER TO MONTREAL

MONTREAL (CP) — Glen Satiher, a veteran left-winger was acquired by Montreal Canadiens from St. Louis Blues Friday to complete an earlier deal that sent defenceman Rick Wilson to St. Louis. Satiher began his National Hockey League career in 1967 with Boston Bruins and subsequently played with Pittsburgh Penguins and New York Rangers.

PETERSON CRASHES

ZANDVOORT (Reuter) — Swedish racing driver Ronnie Peterson was taken to a hospital Tuesday after crashing during practice for the Dutch Formula 1 Grand Prix June 23. Peterson was believed suffering concussion but a hospital spokesman described his condition as satisfactory.

Lacklustre Campaign Beginning to Liven Up

OTTAWA (CP) — A federal election campaign that so far has failed to electrify the public may liven up a little in the three weeks left before the July 8 polling date.

Party officials say local associations in 264 constituencies across the country are moving into top gear and predict the campaign will start to generate some sparks.

There have been a few lively developments, however. Among these were a couple of cuss words, a lecture on love and a black sheep driven from the fold.

The rising cost of living figures, announced earlier this week added some fuel to the campaign.

They were so helpful to the Anti-inflation Policy Stated

TORONTO (CP) — Entering the stretch of the July 8 federal election campaign, David Lewis, New Democratic Party leader, has started putting flesh on the bones of his anti-inflation policy.

He began Friday by outlining the scope and some of the powers of his proposed national prices control board.

The NDP leader did an audience of party workers in the Toronto-York Centre riding, "I want to persuade people that it is an honest proposal derived from experience and knowledge of the Canadian economy."

The board would not simply state all price increases but would deal with specific goods commodities like steel, lumber, cement, sugar, nickel and fertilizer.

Corporations in these areas would have to justify price increases. The board would have the power to reject or roll back any price increases it decided were unjustified after considering production costs and reasonable profits.

"I am convinced that this can be done without a complicated bureaucracy, without corruption and with great benefits to all Canadians," he said.

He derided Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield's prices-and-incomes control plan as "an impossible, impractical policy." It would create a huge bureaucracy.

The Liberals, he said, have a "do-nothing" policy on inflation.

campaign of Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield that he was described as almost jaunty as he smiled and talked his way through the Niagara Peninsula of Ontario.

Party organizers say appearance pulls a couple to a day will be the result in part of a too long campaign. But all expressed pleasure at the way things are going for their respective leaders in an election dominated by one issue—inflation.

On the campaign trail there has been none of the Trudeaumania of 1968, although reporters note that while ministering Prime Minister Trudeau still draws a response from the young element while Mr. Stanfield gets more attention from the older generation.

The only major incident of the campaign to date was an anti-Liberal government demonstration in Calgary when Mr. Trudeau went there. Otherwise there has been little serious heckling and the leaders couldn't cope with.

Margaret Trudeau's Vancouver lecture on her husband's love—that "beautiful guy"—provided one of the few off-beat incidents.

The only published profanity of the campaign to date was Transport Minister Jean Marchand's calling Ron Collister, former CBC-TV newscaster and now a Progressive Conservative candidate, a "son of a bitch."

Mr. Stanfield received a measure of praise and support from other leaders when he refused to allow Mayor Leonard Jones of Moncton, N.B., to run as a Conservative candidate because of his bilingualism views.

That and the new Quebec language bill appeared likely to have to be making unity, racism and bilingualism an issue, as it was in 1972. But it appears to have died out.

Some of his political opponents were happy at the slight of Mr. Stanfield fumbling a football in a well-used cliche and saying that was the way his campaign was going.

But Mr. Stanfield joked with the photographers about it, asking why he had not provided another picture showing the 60-year-old leader making a spectacular catch.

Mr. Stanfield opened the campaign with his strongest personal attack in sometime on Prime Minister Trudeau in a more moderate vein, he has kept it up ensuring Mr. Trudeau cannot be trusted.

To a lesser extent Mr. Trudeau and Mr. Lewis have responded in kind, while attacking each other.

Party spokesmen say they are generally content with how the campaign is going.

"We're getting bigger crowds than anticipated," said Blair Williams, national director of the Liberal campaign. "The prime minister is in good spirits and we're getting enthusiastic crowds and good reactions."

Malcolm Wickson, national director of the Progressive Conservative campaign, said much the same about Mr. Stanfield's swings across the country.

CIM Scotton, NDP, national director, said he likes the way things have been going for leader David Lewis and Social Credit Leader Real Caouette expressed enthusiasm recently after completing a tour through the four western provinces.

The consensus of the late interviews was that eight weeks of electioneering is too long and most people don't give much attention to the politicians in the early stages.

The election act was written before air travel became an easy that a leader can give a speech on both sides of the country on the same day, with a stop in the middle for a chat.

Mr. Stanfield is undervating in his claim that the Liberals have no answer to inflation but a Conservative government would impose a short-term price and incomes freeze followed by about 18 months of flexible controls.

The other party leaders spend a lot of time criticizing the Tory program.

Mr. Trudeau says inflation is a problem but the people should decide who best can lead Canada through these troubled times.

Canada Will Aid Africa

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — Canada will provide $230 million in aid to the drought-stricken areas of northwest Africa, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp announced here Friday.

Mr. Sharp said the aid program will be spread over five years.

Calling the drought "one of the greatest tragedies to overtake mankind in our time," Mr. Sharp termed the Canadian program "a very small contribution were to be successful. These additional measures include a balanced budget.

On train, Frances Neville, 27, of Hillsdale, Ont., told Mr. Stanfield she thought the Liberal government was "full of ideas" in the budget concerning tax-free savings for home buyers. And Pat Sullivan of Brantford told the best thing that can be done with savings accounts is to take them to the races and bet.

Blake Watson, 23, also of Brampton, questioned Mr. Stanfield on how income controls could be applied evenly for everyone.

The Conservative leader told him that after the 90-day freeze he would be concerned with helping low-income earners more than those who have high incomes.

Mr. Davis said he is anxious for Mr. Stanfield to get to Vancouver train service because "we have a great price stability and we'll expect some assistance."

"Is this line or on all lines?" asked Mr. Stanfield.

"On all lines," replied the premier. And the conversation ended with smiles.

One woman, who refused to give her name to reporters, told Mr. Stanfield he was "full of it" sort of go along with the Liberal line that inflation is worldwide.

"If every country took that attitude," Mr. Stanfield began to say before being interrupted by another handshaker.

Toronto Mayor Crombie Comes Out for Stanfield

TORONTO (CP) — In a relatively relaxed day of campaigning Friday — Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield shook several hundred hands, received a hearty pat on the back from Toronto Mayor David Crombie and talked about the "real emergency" over inflation.

Unlike most days of the campaign, he didn't make any public appearances until mid-afternoon as he devoted the morning to two radio interviews before going to city hall here to sign the guest book.

It was at that brief ceremony that Mayor Crombie came within an ace of endorsing Mr. Stanfield.

"I've always taken the position that as mayor of Toronto I shouldn't be taking part in federal election," he said. But he quickly added that "I'm a Conservative and one of the reasons I am a Conservative is because Mr. Stanfield is the leader."

A reporter then asked the Conservative leader whether he intended to run on the mayor's coat-tails in Toronto and Mr. Stanfield said he would run on his own coat-tails everywhere, but "I'm very happy to have Mayor Crombie identify himself with my party."

The mayor accompanied the Conservative leader to a downtown square where several hundred people waited to shake his hand. Then, joined by Premier William Davis, Mr. Stanfield walked a block to the railway station where he boarded a rush-hour commuter train to Brampton to visit a flower festival and two shopping centres.

On the train, with television cameras following him, Mr. Stanfield circulated through the cars, talking with passengers who consistently asked questions about his proposals for prices and incomes controls.

Earlier in the day, the 59-year-old campaigner told a radio interviewer that "I don't like controls any more than any other Conservative does."

"But I'm not prepared to see what's happening to many Canadians today. . . . I feel there is a real emergency."

He said other measures, besides controls, would have to be used if the fight against inflation were to be successful.

I'm told reporters later that it was "a good sign" that people are asking questions about his anti-inflation measures. Until the campaign began, it had seemed to be an academic subject.

At the flower festival in Brampton, he met a fairly small group of people, who had gathered on a private dirt driveway and then he went off to a shopping centre to walk through the arcade, shaking hands with the Friday-night shoppers.

Only one woman refused to shake his hand when he offered it to her. She later told a reporter her refusal was based on the fact that she was "a Trudeau man."

All others gave him friendly greetings, including "Hello Bob, I'm doggone glad to see you."

Another woman asked him to "dig in his toenails and fight for Canada."

He then went to another shopping centre where, in an outdoor courtyard, about 1,500 people had gathered for a welcoming rally and barbecue.

He made a short speech, repeating his campaign promise to fight inflation if and when he becomes a prime minister.

And we're the only party with the guts and determination to control it."

Mr. Stanfield, with a heavy schedule today, was to begin his day with a 7.30 a.m. visit to an outdoor Toronto market and was to end on an all-evening rally in Peterborough, Ont.

Daisy Air Takes Off Monday

OTTAWA (CP) — Daisy Air, the successor to Rum Air, takes to the skies Monday.

The turbo-prop Convair that will carry New Democrat Leader David Lewis about the country in the July 8 federal election campaign comes into service in Toronto.

He will use it to fly to Montreal and then North Bay, Ont. Later in the week he will fly to Winnipeg.

To date Mr. Lewis has been using commercial airlines in the campaign while Prime Minister Trudeau and Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield have had chartered the Canada DC-9 jets.

Mr. Lewis took to the air in his own plane for the first time in the 1972 election when the NDP chartered a Dart-Herald propeller craft which the NDP dubbed Bum Air in honor of the party's concerted attack on corporate welfare bums.

Daisy Air has a speed of 250 miles an hour, 50 miles an hour faster than Bum Air, party sources say. DC-9s go about 500-600 m.p.h. The name comes from the campaign flower adopted by the NDP after Prime Minister Trudeau called Mr. Lewis "David the Daisy."

Mr. Lewis's itinerary next week call for him to fly to Montreal and then head for a meeting with union leaders at Hawkesbury at 11:45 a.m. and another meeting with farmers at 1 p.m.

He'll fly to North Bay then go by bus to Temiskamingue, Que., for a public meeting.

On Tuesday he'll tour North Bay and Kirkland Lake then fly to Saint Ste. Marie, Ont., for an overnight stop before proceeding to Winnipeg.

On Wednesday he'll go to The Pas, Man., and Thompson and on Thursday he'll fly to Yorkton, Sask. He'll spend Thursday night in Winnipeg.

Saskatchewan Says Ho-hum

REGINA (CP) — Despite five weeks of campaigning, Saskatchewan politicians seem to have drummed up election enthusiasm only among themselves.

While voters express profound disinterest in the election outcome, each of the three major parties seems to have convinced itself that there is a subterranean current of opinion running in its favor.

But if each party's expectations are correct, some seats in the Commons will have to be piled three deep with MPs.

Progressive Conservatives display confidence in nine victories. New Democrats also in nine, and Liberals in five.

That adds up to 23 winners in Saskatchewan's 13 constituencies, which in 1972 elected seven Conservatives, five New Democrats and one Liberal.

The parties equally conflict on what are the major issues.

Posters Protested

OSHAWA (CP) — Margaret Shaw, a city alderman running as a Conservative in the Oshawa-Whitby, said Friday that Ald. Mike Breaugh has "seriously misled" voters over New Democrat Ed Broadbent in his city hall office windows.

"City hall is supposed to be an unpolitical place," she said, adding she had heard complaints from members of the public about the signs.

"If I don't get action from Mr. Broadbent I will go after storming out of a meeting of the city's executive committee Friday, "I will call Mr. Wallace (Rakh Wallace, riding returning officer) and I bet he knows about it."

Mr. Breaugh, who is Mr. Broadbent's campaign manager, was unavailable for comment.

INNOCENT ENOCH

LONDON (CP) — A biography of right-wing Conservative Enoch Powell, named at showing the Tory party's future, is being written by an immigrant from India. The author is Dr. Doojan Patel, a Tory supporting whose Powell has won headlines for his tough stand against non-white immigration into Britain.

INTRODUCING TEXACO'S NEW BOOK.
Now you can understand your car and your mechanic.
How to get along with your car
$1.25
How it runs and how to keep it running with valuable information concerning safe, economical and trouble-free driving.
If there ever was a time when you should understand more about the operation of your car, it's right now. Especially when you consider that both gasoline and operating costs are rising. So, you owe it to yourself to know as much as possible about your car. That's why we have published a new illustrated book with over 54 pages dedicated to helping you understand your car and its operation. If you own or drive a car, our new book is "must" reading.
Before you say, "I don't want to tinker with my car," let us explain. "How to get along with your car" is not a do-it-yourself book. There is nothing that is frighteningly technical about it. In fact, even if you've never lifted your car's hood, with the help of our book you'll be able to identify most parts of your car from radiator to rear bumper. And you'll understand the basic function of each part. All explained in simple, easy-to-understand language with colour illustrations and diagrams. So, when it comes right down to it, what our new book will do is make you a more knowledgeable, confident driver, able to communicate on more equal terms with your mechanic.
Our new book also tells you the basic car maintenance that should be performed, when it should be done (depending on your type of driving) and what to look and listen for in order to avoid costly repair bills. Understanding what those 'clicks', 'pings', 'knocks', 'rattles' and 'squeals' are can alert you to take the appropriate action. And that may save you money.
How to get along with your car also gives you tips on automobile warranties, car insurance and grooming your car so it will be worth more when you do trade it. Most importantly it deals with driving safely and what to do when you find yourself in a difficult situation. There's even a section where you can rate yourself as a driver.
Last, but by no means least, we discuss gasoline mileage and how it can be improved seventeen ways. Even if you only read this one chapter, you'll be happy you picked up your copy of our new book.
To get your copy of "How to get along with your car" simply drive into any participating Texaco Service Station and ask for one! There is a small charge but we're sure you'll think it well worth the price. And we think it we can bring a little more understanding and pleasure into your driving, that's worth it too.

Roller Coaster Designer Sees Dream Come True

VANCOUVER (CP) — Carl Pfaro spent a lifetime designing and building roller coasters and all the while he was working on a super roller coaster, hoping someone would come along and want to build it.

The result is Mr. Pfaro's last machine, the giant coaster at Playland on the PNE grounds. Built at a cost of $300,000 in 1958, which Playland general manager Gerry Crawshaw says now would cost $1½ million, the Playland coaster is one of the three largest in North America.

Mr. Pfaro was one of the last known roller coaster designers.

"It would take an architect a year just to figure out what the residences were in building now," Mr. Crawshaw said.

Since the Playland coaster was constructed it has been used more than 3.5 million times.

The three sets of cars, 18 people in each set, are pulled up the first slope by a 75 horse power motor driving a 42,000 chain. After the first 75-foot drop the cars are on their own.

Every turn and drop in the 1,840-foot ride is designed for optimum thrills and safety.

The ride costs $10,000 a year to maintain, plus about $30,000 in labor. The main item involved is screws 3½ inches long which hold down the tracks. There is one every 18 inches on each track.

"They keep falling out because of vibration," Mr. Crawshaw said.

The other major maintenance job is the timber. Each beam of the structure has been subjected to an anti-rot treatment.

"The beams in this structure are twice as strong as they need be," Mr. Crawshaw said. He estimated the structure is good for another 10 to 20 years.

Wigwam Harry Is Proof Alcohol Great Antifreeze

WHITEHORSE, Y.T. (CP) — Wigwam Harry Fleck is living proof that alcohol is a great antifreeze.

Wigwam Harry has lasted through 33 years of blizzards, below-zero temperatures and the ravages of Yukon winters without succumbing to frostbite, before finally being laid low this winter with two frozen feet.

And ironically enough, Harry, known to residents as the town drunk, blames his downfall on the alcohol that kept his appendages warm for all those years.

One of the Yukon's living legends, Harry lies in the Whitehorse General Hospital, waiting for doctors to proclaim that the feet he lost a couple of months ago are well enough to be walked on again.

Wigwam Harry has been in the Yukon on a steady basis since 1941, and chuckles at the fact that he's survived all but time without freezing anything until now.

"The funny thing is that I was only a mile away from my cabin when I finally did freeze 'em," he said. "Passed out drunk. Got drunk and just couldn't make it another step."

It's just one more story to add to the rich collection about Wigwam's prowess as a digger and his notoriety as the town drunk.

"Yeah, I'm the town drunk," he admits. "But I can drink sober, too. Tomorrow I can quit. I'm not what you call an alcoholic."

Long-time residents of the area will vouch for the fact that he's not a nasty sort of town drunk.

"He's a real happy type when he gets drinking," one old friend said. "Kind of always a gentleman. Wigwam has always tipped his hat to the ladies as he passed by."

Wigwam's early years stretch back to Brantford, Ont., where he was born in 1900. He came west with his uncle in 1918, then made his first foray into the Yukon in 1926.

"There was only one store in town," he recalled. "There weren't any buildings on Main Street at all and lots were selling for $200 apiece. I guess I could've been pretty well off if I'd taken advantage of some of those properties after away back. . . ."

But Harry headed for Fort Churchill in 1927 and stayed there 14 years.

Wigwam said going to Fort Churchill was an experience in itself. At that time he railroaded only stretched as far as The Pas, Man., and from there it was a hike of several hundred miles into the tiny northern community.

When Wigwam returned to be Yukon in 1941, he spent a great deal of time prospecting and living in a tent on Main Street. He also worked as a driver for the United States Army and, after they pulled out, for the Canadian forces.

The Canadian army left the Yukon 18 years ago and Harry turned to digging for a living. One oldtimer recounts the tale of a basement that Wigwam dug for a local householder, then filled in again when the resident wouldn't pay up right away.

"He just stood there and watched while I put it all back, shovelful by shovelful," Wigwam said with a grin.

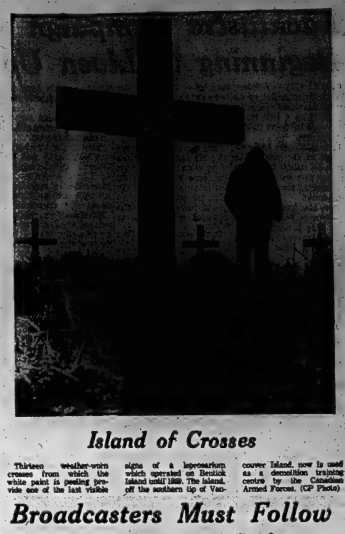
"You've never seen such a surprised-looking man."

There is the tale, too, of how Wigwam contracted to dig 200 post holes for the government. They paid him $600 and he completed the job in five days.

"That was pretty tough digging too," he said, "it was awful sandy. But for that kind of money for four days' work, who can complain?"

Throughout all his digging and drinking activities, Wigwam continued to prospect for gold. And he said if he were not in the hospital he'd be out looking for it again.

"I generally do my prospectin' on my own," he said.



"It's hard to find a good partner these days. It's dangerous though, going out alone like that—if you broke a leg or anything, that'd likely be it."

But Wigwam figures it's worth taking those kind of chances with gold at the price it is these days.

"Hell, I can remember when I used to figure I was lucky getting $12 or $13 an ounce for it. Now it's up to $175. Who wouldn't go looking for it?"

Compensation Rises

WINNIPEG (CP) — Farmers whose livestock must be destroyed because of rabies will receive higher compensation for some losses under a new federal-provincial agreement. It allows for up to $300 compensation for each adult cow or bull destroyed—an increase of $200 over the previous figure. Compensation for horses is up to $250 from $250.

Nostalgia Collection Fills His Warehouse

VANCOUVER (CP) — It began when he pleaded with his parents not to throw out old family possessions, but to give them to him instead.

Now, Philip Frandsen's collection of "American nostalgia" fills a California warehouse.

Mr. Frandsen, 48, is dean of the extension department with the University of California at Los Angeles, the largest university extension in the world.

He recently started a television program devoted to the collecting mania.

His own collection includes pots and pans from his grandmother's kitchen, boxes of ointments from Chicago of the 1920s and a collection of calendar glamour girls.

"I have a neon sign from a Chicago flophouse, which now would be absolutely unobtainable," he said on a recent trip to Vancouver. "It's a huge pink slipper and inside the slipper it says 10 cents a dance.

"And men would go to the bathroom and relieve their depression by paying 10 cents for a dance. Imagine that. And I have the sign which says so."

Mr. Frandsen, a sociologist, believes his collection of pop art memorabilia is as important as the priceless treasures of a fine arts museum.

"My collection may seem utterly boring, even repulsive, to some people but these are objects which reflect our society.

"However much we may like or dislike them, they are honest representations of what we have deemed to be important and what we have contributed as a culture."

His TV show, called The Collectors, has been getting a good response from fellow collectors. He said it will take him two years to open his mail.

In the program, he talks to collectors about their collections. And some people have strange ones. One man collects orange crate labels.

"He has four million orange crate labels. You can't get into his house. They're all filed away like a library. I told him he was possessed. I even offered to exorcise him."

Mr. Frandsen said the collecting craze has reached just about everybody.

"Collectors are coming out of the woodwork. Previously, collecting has been an activity of the privileged classes, assembling objects of high culture, objects of fine aesthetic quality.

"But today collecting has suddenly become democratized. It's a mass activity. Everyone is collecting something and virtually everything is collectable.

"We are living in a world of instant antiques."

And why do people collect?

He said there are many reasons—an attempt to immortalize one's fleeting or maybe an attempt to fight loneliness. Some collect to study history and some because they simply have the collector instinct.

But the most likely reason is mercenary.

"Get it low, because tomorrow it will be worth more."

Urges Price Increase

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Federation of Agriculture is urging an immediate increase in the farm price of industrial milk. An OFA spokesman said a recent survey shows that the average production cost for 100 pounds of industrial milk in 1970 was $10.66. Producers now get $8.35 a hundredweight.

Broadcasters Must Follow Existing Election Rules

OTTAWA (CP) — Broadcasters must follow existing broadcast rules for the July 8 federal election, not proposals in the new Election Expenses Act, says the Canadian Radio-Television Commission.

That means that partisan political broadcasts must end at midnight Saturday night, July 4, 24 hours before polling day. It also means broadcasters will not have to set aside any specific amount of time for parties and candidates.

The Election Expenses Act, approved by Parliament Jan. 14, allows radio and television stations and cable TV systems to continue partisan political broadcasts right up to polling day. But the legislation does not take effect until Aug. 1.

Radio station CFRB Toronto was fined $5,000 in March for breaking the Broadcasting Act with a broadcast by commentator Gordon Sinclair on the eve of the October, 1971, Ontario election. The Crown argued that Mr. Sinclair made a partisan political broadcast within the 24-hour blackout period of until 1:30. The Island, off the southern tip of Van-

The new election expenses legislation also requires broadcasters to provide five hours of prime time for political broadcasts in the final 29 days of the campaign, but under the Broadcasting Act and government regulations, broadcasters are not forced to supply free time.

However, the CRTC said broadcast time, free or otherwise, should be divided equitably among parties and candidates.

Any dispute among parties and candidates should be referred to the commission.

CBC spokesmen said about four hours of free television time and about two hours of free radio time has been offered to the Liberal, Progressive Conservative, New Democratic and Social Credit parties. The CTV network has offered three hours of television time.

Under a formula approved by the parties the liberals get about 11 units of time, the Progressive Conservatives 10, the New Democrats seven and Social Credit four. A CRTC source said private stations do not generally provide free time.

When the Election Expenses Act takes effect, all stations will have to provide that 6½ hours of prime time, with taxpayers picking up half the cost.

Under current rules any broadcaster who is a candidate during the campaign has an unfair advantage unless the broadcasting station offers a similar chance to the candidate's opponents. If this opportunity isn't given the commission said it will require these candidates to stop broadcasting until after the election.

The CRTC also said all stations must submit a report of all political broadcasts within five weeks after the election.

Broadcasters have also been told to identify properly any partisan political broadcast.

What's the question you may ask one day be asking your doctor before you go for a checkup.

He'll tell you — not by listening to your heart or taking your pulse but by snapping your picture.

It's possible that from your photograph, the doctor will be able to declare not only the present state of your health, but incredibly, what it's likely to be six months in the future.

No, I am not talking about voodoo. I am about something called "Kirlian photography", a revolutionary new technique from the Russian Union, now being investigated by American and Canadian scientists, which, captures, on film the electrostatic force field or "aura" around the human body. This aura is said to reflect the individual's physical, mental and emotional status.

Kirlian machines are usually portable models about the size of a waffle iron although under construction is at least one big enough to photograph the whole human body). For now, most Kirlian photographs are of small objects such as leaves or fingertips.

These photographs show pulsating, multi-colored light streaming from parts of the human body and often dazzling, opening up a dazzling and mysterious world hitherto hidden from man's eyes.

An ordinary maple leaf in a Kirlian photograph is surrounded by a galaxy of tiny comets, rockets, flares, flares, rockets and twinkling stars. In experiments by Dr. William Ross of the Ontario material science department at Sheridan University, the medical psychologist Thelma Moss of the University of California at Los Angeles, photographs of freshly plucked leaves showed the light patterns around the leaves faded but at a leaf slowly died the lights gradually faded.

Also, if the leaf were mutilated the light patterns around it became distorted.

Rare Art On Show

OTTAWA — The first comprehensive exhibition of rarely exhibited drawings and pastels by the Dutch-born artist Willem de Kooning, as well as recent sculptures, will be exhibited at the National Gallery of Canada, Ottawa, May 7 June until 21 July.

Organized by the Walker Art Center Minneapolis, the exhibition consists of 134 items the late 1930s to 1974 and 38 cast bronze sculptures made since 1970. Most of the works come from de Kooning's own collection but the exhibition includes a pastel, Seated Woman c. 1952, from the collection of the National Gallery of Canada, and impressive loans from the museum of Art Modern, Paris, and Hirschhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden, Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D.C.

Born in Rotterdam in 1904, Willem de Kooning was trained in the Netherlands and he emigrated by the he built grow to painters there. In 1926 he moved to New York and is, in fact, one of the few surviving members of the first Abstract Expressionists who, in the late 1940s, produced by influenced American art. He became a leading Action Painter but he was the only one of his friends and contemporaries such as Arshile Gorky, Jackson Pollock and Franz Kline, who made his earliest figure his principal theme. This woman image has been recurring, with revisions, in his art for 35 years since he began his first "woman" series of drawings in 1938. In these drawings he ignored conventional anatomy, for a more rapid handling of chalk and charcoal. But the "woman" image can be seen in the current exhibition in all its manifestations.

The drawings document the grim cycle of figure and abstraction that de Kooning made alternately during his career, beginning with precisely contoured pencil drawings of recognizable figures to powerful fetishism (late 1930s), and concluding with agitated, almost abstract, oil and ink sketches made in Springs, Long Island, in 1967.

The exhibition also "gives the world its first concentrated look at one of the most remarkable developments in recent art, the sculpture of Willem de Kooning", according to Peter Schjeldahl, who writes on de Kooning's sculpture in the catalogue. Created in spans of less than five years a number of these Abstract Expressionist sculptures are very small and, like some of the later drawings, were done with his 1940s style of...

In human beings, the aura is said to reflect, with the individual's moods and physical vitality. Most photographed the fingertips of a medical student before, during and after the consumption of 11 ounces of whiskey. The lights emitted from his fingertips grew brighter and rosier after every drink until he became "all lit up" and, thereafter, violently sick.

Dr. Gerald Jampolsky, a child psychiatrist in Kentfield, California, told me that he repeated the Moss experiments and achieved the same results.

"When we say a drinker's got a glow on, apparently we are speaking more truly than we realized," remarked Dr. Jampolsky.

The psychiatrist told me he was planning to take Kirlian photographs of the fingertips of children to see if he can determine when a child is daydreaming or actually concentrating on his books.

He is also planning a study of dying patients using Kirlian photographs, the psychiatrist said, to discover how long the aura continues after death and if the photographs reveal when a patient makes the unconscious decision to stop living and let go.

"Kirlian photographs of people in a hypnotic state reveal the unconscious decisions — that is, decisions of which the person is not aware at the conscious level — do affect the aura," said Dr. Jampolsky.

It is claimed by some researchers that disease causes characteristic changes in the aura — distortions, dark patches — long before symptoms may be detectable by orthodox medical means.

Cancer, for example, is said to cause a dark blob or shadow to appear in the aura at or near the site of the incipient tumor.

Since aura changes may occur before any physical signs develop, earlier diagnosis and perhaps cure become possible.

Though the new method of photography was invented more than 30 years ago by the Soviet man-wife team of Semyon and Valentina Kirlian, scientists do not know exactly what the aura is that it makes so dramatically visible.

Some scientists say it is a form of "biomagnetism," while others consider it an electrical "corona" effect, or due to "cold electron emission".

Whatever it is, the aura may play an important part in the science and medicine of the future.

Our National Arts Centre To Present Three Operas

OTTAWA — Canadians do not have to go to Europe or New York to enjoy fine opera!

The National Arts Centre will present entertainment of the highest quality with three operas to be staged during July. Abduction, intrigue and romance characterize the drama and musical theme in these operas, one of which will be sung in French, and two in English.

Mario Bernardi, the National Arts Centre's resident conductor and musical director, has chosen Mozart's The Abduction from the Seraglio for July 4, 6, 9, 11 and 13; Don Giovanni for July 15, 20, 24 and 27; and Rossini's Le Comte Ory for July 25, 27 and 30.

Some of the Canadian stars to be heard will be Colette Boky as La Contesse in Le Comte Ory, Joseph Rouleau as Olimbo, and Anna Cameron-Oakes as Blonde in The Abduction from the Seraglio. Metropolitan Opera stars taking part will be, Paul Plishka, in the role of Leporello in Don Giovanni, Christine Dandurand as Constanza in The Abduction from the Seraglio, and Rose Bed Etkes as the page in Le Comte Ory.

The Abduction from the Seraglio was Mozart's first major operatic success. The first English translation performance took place in December 1946 at the Metropolitan, where Pierrette Alarie was the star of Blonde.

Don Giovanni is one of the comparatively few great operas with success from its very first performance. It remains popular with the opera-going public, and praised and admired by connoisseurs.

Of Le Comte Ory, Berlioz wrote: "This musical richer! A wealth of delicious airs throughout, admirable ensembles, effects, dramatic intentions that have finally succeeded. Rossini's masterpiece in my opinion."

Win at Bridge

Justice doesn't triumph again

Sitting East at New York's Regency Club, he played his ace of clubs at trick one and noted the fall of South's queen.

He asked himself the key question: "How can I beat this hand?" Then he led his king of trumps!

Let's look at his analysis. Obviously South had several hearts. Four looked like the most probable number and West decided to play him for that. South would have to do something about any little hearts. If trumps weren't led South would be able to ruff two of them. A trump lead would stop one ruff.

Would the king of trumps play cost Ted a trump trick? Only if South didn't bother to ruff a heart. In that case all South's hearts would be losers. If South ruffed a heart he would have to do it with his queen of trumps and Ted's last trump trick would come back.

Without a trump lead, South would simply ruff two hearts, discard the last one on the king of clubs and make the game. After the king of trumps lead, South had lots of options but they all addid up to down one.

By Oswald and James Jacoby

In the early days of contract any world ranking would put Ted Lightner (inventor of the Lightner slam-lead convention) among the five or six best players in the world. Today, he has moved him out of that select class but among players of more than 80 he is surely entitled to the number-one rank.

THOMPSON, Man. (CP) — City council has approved funds for a citizens' committee to investigate the feasibility of Thompson playing host to the 1979 Canada Winter Games. The idea of having the Games here came from Premier Ed Schreyer as he closed the Manitoba Games in early March. He said Manitoba stood a good chance of becoming host province in 1979.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Sunday, June 16

Aries (March 21-April 19) You will derive some sort of material profit through a member of your family who wants to do something nice for you.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) You're in a cycle where your determination is equal to any challenge you may be faced with. A good time to push self-interests.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) One you have known for a long time is thinking about taking you into his confidence. It's in regard to a matter that could prove financially rewarding.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) A good, old-fashioned talkfest with a close pal will uncover some solutions for you that will be helpful this week.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) You're much admired by one who is saying lots of nice things about you to others. You'll be quite flattered when you learn their identity.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Select companions whose thinking and interests closely parallel yours. Those who don't share similar views will make you uncomfortable.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You can provide the missing insights today that will be extremely helpful to one close to you who can't find her own answers.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) In a close personal relationship, yours is the steadiest hand on the helm. Remember that if decisions are called for.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Today won't be devoted to all fun and games. There's a business matter that needs some discussion and reflection.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Conditions are stifling a bit. The result will be a stronger feeling of a bond that is very vital to you.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You won't enjoy just resting on your laurels around the house today. Instead you're likely to mend something that needs fixing.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) You're quite communicative, but not for idle chatter. Associate yourself with individuals that feel can teach you something valuable.

Monday, June 17

Aries (March 21-April 19) Happenings will shape up your financial foundations. You will also be fortunate in your business dealings.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Today you could charm your way through anything that confronts you. Others will be responsive to your dictates and suggestions.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Much will be gained through patience and persistence. It's to your advantage to lay things to relax at their natural speed.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Group involvements will afford you a great amount of pleasure today. Surround yourself with those whose company you enjoy.

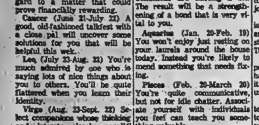
Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) Credit a coming your-way regarding an achievement you've been instrumental in bringing about. There is a bonus attached.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A practical idea you are now watching has merit. Don't let it die. See if you can find a way to use it for your benefit.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You tend to gain in a secret manner today through one with whom you share a strong emotional bond.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 22) You will have no difficulty in getting the co-operation from others when you need as this time. Just phrase your request pleasantly.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Something you will be working on will give you a great sense of satisfaction when it is finished. This will be a labor of love.



Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Quell is irritating you very special where matters of the heart are concerned. One you like is quite smitten.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) This is a good day to invite others to share the hospitality of your home. You will sparkle as a host or hostess.

Pisces (Feb. 20 - March 20) You are going to be the recipient of some news that should please you to a great deal. It involves something of a materialistic nature.

Historic Hall Damaged

British Commons Target for Bomb

LONDON (CP) — A bomb believed set by Irish terrorists exploded in an annex of the House of Commons during the morning rush hour today, setting a Parliament building on fire and injuring 11 persons, officials said.

There was considerable damage to Westminster Hall, oldest of the buildings in Westminster Palace, which houses Parliament.

The explosion which immediately sent hundreds of security men to guard other public buildings came just shortly before 8:30 a.m. as thousands of Londoners streamed into the city centre on their way to work.

It was the first such attack since Guy Fawkes's abortive gunpowder bomb plot 370 years ago.

One of those injured today, a woman, underwent an emergency operation. Most of the others were released from hospital after treatment.

Earlier, firemen had reported that some persons were reported missing but this could not be confirmed several hours after the blast.

Shortly before the explosion, a man with an Irish accent telephoned the Press Association, Britain's domestic news agency, to warn that a bomb would go off in the House of Commons in six minutes. The caller used a code word to identify himself as a member of the Provisional wing of the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

Scotland Yard's bomb squad was racing to the building when they heard the blast. . .

A police spokesman said the bomb fractured a gas main and started a fire that sent flames shooting high above the 14th-century St. Stephen's Chapel, near Westminster Hall. Dense smoke enveloped Big Ben for a time. The police said the bomb went off near a ground-floor canteen adjacent to the hall.

It was one of the most-airing strikes on the English mainland since the start of the Northern Irish conflict...Previous attacks have been made against government offices, the Old Bailey courthouse and army installations mainly in the north of England.

The injured were mostly Commons staff. Neither the Commons nor the Lords start their sessions until afternoon and few members of Parliament were on the premises.

Westminster Hall, built in 1097, is the oldest part of the palace and was originally the seat of Britain's highest court. It was the scene of the trial of Charles I, of coronation feasts and debates of early parliaments. It also is the place where Britain's sovereigns lie in state after death.

Windows at the front of the hall were blown in, but the giant stained-glass windows at the other end appeared undamaged, however. It was feared there was considerable damage to the hall's unique 13th-century timber roof.

More than a dozen fire engines fought the blaze as hundreds of persons stopped on their way to work to watch. The fire was reported under control an hour after the bomb blast.

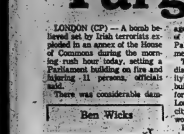
One police explosives expert told a member of Commons that the bomb contained between 15 and 20 pounds of explosive material.

Members of Parliament stood in pools of water amid a tangle of fire hoses and gazed in dismay at the fire damage.

David Steel, a member of Commons from the Liberal party, said there has been concern for some time about security for the Palace of Westminster.

"This is a very difficult building to protect because there are so many entrances," he said.

The last actual attack on the Commons came in 1971 when a spectator hurled a tear-gas grenade into the Commons chamber.



The last plot to blow up Parliament was by the rebel Guy Fawkes in 1604. Effigies of Fawkes now are burned every Nov. 5 in England to celebrate the failure of the plot.

After the tear-gas incident, parliamentary security was sharply tightened. Identity cards bearing color portraits were issued for staff and for those with business at Parliament.

But police on the gate still tend to rely on their memory for faces and passes are by no means always demanded.

"We have survived the fire of London, we have survived Hitler and the Great Plague," Deputy Speaker George Thomas commented sadly. "We have survived 900 years but these vandals, who have no feelings at all, have ended all that."

Nixon Offers Israel Help

JERUSALEM (AP) — The United States promised Israel today the same help in developing nuclear power that it plans to give Egypt.

President Nixon, in a joint communique with Premier Yitzhak Rabin, also reaffirmed the U.S. commitment to long-term arms shipments to the Jewish state.

Nixon and Rabin said their two governments will negotiate an agreement on co-operation in the field of nuclear energy technology and the supply of fuel from the United States under agreed safeguards.

"This agreement will in particular take into account its intention of the government of Israel to purchase power reactors from the United States" to provide electricity for Israel's rapidly-growing economy, the communique said.

Israel has had an agreement with the United States covering joint nuclear research for the last 13 years, and the communique said a provisional agreement will be made this month "on the further sale of nuclear fuel to Israel."

The wording of the communique paralleled that in which Nixon announced in Cairo three days ago that the United States will supply nuclear reactors and fuel to Egypt on a cash purchase basis.

The agreement had been forecast earlier today at a news conference by State Secretary Henry Kissinger.

Kissinger also sought to quiet suspicions in Israel and the U.S. Congress that the Egyptians will use the U.S. nuclear aid to produce nuclear weapons. He said the U.S. government will "make doubly sure there aren't any loopholes" in its agreement with Egypt.

The secretary said there never were any such questions about the similar agreement the United States has with nearly 30 other countries until India set off its first nuclear explosion last month. But Kissinger said India's nuclear program was aided by Canada, and Canada's safeguards are not as good as those of the United States."

France Explodes Atom Bomb

CANBERRA (AP) — France set off the first explosion in its 1974 nuclear test series in the South Pacific today, the Australian government reported.

The prime ministers of Australia and New Zealand protested.

The French government refused to comment. It never announces the individual tests, but said earlier this month that this year's series will be the last conducted in the atmosphere.

The Australian government said a nuclear device was set off today over the Mururoa Atoll, the French test site about 1,800 miles southeast of Tahiti.

Prime Minister Norman Kirk of New Zealand said he has told the ambassador in Paris to file a strong protest. And Prime Minister Trudeau of Canada criticized nuclear explosions in the atmosphere, saying in a speech in Toronto: "There is no need for any country to develop a nuclear explosive competence." He apparently was referring also to India, which set off its first nuclear blast May 18.

Jordan Also Promised Aid

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — The United States promised Israel today the same help in developing nuclear power that it plans to give Egypt and reaffirmed its commitment to long-term arms shipments to the Jewish state.

News Briefs

Kissinger Adamant

JERUSALEM (AP) — United States State Secretary Kissinger refused today to soften his threat to resign unless allegations that he lied about his involvement in White House wiretapping are proved false. "I stick by what I said a week ago, and now the Senate foreign relations committee is going to look into the matter," Kissinger told a news conference today.

Unionist Murdered

NICOSIA (Reuter) — Police have arrested seven Greek-Cypriots in connection with the machine-gun murder of a union official as he was being taken into custody by two police officers near Limassol Sunday. The policemen are in critical condition in hospital.

Candy Dearer

MONTREAL (CP) — An immediate increase in the wholesale price of Cadbury chocolate bars was announced today by the Cadbury Division of Cadbury Schweppes Powell Ltd. The increase is expected to bring the retail price of a 15-cent chocolate bar to 20 cents, the company said.

Stolen Plane Found

HAMILTON (CP) — This area's so-called phantom flyer has struck again. Police found an $18,000 Piper Cherokee plane in a farmer's field today, the third time a plane has been stolen in this area and landed mysteriously in a field in the last month. The single-engine plane set down in the field today is the same one stolen from the tarmac outside the Peninsula Air Service four weeks ago.

Pluralism Accepted

TORONTO (CP) — French Canada's struggle for cultural survival has benefitted every minority group, the retiring executive vice-president of the Canadian Jewish Congress says. Speaking at a dinner in his honor during the congress' 17th plenary assembly, Monroe Lawyer Saul Hayes hailed multi-culturalism as "a remarkable state policy of rejecting assimilation and accepting pluralism."

Band May Not Fly Flag

EDMONTON (CP) — A threat by the director of the Alberta All Girls Drum and Bugle Band not to show the Canadian flag at the World Cup soccer field in Munich next month is the latest blow in a sparring match with the federal government. Bob Magill, who said he formed the band four years ago "to draw attention to Alberta and to Canada," says if Ottawa doesn't come through with financial help for the 130-girl band they won't carry the Canadian flag during its Munich performance July 7.

Chess Champ Repeats

TORONTO (CP) — Peter Nurmi of Willowdale, Ont., won Ontario high schools chess championship Sunday night for the third consecutive year. The 16-year-old youth won six consecutive games to post the only perfect score among the 196 players from throughout Ontario. Homer Arvanitis of Hamilton finished second.

Quebec Strike Is Urged

MONTREAL (CP) — Louis Laberge, president of the Quebec Federation of Labor (QFL), called on all Quebec construction workers Sunday to halt work in an effort to have an industry-wide contract renegotiated to include cost-of-living adjustments.

The workers should "stay out, even if it's an illegal strike, an illegal stoppage, whatever," Mr. Laberge said.

Oil Exporters Consider Price

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — Representatives of the world's leading oil exporting countries neared a decision on oil prices today amid reports they will continue a freeze on the current prices for the next three months.

However, the representatives of the 13-member Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) were reported still discussing a possible price increase.

Reuters news agency quoted a leading OPEC delegate as saying the producers have agreed on a three-month price freeze and on a small additional tax on multinational oil companies. The delegate, who declined to be named, said the tax was imposed to curb the excessive profits of the oil companies, Reuters said.

The ministers met for three hours during the night and Iran's finance minister, Dr. Jamshid Amouzegar, said they were close a final agreement.

OPEC's secretary-general, Abdenabiqan Khene of Nigeria, told the ministers would meet again today.

The proposal for a price freeze was a compromise between a demand by Saudi Arabia, the world's biggest oil exporter, to roll back prices and the other 13 OPEC members' call in favor some kind of price increase.

Under OPEC rules any policy decision must be unanimous. Both Venezuela and Iran were outspoken in opposing the Saudi move for price cuts.

Even if the ministers make no change in the posted price, an artificial figure on which the exporting states calculate their taxes and royalties, conference sources said they may approve an increase in their tax rates.

OPEC froze the posted prices in January and extended the freeze for three months in March. Before the freeze, price quadrupled in a year's time to $11.65 a barrel, bringing the cost of a normal fuel crude to the oil companies to about $7.

Liberals Pledge Urban Transit Aid

TORONTO (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau today pledged a Liberal government to an urban transit, assistance scheme that would cost between $275 million and $300 million over the next five years and would have the federal government paying a considerable share of initial transit costs in cities.

The prime minister, enunciating phase two of the Liberal transportation policy for the July 8 federal election campaign, said:

—A Liberal government would pay the total cost of Canada-produced commuter vehicles and 50 per cent of the cost of facilities of new commuter systems that have the approval of federal, provincial and municipal authorities.

Aides said this assistance to bring people in from the suburbs of such major cities as Toronto, Montreal and perhaps Vancouver would cost the federal government about $50 million in the next five years.

—It would pay 25 per cent of the capital cost of Canadian-manufactured vehicles in federal-municipal approved public transit systems. $100-million project

Aides said this program for all major cities would cost about $100 million over five years.

—It would provide financial and other kinds of support to encourage Canadian industry to provide the right kind of equipment and municipalities to come up with total transit systems. Aides said this would cost $50 million in five years.

—The prime minister outlined the government's already announced policy on railway relocation with an offer to make the best use of railway rights-of-way for transit work as the final part of his nine-point transit program.

Aides said this feature would cost about $15 million over five years.

Sidney Farmers Say to Go North

Ontario Hydro should push its corridor for a proposed 500,000-volt transmission line further north and possibly use the existing Gatineau line right-of-way, a brief submitted to the Solandt Commission by a Sidney township farmers' committee states.

The document, written by Sidney beef farmer William Langstaff, maintains Hydro's preferred route will take good farm land out of production. If would also increase the cost of working land once transmission towers are erected.

Hydro's bulk power transmission line will feed the Oshawa area once lines are strung at approximately 110 miles from the Lennox Generating Station near Bath, east of Belleville.

Meetings

Public meetings that The Intelligencer has been notified of this week are:

MONDAY

Trenton town council meets 7:30 p.m. at municipal offices on Dundas St.

Belleville traffic and light committee meets 2:15 p.m. at municipal offices on Front St.

Hastings County Board of Education meets 7:30 p.m. at Education Centre, 156 Ann St.

TUESDAY

Prince Edward County council meets 7:30 p.m. at Shire Hall on Main St., Picton.

Belleville Parks Board meets 4 p.m. at municipal offices on Front St.

THURSDAY

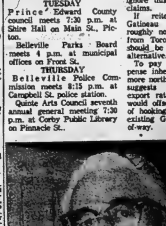
Belleville Police Commission meets 8:15 p.m. at Campbell St. police station.

Quinte Arts Council seventh annual general meeting 7:30 p.m. at Corby Public Library on Pinnacle St.

Through Sidney, Hydro's preferred route parallels the TransCanada Pipeline for some six miles before dropping into the third concession. It leaves the township crossing the Trent River, just south of Batawa.

By leaving the 220-kV Gatineau line, outside the study area, the brief maintains the provincial utility predetermined the scope of the environmental study undertaken by its consultants, Commonwealth Associates.

Sidney's committee also claims data used in the firm's computer analysis was outdated, further questioning the methods used in the selection of the route from the three originally proposed late last year.



"We maintain that Hydro, in its selection of three variations of one route, merely attempted to put farmer against farmer," states the brief, and continues, "knowing that any elected council could not take strong action to protect one route at the expense of alienating the voters on the other route."

If the route must go through prime farm land, it should follow lot lines.

"Through our region, they have chosen to completely ignore this plea," the brief claims.

It reiterates that the Gatineau line — running roughly north of Highway 7 from Toronto to Ottawa — should be considered as an alternative.

To pay for the extra expense inherent in building a more northerly line, the brief suggests Hydro boost its export rate for power. That would offset the added costs of hooking into parts of the existing Gatineau line right-of-way.

40 Years in Pulpit

Rev. Lorne C. Ball, minister of Centennial Free Methodist Church, marked 40 years in the ministry at a special service Sunday. The service was attended by a large group of well-wishers, including friends from Bracebridge, Toronto and Kingston, where Mr. Ball had served in previous years.

Election Brewing

Election fever is drawing closer and the candidates running in Hastings riding are taking their position to the people. One example of this occurred over the weekend with Liberal candidate Marie Kurchak explaining her views to members of the Royal Canadian Legion. Flanking Mrs. Kurchak are George Wilson, left and Mac Fraser.

All About Wheels

It seemed only natural that Mayor Robin Jeffrey, while welcoming national executive of Canadian Motorcycle Association, should take time to learn something about motorcycles of the pastime. Instructor is CMA president Jim Kelly, Hamilton, who led executive in weekend conference for first time outside major centre.

Piston Pushers Hosts For National Meeting

Recognition of the lengthy community service of a Belleville motorcycle club suddenly slipped into high gear during the weekend.

The Piston Pushers have been around for years and their community activities have varied.

But suddenly bringing its work into focus was a meeting of the Canadian Motorcycle Association's national executive at the Piston Pushers' Foxboro-area clubhouse.

The accolades came from both the CMA executive and community spokesmen.

But the biggest tribute was the event itself. It was the first time the steering group of the CMA — which governs motorcycle sport in Canada — met outside a major centre. The executive — its seven members scattered across country, Halifax to Vancouver — usually meets in big cities served by air routes.

However, drawn by the work of the Belleville-area club it decided to break with standard schedules for its annual spring Ontario region conference.

One sparkplug of curiosity was the motorcycle safety week pilot project organized by the Piston Pushers last month.

The executive was anxious to hear details on the results of the effort. For the project the club was joined by various city agencies, including police and recreation officials. It was aimed at heightening safety awareness among both motorcyclists, drivers and the general public.

The CMA officials were impressed to the point the local program could stimulate a national replica. Marilyn Bastedo, association secretary from Hamilton, reported Sunday as the conference wound up, the executive had decided to investigate the possibilities of sponsoring a national version of the plan.

The secretary said as an Ontario executive member she was "very proud" of the club's work.

Opening the session Saturday, CMA president Jim Kelly said the association noted the record of the Piston Pushers and hoped for "as active and good a club in each one of our communities across the County Structure To Be Discussed

Representatives from the city of Belleville and the town of Trenton will meet with members of the Hastings county Municipal Reform Committee to discuss a proposed study dealing with possible restructuring of the county.

Belleville and Trenton have approved the idea of a study but county council at its last meeting referred the matter to its municipal reform committee.

The meeting of representatives from the three municipal bodies will be held Tuesday, June 18 at the Sun Valley Motor Inn.

Representing the city will be Mayor Robin Jeffrey, along with Aldermen J.D. Corke, John Stock and Jack Ireland, city solicitor Arthur Purcell and public utilities manager Hell Britton.

Four Running In Hastings

The lineup of federal election candidates will be confirmed in the Quinte area today by 3 p.m.

That's the deadline, says Reg Dunham, Hastings riding returning officer, for all candidates to qualify their nominations.

Nominations or qualifications up to today have produced four candidates in Hastings: Jack Ellis, Conservative; Marie Kurchak, Liberal; Bob Sanders, New Democratic Party and Floyd Hawley, Social Credit.

Cycle Race On Tonight

There was only one damp feature to the weekend executive conference of the Canadian Motorcycle Association in Belleville.

The executive, which usually meets only in major centres across Canada, came to the Belleville area to view firsthand the projects of the Piston Pushers Motorcycle Club.

On the program was the annual Belleville dirt-track race run by the club for the past seven years at the Quinte Exhibition Grounds.

The event, which brings participation from top racing sportsmen from Ontario, Quebec and neighboring United States regions, was expected to draw 75-100 entries, said Ian Reilly, Piston Pushers president.

It was rained out.

But the race goes on tonight at 8 p.m. and Mr. Reilly expected little increase in the number of entries.

Prize money equals 40 per cent of gate receipts plus $250 donated by Castrol Oil.

Heart Fund Gains From Fun Fair

Four Belleville youngsters marched a first here Saturday when they organized a Fun Fair on the front lawn of a King George Sq. home. All proceeds — some $15 — will be donated to the Canadian Heart Foundation.

Gwen Brain, fundraiser for Belleville chapter worker, said Saturday, "It's the first of its kind that I've heard of, for the Heart Fund."

Mrs. Brain visited the four youngsters who organized Saturday's event.

The four children, sisters Cheryl and Crystal Morrison, 10, Julia Hadley, 8, and Janice Hannah, 10, set up tables to sell candies, baked goods, trinkets and books.

During the morning, the youngsters sold 100 10¢-cent tickets for a cake draw.

Gail Hadley, mother of Julia, said the youngsters received good co-operation from neighbors in rounding up toys to sell for the Fun Fair.

Originally, the children had planned to hold the fair to raise funds to help save the seals in the mouth of the St. Lawrence. But it was discovered no such fund existed.

Five-year-old Julia suggested the proceeds be given to the Heart Fund.

Julia's mother, Mrs. Hadley, canvasses for the foundation during its annual campaign.

Woodmen Will Meet in City

Belleville will be the scene of a convention of the Canadian Woodmen of the World. This is a fraternal benefit organization incorporated in Canada in 1892 and carrying licences in Ontario, west to the Pacific since that time. The convention will be held June 18, 19, and 20 at Sun Valley Motor Inn.

It is a society that provides life insurance at a very economical figure to its members and the children of its members.

The society is fully democratic and operates from its head office in London, Ontario, under its Act of Incorporation and the bylaws that are set down by the organizations' delegation to the convention held every second year.

Motorcyclist Hurt in Crash

A Belleville man is listed in "fair" condition in the intensive care unit at the Belleville General Hospital this morning following a car-motorcycle collision at the intersection of Queen Street and Bleecker Ave. early yesterday evening.

Thomas F. Wilkinson, 18, was driving his motorcycle south on Bleecker Ave., at 6.11 p.m. Sunday when a car driven by Joyce S. Morris, 25, of 181 MacDonald Ave., collided with it.

The Morris car was westbound on Queen Street at the time of the accident.

Wilkinson sustained multiple abrasions and broken ribs.

Damage was estimated at $875.

The Bishop Comes Calling

Distinguished visitor to Belleville-area Greek Orthodox community during weekend was Bishop Constantios Sotirios, head of Church's Canadian diocese. The bishop met Saturday at Holy Trinity Church council members including (from left) Peter Zagouras, Chris Giouroukos and John Zikopoulos.

Family Unit Nucleus of Society Says Greek Orthodox Bishop

The decline of the family unit in modern society has reached its ebb and is heading for renewal, says Bishop Constantios Sotirios, spiritual leader of the Greek Orthodox Church in Canada.

Bishop Sotirios believes a turning point has been reached in social attitudes that weakened the family as the traditional nucleus of society.

It's among themes being stressed by the young, recently-ordained spiritual spokesman as he visits the 200,000 members of his Canadian diocese — among them Greek Orthodox families in the Belleville area whom he met during the weekend.

The bishop's visit coincided with Father's Day and he chose the occasion to emphasize his message at a banquet given by the city's Holy Trinity Greek Orthodox congregation.

He is the first Canadian citizen to be ordained bishop of the country's Greek church communities. At 38, he also is the youngest bishop in his church's Canadian history.

The family spirit should "prevail" within the community and in society," said Bishop Sotirios in an interview.

"I think the nucleus of society is the family. Any long-term solution for social problems — such as with youth — has its source in the family."

Mounting divorce rates have been one indication of weakening family unit in recent years, says Bishop Sotirios.

In recent times, society has reached its "lowest point" as far as esteem for family life. But a "turning point" has been reached.

"I think, I believe, society will be healthy with stronger families," says the bishop.

His definition of a "strong" family: One that lives, works, prays and "discusses together to find solutions together."

He admits to being "very proud" of the family tradition within Greek Orthodox communities.

But all churches have something to offer each other, indicates the young churchman, who supports a form of ecumenism he calls "inspired co-operation".

While the Greek Orthodox church is not comparatively rich and without the resources of other religions, it has much to offer, he believes.

"We're rich in tradition, spirituality and mysticism," he says.

"We should be trying to sell what we have to others — and buy what other churches have for us."

Northern Builds Plant in West

Northern Electric Co. Ltd. has announced company plans to build a new manufacturing plant in Winnipeg that will employ about 70 people by the end of 1975.

The company, the third largest manufacturer of telecommunications equipment in North America, has plants scattered in 19 other cities in Canada. Belleville is the home of one plant, employing some 1,000 people.

The Winnipeg 36,000-square-foot plant, to be built on 4.14 acres, will house the manufacturing facilities for switching equipment components.

Five Are Injured In Rear-enders

Belleville police were called on to investigate two rear-end collisions that caused extensive damage and sent five people to hospital during the weekend.

Around 3.45 p.m. Saturday, police investigated a three-car collision on North Front Street that sent three persons to hospital with minor cuts and bruises.

Police said that cars driven by Maureen Keogh, 25, of 19 King George Square, by Leo Charles Woolley, 52, of 29 Elmer St. and by Keith Norman Cooney, 26, of 5 May Avenue, all collided on the south slope of the CNR overpass on North Front Street.

The Keogh and Woolley vehicles were stopped waiting for traffic when the Cooney auto came over the overpass, braked and went out of control, police said.

Total damage in the accident was $3,500. Mr. Cooney, his 19-year-old son, Christopher Keith Cooney, and Mr. Woolley all received minor injuries in the accident.

On Sunday afternoon, a three-car collision sent two persons to hospital with minor injuries.

Police said that a car driven by Marjorie Wood, 18, of RR 4 Belleville was stopped in front of a home at 73 Dundas St. East when a car driven by Douglas Dostaler, of RR 4 Belleville, collided with the rear of a car driven by Robert Burley, of Toronto, forcing it into the Wood auto.

No damage estimate was available for the accident but Mr. Burley and Gerald Fickie, 12, of 72 Dundas Street West received minor injuries.

Aiding the Cause

Canadian Heart Foundation Campaign Chairman Gwen Brain (second from left) lent support to the cause of raising money for heart disease research Saturday when she not only brought along a trinket to be sold by King George Square children but also bought a small item. Mrs. Brain and a friend, Miriam Gaskin (left), attended the Fun Fair organized by Crystal Morrison, 10, (centre) and three other children. Judy Newlands (right) helped push money raised during the day to some $15, all donated to the Heart Fund, by buying some of the candies on sale.

Nixon's Tour

President Nixon's Middle East mission may well be riding on the coat-tails of Henry Kissinger — and his success and just watched as the Communists engaged in their own pet pastimes — the killing of village chiefs and the machine-gunning of fleeing refugees: men, women and children.

The Nixon administration, which had no part in the early conduct of the Vietnam war, ended U.S. involvement there (Henry Kissinger deserves most of the credit for that top) it was, from the U.S. standpoint, the "peace with honor" which Mr. Nixon spoke of, for it was achieved from a position of strength, with no loss of face on either side. Indeed, let it be remembered, it attributes the Oriental mind in particular understands.

There comes to mind too an observation we understand was made by Winston Churchill: "Sir you don't have to be nice — you only have to be right." Without entering into the rights and wrongs of what went on in Vietnam — and there was plenty of both on all sides — that was achieved in large measure only by wielding the big stick.

Former Israeli Premier Golda Meir, told once that Israeli was "too militaristic," expressed this premise another way: "I do not want a nice, anti-militaristic, but dead, Israel," she said.

Overseas Links

Belleville's contacts with the rest of the world have always been extensive. For example, the country's exports include goods from industry here and city businessmen are frequently on the move abroad.

In recent years too our links overseas have been furthered to include student exchanges — those with Belleville's German "twin," the city of Lahr, and, under the auspices of Rotary, with South Africa and Australia.

In the fall a girl from Finland is due to begin a year's schooling in Belleville. Yet another link, again through Rotary, is the Rotary Foundation's group exchange program which recently saw a party of young businessmen from Australia in Belleville.

In preparation by District 707, to which Belleville belongs, is a Rotary Foundation exchange with Israel.

Glynn Reynolds, president of Rotary here, says that by the end of the month the club will have paid some $4,000 into the Foundation since it was established about 15 years ago.

Today, incidentally, the club is forging links closer to home. Members are in Keswick or Lake Simcoe for a day's recreation climaxed by a cook-out with their matched club, Trenton.

Belleville is fortunate in the forging of all these links with others at home and abroad. In this age of the "Global Village" the community is playing a strong role.

Twisted Rationale

A spokesman for the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine is quoted as saying: "I don't think we can achieve what we want other than by fighting."

Fighting? Do the Arabs consider the brutal murder of women and teenage boys and girls "fighting?"

It is political observations such as this, cynical and obscene, made in the wake of appalling acts of terror, that cast a shadow over any legitimate aspirations the Palestine Arabs may have.

Era Of The Computer

Public Sceptical As We Head Toward Cashless Society

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The cashless society, to most of us, is something that arrives just before pay-day.

Yet to many people in the business community, it is the logical next step in the ever-widening use of time-honored ways of transferring financial information and money.

Bankers eagerly await the day when sophisticated computers and telephone equipment will link closely the way for easy, instantaneous payments across thousands of miles.

Unfortunately, the public — and here it errs stubbornly — is wedded to cash, official documents, receipts and the like.

Nothing will be lost if we have to give. The bankers believe the computer represents the true financial future.

What's why they are spending $75 million annually to build up their computer operations, which are currently handled by perhaps 1,800 systems analysts and 3,000 other workers — programmers, technicians and so on — and by some 14,000 computer terminals in Canada's five biggest cities.

A good many of the bankers' corporate and individual customers are not yet to be convinced that any change is needed.

Throughout history, people have used paper — currency, contracts, cheques, etc. These pieces of paper represent control of money. In a form that is much more widely accepted than gold or precious metal.

In the eyes of the law, too, the old-fashioned ways are often the only acceptable ways. Getting the law changed to accommodate a computerized banking system won't be easy.

A built-in feature of the familiar system of payment by cheque is the "float." This, in effect, represents an interest-free loan for a couple of days while a cheque is in the mail. A good many companies and individuals have made a fine art out of paying as slowly as possible and receiving payment as fast as possible.

There is the widespread fear among people that they will lose their "freedom" — and perhaps their privacy — once they are reduced to a computerized account number.

Canadian banks have never been noted for their enthusiasm for public relations. They appear to have done little so far in the way of public consciousness-raising except occasionally to send out a vice-president to deliver an incomprehensible speech about automation to some obscure gathering.

Yet they could make a good case for the cashless society:

Some technologies it have... banks all over the world are adopting it, and Canada can't afford to ignore it.

...The old system is wasteful and inefficient, and may soon break down under the weight of the tremendous growth of financial business. Already our banks carry out 1,250-million fund-transfer messages each year.

...Losses from bad cheques are a serious problem — and could be reduced when the computers take over.

...The new system will pay high returns in the form of convenience. You'll be able to do your banking quickly, at almost any time you choose. No more painstaking decisions about which line-up to get into at the bank — a decision that always puts you in the slowest-moving line.

One basic fact the cashless society is already well established in Canada — the system of pre-authorized chequing. Bank payments of insurance premiums, mortgage instalments, mutual-fund purchases and other regular commitments. Canadians make about 30 million of these pre-authorized payments a year.

Another aspect is equally familiar — the practice, used by many corporate employers, of depositing their employees' pay cheques directly into their employees' payroll accounts at a nearby bank branch.

But instituting a fully computerized, cashless banking system in Canada poses bigger problems than, for example, in Scandinavia or Japan. Vast distances and sparse population age factors that will confine the computer centres to a few major Canadian centres for the first few years, for economic reasons.

In 1972, however, the banks took a major step toward the creation of a single, Canada-wide computerized system, when they adopted uniform standards for the interchange of magnetic tapes.

The interchange of computer tapes is as essential to the automated system as the cheque-clearing house was to the traditional system of banking.

By 1976, according to the banking industry's timetable, you will be able to carry out instant inter-bank transactions at any bank in the country through the "Banknet" communications network operated by an association of eight telephone utilities in Canada.

The following year, seven out of every 10 bank branches are to be connected to an on-line computer system — now largest branches, for example, are establishing them to eliminate delays in paper work.

How will the system affect you? If you are a bank customer (not everyone is) your will probably have a personalized, 4-digit, etc. — key that gives you access to all of your assets, and enables you to make instant payments to (and receive payments from) any other bank customer.

When you need cash ("cashless society" is not a term to be taken literally) just look for the nearest, automatic cash dispenser — at a branch bank, a supermarket, a hospital, etc. — and obtain it by inserting your card. In one sense, "cashless hours" will be a thing of the past.

The free "float," while your cheque is being delivered, will be another thing of the past.

Many of the big bank customers will know a greater degree of convenience, safety, and economy than ever before.

"ELECTION SERENADE"

Inflation Is Expected To Worsen

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Until the interminable election campaign is finally over and a government settles down to business, inflation and its associated problems will probably go from bad to worse.

Even though the consumer price index last month showed the sharpest rise in 25 years — 2.7 per cent, or an annual rate of more than 30 per cent — Messrs. Trudeau and Turner will obviously not take tough anti-inflationary steps that would cost them votes.

That means that for the time being, the Bank of Canada must continue its single-handed efforts to dampen down the fires of inflation by limiting the supply of credit. In theory, if there is less money in circulation, there is less spending — and therefore less inflation.

Unfortunately, the central bank's efforts don't seem to be successful. It could even be that they contribute to the problem by preventing business from obtaining bank loans to build new production facilities, and where more production would alleviate the shortages that help to cause inflation.

The latest survey showed that Canadian businesses were planning to increase this year's capital expenditures — that is, their spending on new plant and equipment — by 30 per cent.

This would place a heavy demand on the banking system for credit at the best of times. Today, with the Bank of Canada insisting on "tight money," it is an impossible demand.

The banks' ability to supply credit is largely determined by their Canadian dollar liabilities. A major component of those liabilities are Government of Canada deposits. As these deposits have fallen sharply this year — partly because of heavy redemptions of Canada Savings Bonds — the banks' deposit liabilities have been increasing at a year at an annual rate of only nine per cent.

"The Canadian banking system's ability to accommodate credit demands has been accompanied by a drying-up of bank liquidity, a search for funds by the banks at ever-rising rates, and consequent upward pressures on their prime lending rates," says J. A. Boyle, Canadian Bankers Association president.

Those with credit remaining rather tight for some months ahead, bankers will continue to favor the mortgage loan field — allocating, as best they can, these credit resources to the most insistent borrowers."

Surveys of capital-spending intentions have not always been an accurate indicator of what business will actually do.

In Britain, for instance, such a survey in mid-April revealed an almost total collapse of capital-investment plans that had seemed buoyant at the previous survey three months earlier.

The decision-makers in Canadian boardrooms could change their minds, too — especially if the government were to get tough about inflation and impose new controls on profits and prices.

It's more likely, however, that Ottawa will continue to invest its new plant and equipment in the extent of credit availability.

Inflation has taught business, as well as the rest of us, that it is cheaper to invest in a new building now than next year — and that dollars borrowed today can be repaid with cheaper dollars in the future.

French missionaries Marquette and Jolliet discovered the Mississippi River 301 years ago today — in 1673 — on a mission of exploration from Sault Ste. Marie. The explorers had explored Illinois and travelled down the Mississippi as far as the Arkansas River before turning back because of Marquette's poor health. He died in 1675 at age 40. The expedition was made because of Indian reports that the great river flowed south, perhaps to the Gulf of California, thereby providing a navigable route to China.

UK Inflation Curbs Stay on Books

Inflation and the means of containing it are shaping up as major issues in Canada's federal election campaign. Both Britain and the United States have had recent experiences in fighting wage and price controls as an anti-inflationary device. The results are related in the following stories.

By KEVIN DOYLE

LONDON (CP) — Britain's elaborate machinery for controlling prices and incomes, set up by the last Conservative government, has been officially condemned by Labor Prime Minister Harold Wilson.

It has been vilified by virtually every member of Wilson's cabinet, denounced as one of the most divisive social evils of the past decade.

But the controls remain in place, almost a year after the minority government since it came to power after the Feb. 28 general election.

Labor pledged during the campaign to dismantle all controls on incomes immediately after winning the election. The Tories' methods of holding down prices were to be torn away and replaced with what Labor leaders said would be a far tougher set of policies.

Neither objective has been achieved and there has been any apparent effort to start clearing away the control mechanisms.

Informed government sources say the basic explanation of why the incomes policy has not been dumped is that Labor fears the consequences of a sudden return to free-market bargaining.

Meanwhile, the government insists it is working on the development of a fairly vague program of controls.

Prices of fresh foods, imported foods, most rentals and many other vital goods proved impossible and politically difficult to control because of seasonal variations in costs of replacement stocks. A strong producer lobbies brought intense pressure for exemptions.

But instituting a fully computerized, cashless banking system in Canada poses bigger problems than, for example, in Scandinavia or Japan. Vast distances and sparse population age factors that will confine the computer centres to a few major Canadian centres for the first few years, for economic reasons.

In 1972, however, the banks took a major step toward the creation of a single, Canada-wide computerized system, when they adopted uniform standards for the interchange of magnetic tapes.

The interchange of computer tapes is as essential to the automated system as the cheque-clearing house was to the traditional system of banking.

By 1976, according to the banking industry's timetable, you will be able to carry out instant inter-bank transactions at any bank in the country through the "Banknet" communications network operated by an association of eight telephone utilities in Canada.

The following year, seven out

On the incomes side, the evidence is somewhat clearer. Earnings during 1973, exclusive of overtime, increased by only about 2.5 per cent compared with the rate of nearly 15 per cent prevailing before the freeze.

But in a social sense, the incomes policy had a less beneficial effect. They led to an almost constant antagonism and bitterness between the unions and government, finally producing the devastating coalminers' strike and energy crisis earlier this year which was one of Heath's main reasons for calling a snap election.

Under the Tory program, a price commission was set up to hear all requests for price increases. The commission had power to refuse those increases which would have boosted a firm's net profit margin above the level attained in the best two of the last five years.

The commission argues that it refused proposed price increases totalling £800 million (about $1,920 million) and that this was a direct saving to consumers.

But critics reply that firms deliberately asked for far more than they needed, expected to get what they were charged under normal conditions and that the commission was doing little more than denying these unreasonable, excessive gains, something a free market would have done just as effectively.

Because increases now are limited to about 10 per cent a year, But many employers are allowed a clause in their contracts which guarantees them a further increases once the cost of living passes seven per cent for the year, a point passed some time ago.

This, say the critics, means that controls themselves have become inflationary.

"But," says David Watt, political editor of The Financial Times, "both Labor and the government nor the opposition can think of anything to replace them when the real magnitude of the problem we are facing."

All But Out Of Control in U.S. Too

By BRUCE LEVETT

WASHINGTON (CP) — Labor and management in the United States have all but given up on controls, which they say didn't want to live with wage and price controls, are in the throes of determining how to live without them.

As applied in the U.S., such controls appeared to work in some cases but in the long run, they failed to halt the country's worst outbreak of inflation since the Korean war.

As a result, the spectre of runaway inflation here — as it is in Canada — is shaping up as a key election issue.

As John Kenneth Galbraith, the Canadian-born Harvard economist and former President Nixon is in more trouble for failed economics than failed burglaries."

As wage and price controls gradually ended at the end of April and the administration dismantled the mandatory machinery in both areas, the autonomous Federal Reserve Board, the country's money managers, imposed a form of tight money featuring high interest rates as the only means to control credit and cooling the economy.

Congress debated whether controls should be revived to fight inflation which still persists but President Nixon's economic co-ordinator maintained that controls are useful only in limited circumstances.

Co-ordinator Kenneth Rush argued that, instead, prolonged economic distortions and misallocation of essential production. Inflation would be fought through monetary and fiscal policies, he said.

Some economists are asking, however, whether all this effort would work in new inflationary pressures. The critical question is how to increase supplies in an era of ever-increasing shortages.

Barry Bosworth, research associate at the Brookings Institution, a Washington think-tank, believes that wages and price controls which were effective in a previous era would not work today.

"We have to ride out a period of a 6-to-8-day price freeze increases," he says. "And the price rises are needed to develop capacity."

Some economists contend that even the hint that controls may return can have an inflationary impact.

Industry may be inclined not only to price their products to reflect in full measure the rising cost of ordinary materials but might also go after even higher prices as a hedge against the time when controls may reappear.

Labor, lauded by everyone from the president down for past restraint, is expected to act in a similar manner.

The failure of wage and price controls under the Nixon administration is a strong one.

Phase 1: This was a 90-day freeze, instituted in the summer of 1971 on the advice of economists from former treasury secretary John Connally. Rents, wages, prices and rents and was met with enthusiasm and public support.

Phase 2: This lasted 14 months, November, 1971, to January, 1973, and held consumer prices to increases of 3.6 per cent. Food prices, however, began rising sharply again toward the end of this phase.

Phase 3: George Shultz replaced Connally as treasury secretary and introduced phase which killed most mandatory controls, replacing them with voluntary guidelines. Shultz later referred to Phase 3 as "the greatest failure in the history of economics." Nixon went back to a 60-day price freeze to try to stem the inflationary onslaught.

Phase 4: This was the toughest control program of all, yet failed to halt inflation: Frustrated by the ineffectiveness, administrators have been decontrolling the economy early this year. This program, however, generally credited with causing explosive wage increases.

Tweed Drowning

Early-morning Swim Ends in Woman's Death

TWEED (Special) — A 25-year-old Willowdale woman, visiting her parents in Tweed for Father's Day, was drowned in the Moira River early Sunday when she fell from a breakwater and was swept over the mill dam in the village.

Drowned was Mrs. Marion Edith Walker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bachelier.

Police said the woman and her husband David went for an early morning swim in the river. The accident occurred about 3:30 a.m.

Provincial police divers searched from 8 a.m. Sunday until mid-afternoon. They located the woman's body in a hole in the river about 100 yards downstream from the mill dam.

3 Escape Drowning

TWEED (Special) — Three Toronto-area people, including a 13-month-old baby, may have narrowly escaped drowning in the Moira River at the northern limit of the village when their car went out of control and slammed into a tree just inches from the bank of the river.

Police said a compact car driven by Sandra Ann Pitpers, 31, of Burlington, was northbound on Highway 37 about mid-afternoon when the car went off the highway, ripped out two guide rail posts and was stopped by the tree at the river bank.

All three persons in the car, including the baby, and Pat Pitpers, 32, of Uxbridge, were treated for cuts and bruises. The car was a write-off.

In another area weekend accident, $3,000 damage resulted to two cars in a rear-end collision Sunday west of Marmora.

Those said Edith May Waldron, 50, of Wellandport, Ont., was weekend when her station wagon was struck from behind by a car driven by Cristam Wayne Douglas, 18, Kingston.

The woman suffered a forehead cut, while a passenger in the Douglas auto, Laura Douglas, 16, Kingston, received a gash near her eye which needed more than 40 stitches.

Early Saturday a Tweed man, 67-year-old Demore Edgar Bailey, was fatally injured in a single car accident on Highway 37 at Martin's Hill. The car went off the roadway onto the shoulder, skidded into a ditch, went through a farm fence and ended up against a piece of farm machinery.

POINT TRAVERSE — A banded pigeon turned up at the home of Martin Frize, RR 2, Picton, Saturday.

Terry Humberstone, Brighton, natural resources ministry employee says the banding suggests the bird may be a U.S. racing pigeon lost in a storm.

Since pigeons never fly across an open lake, but fly around it, it is believed that the bird got off course during a recent storm.

A Happy Home Is a Chimney

WELLINGTON — A pair of wood ducks have successfully hatched 12 ducklings in the chimney of a honey house, owned by Wilfred Marvin of RR 1, Wellington.

It's the second chimney-nesting of the species this summer in Prince Edward County — but the only successful hatching.

With hollow trees on the decline — the species' natural nesting site — wood ducks are accepting man-made nesting boxes erected in recent years by the Prince Edward Region Conservation Authority and the natural resources ministry.

James Ives, ministry conservation officer, suggested Mr. Marvin remove the ducklings from the chimney shortly as a vertical climb of 12 feet up the slippery structure would be perhaps impossible for the ducklings. The duck-lings are healthy.

Dodds Honored, Top Medal

CHERRY VALLEY — The Ontario Horticultural Association, with its 46,000 members, had its annual awards and presented last week at the 68th annual convention held in Niagara Falls.

This year, the unanimous choice as recipient of the top award, the Silver Medal, was well-known Prince Edward County horticulturist and community worker, Phil Dodds of Cherry Valley, association past-president of and secretary-treasurer of the 588-member society in Prince Edward County.

Museum's Don McDermaid Shows Antique Wooden Skates

Bigger Museum Opens for Summer

PICTON — The County Museum in Picton opened its doors to the public for another season this past weekend.

In the old Anglican Church here, the museum intends featuring a greater variety of Picton-manufactured items, says Don McDermaid, tour conductor of the museum.

Such items as a D. J. Barker kitchen range and pot-bellied stove have been added recently and more items are planned. It's hoped a program will be initiated this summer to rotate many exhibits so the display can be changed during the summer.

It is hoped a new section may be opened within a few weeks. The chancel, added to the church in 1864 is currently undergoing renovations.

The plain red, blue panes of the original window in the chancel have been replaced by a stained glass window, gift of the late, long-time Picton Mayor Harvey J. McFarland.

Museum supervisor is Rose Marie Metcalfe, daughter of well-known county historiographer, Willis Metcalfe. Miss Metcalfe has had considerable experience in the field of museum research, display and cataloguing. For six years she was employed by the federal government's Indian Affairs and northern development ministry in underwater research.

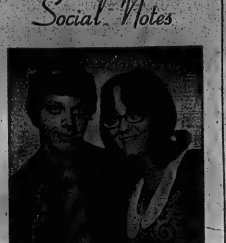
Quinte Cuisine

Originally from Montreal, John Turner came to Belleville by way of Thompson, Manitoba. He's been here now for five years, teaching mathematics at Centennial Secondary School. Mr. Turner enjoys entertaining friends for dinner, and likes to make extraordinary dishes which can be prepared beforehand so that he can sit and visit with his guests. Martini Stew is one he recommends, as an easy, unique and delicious meal.



Martini Stew

3 lbs. beef chuck
½ cup and 2 tsp. flour
1 tsp. lemon pepper
½ tsp. salt
2 cups sliced onions
2 cups sliced carrots
2 cups sliced fresh mushrooms
2 cloves garlic, minced
⅔ cup dry vermouth
¼ cup gin
1 cup unthickened consommé
Oz beef in bite-size chunks.

Mix beef chunks, flour, pepper and salt.
In a separate bowl mix onions, carrots, mushrooms and garlic.
In a casserole, place alternate layers of meat and vegetable mixtures. Over each layer pour gin, dry vermouth and consommé.
Cover and bake three hours at 225 degrees.
Serve with buttered noodles.

Ann Landers

Terminally Ill Prefers Death with Dignity

Dear Ann Landers: This is an answer to Argus-Eyed in Michigan, who criticized you for supporting "Death With Dignity." I have just had surgery for cancer and perhaps Argus might be interested in my thoughts.

As I lay here in the hospital after learning the bitter truth (terminal case—no hope), I wept for three hours, not because I am going to die but because of what medical science can do to keep me alive.

I lie here thinking of the money that will be wasted on me, money that could be used by my family for constructive purposes.

I am 70 years old. I had a happy childhood and a wonderful life. I spent nearly 50 years with a great husband and we raised a fine son. The doctors tell me I will have some "good" weeks when I recover from the surgery, perhaps several, but the cancer has gone too far and I cannot survive. When the pain becomes insufferable, I dearly wish the law would permit some kindly doctor to put me to sleep.

The best I can do now is to put my request in writing (and I will surely do so), asking that no extraordinary measures be taken to keep me alive. I will permit no further surgery or medication except pain-killers.

Argus said, "Once this sort of thing gets started there will be no limit to what can be put to sleep." What an absurd statement. There are ways to write into the law protective provisions against murder. Is it humane to keep people like me alive to suffer when we wouldn't be so cruel to a beloved pet. Thank you for your concern, Ann.—M.P.

Dear M.P.: I must, once again, make it clear that I am not in favor of "mercy killing" (euthanasia), but I am strongly opposed to keeping terminally ill patients alive. To put it more bluntly, I feel it is an indignity to refuse to permit them to die, by injecting needles, inserting tubes and using mechanical equipment.

Ask your doctor to load you up with as much pain-killer as you need, dear. And be sure to let your family know exactly how you feel. Too many terminally ill patients do not discuss this subject with their loved ones—and they should—openly and honestly. It can be a great release of tension for all concerned. My prayers are with you and God bless.

Dear Ann: Three years ago I became pregnant. My boyfriend was only 18 and still in high school. Don had no money, no diploma and no job. He told me he really didn't want to get married and I couldn't blame him. But my parents hounded him unmercifully and we were married one month before our baby was born.

This marriage is a nightmare. Don has been off work more than on. I have to take the child and go to my parents' house to get a decent meal. Don treats me rotten and ignores his son.

I am worried about the child. He is either in a depressed mood or so wild I can't handle him. My folks don't believe in divorce. What should I do?—See

Dear See: You made the mistake of letting your folks push you into this miserable marriage. Don't make another mistake by allowing them to keep you locked into it.

Your child needs counselling and you need a lawyer. If you don't do something about unwinding from this tragic mess soon, you'll need a doctor for your ulcers, migraines or whatever form the anxiety takes.

Dear Ann Landers: I need some answers on adultery. Can you help me? You've heard the story many times. After 18 years of marriage the husband has an affair with a young girl. The marriage has been good, generally speaking. They have well-adjusted, independent children. The wife has kept herself attractive and interesting. The husband insists he has never loved anyone but her.

In spite of all this, the husband thinks his little fling was not such a terrible thing. He wants his wife to excuse him on the grounds that all his friends and co-workers have had affairs and nobody was hurt.

Question: Should I accept this and make the best of it? How many times should a wife forgive and forget?" How can she be sure he means it when he says he is through playing around?

I am very much in love with my husband and will do whatever is necessary to save my marriage—if he thinks it's worth saving.—Tormented

Dear Tormented: I hate to sound like a broken record, but here I go again: Ask yourself this question: "Will my life be better or worse without him?" In other words, dear, what are your alternatives?

My hunch is you'd better hang in there and let your husband know you are really willing to forgive and forget. And when he sure you forget about what it was you forgave him for.

Fall Fashion Forecast '74

Long... Leggy... Curvy, Too

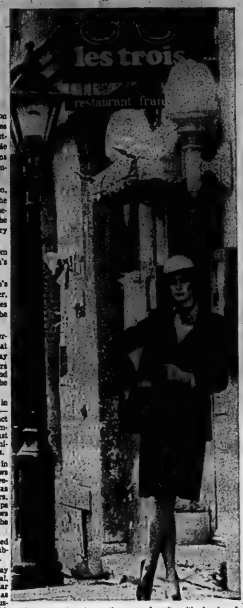
MONTREAL (CP) — Fashion editors from the United States and Canada gathered in Montreal Saturday to view capsule showings of the fall collections of 22 Montreal fashion designers.

The fashion presentation, known as Montreal Mode, is the third annual promotion of Quebec designers sponsored by the Quebec department of industry and commerce.

Garments shown range from furs to loungewear, from men's suits to ladies evening gowns.

The silhouette in women's wear for the fall is looser, softer and longer, with hemlines either two inches above the knee or calf-length.

Fabrics include tweeds, jerseys that cling, chiffons that ruffle and stretch lace. Day dresses feature droop shoulders and blouson tops. Big skirts and smock tops are also part of the fall look.



Shirt styles also show up in dresses, suits and pant suits—although there was a distinct move away from the heavy emphasis on pants evident in past seasons and a shift to the feminine look of dresses and skirts.

Trims are important in clothes for the fall. Fur shows up on coats, jackets and evening dresses. Seam piping was used in outline droop shoulders, while patch pockets with flaps and leather patches on elbows also highlighted garments in the collections.

Loungewear emphasized sheers, jerseys and stretch fabrics with ruffles and applique.

Fur fashions for women stay away from the traditional double-breasted, notched-collar coat. Long-hair furs such as lynx, fitch, opossum, fix, muskrat and raccoon mingled with mink and sealskin.

Morty broadens the shoulderline of his wine wool suit with bands of matching velvet at the shoulder seams, puts a matching vest on top of the front buttoned skirt. From the Fur Merry collection, the look is put together with a striped shirt and matching hat.

Marjolie Fleury re-creates the jack in her winter cape collection for Sport Togs. Using ancient Indian embroidery patterns as inspiration, she braids the yokes and hoods of dark wool capes, adds tassels of multi-color ribbon. Price: about $100.

Francine Vandelac's knitwear collection is a dazzle of color and pattern. At left, she fluffs wool into a flattering collar, zigzags it into an open cardigan of many colors over plain pants. At right, she puts a ballsy, belted, buttoned cardigan over a chevroned skirt.

Snags and Bags Featured

OTTAWA (CP) — Pantyhose snags and bags are a feature of rare highly for touch and sameness in the wear trials, the Consumers' Association of Canada.

Only one brand—L'Eggs—lived up to its claim of fitting all figure sizes comfortably, the association reported Wednesday.

However, the brand didn't appearance in the wear trials. Cheaper brands will perform favorably on certain figure types, CAC says. Found acceptable for medium and large figure types were Whisper, Simsall, Petite Belle, Young Flair and Maybelle in that order.

Drinker Lonely, Frightened

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I am doing a poorly paid job so I am forced to help out at a night club on week ends, which gets me drinking. What with the tranquilizers and sedatives my psychiatrist gives me, I become very depressed. Drinking is the only thing that helps, but the hangovers are terrible.

The recent letter to your column from the woman who was living with someone who beat her reminded me of my ex-common-law wife, whom I still love. Everything reminds me of her. But who wants a man with bad nerves!

Please tell me how I can learn to control my thinking and help my grown son, who lives with me. We eat the same old warmed-up casseroles and don't go anywhere.

Paranoid.

Dear Paranoid: You have considerable insight; but I am suspecting that you would like to blame your problems on other people, or circumstances beyond your control. You need help in facing the music about yourself; in starting the slow and painful process of taking hold and gaining some strength.

If you treated your common-law wife badly, yet still care for her, it may not be too late to make amends; love is powerful, once you have learned self-discipline.

How can I warn you enough about the perils and pitfalls of drugs and alcohol? Get back to your doctor; join A.A. Make an effort to do something constructive.

Men. Can milk really give you extra vitality?

Too few men realize the nutritional powers of milk as a food, and the resulting big contribution it can make to an adult male's vigour. Read why milk is, indeed, a man's drink...not just a child's.

Nature's most nearly perfect food.

Milk is just about the best all round package that Nature has ever come up with: a source of more nutrients you need, in better proportion, than any other single food.

You didn't know that, did you? Well, you've got plenty of company. Many adults think milk is only for children.

This idea is wrong and needs correcting. No one ever outgrows the need for milk.

Throughout all adult life, milk contributes significantly to the health and vitality of the man who drinks it regularly.

Increased vitality means increased enjoyment of life.

No man anywhere lives under greater pressures than the North American male. Ours is probably the fastest, most competitive society that has ever existed.

In short, it takes a lot out of you. Increasing your vitality level, therefore, can help you give it all you've got...because you'll have more "got" to give it.

An extra resource of stamina to draw on when the going gets tough.

Or of pep for leisure activities. (Lives there a man with soul so dead that he can't think of interesting things he could do with some extra drive at his disposal?)

Every glass of milk you drink gives the kind of solid nutritional support your body needs.

To help you have stamina to zip through the "must" parts of your day...with vigour left over to enjoy the fun parts.

Milk as part of an adult male's fitness programme.

Powerhouse though it is, don't expect milk to work miracles. Especially alone.

Robust health only results from a sensibly balanced kind of life. Enough sleep. Enough physical activity and exercise. Enough of the right foods.

Meat-and-potato men, this means you. You also need to eat fruits and green vegetables, cereals and milk. Every single day.

And milk. Too important a food to be ignored by any adult desirous of achieving health and fitness.

Nutritional facts about milk.

Milk provides many nutrients essential to adult health—and, importantly, provides them in a balance correctly proportioned to the body's needs. Milk is rated an excellent dietary source of NO LESS THAN FIVE essential nutrients:—

Calcium. Adult bones and teeth continue to need calcium to stay in good shape.

Protein. A very important health factor. Not many people realize that milk provides high quality protein.

Riboflavin. Another factor in maintaining adult health.

Vitamin A. Milk is an excellent source of this important vitamin.

Phosphorus. Another factor needed to maintain the health of adult bones and teeth.

In addition to these five, milk is a good dietary source of THIAMIN. In most cases VITAMIN D has been added in Ontario.

This is why milk has earned the description of "Nature's most nearly perfect food". And why it is so important that adults realize that they, too, need milk. Each day.

Getting back into the milk habit.

Relax. You don't have to revolutionize your way of life to enjoy the extra vitality that milk can help provide.

All you have to do is make room for it somewhere in your daily food intake.

You can add a glass of milk to whatever you have for breakfast. Or take a midafternoon milk-break instead of a coffee-break. Or have a soothing nightcap of milk. Or drink it with a meal, any meal.

Just remember that EVERY DAY is what it takes to get the most out of milk.

So that milk can help you get the most out of life.

Yes, you. A man who thought you'd long outgrown it.

Fastball Tournament Produces Two Local Grand Champions

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

Rain, rain go away, come back some other day.

That's what many fastball fans were saying last night at Almeda Park.

After six and a half innings of the Grand Championship game of the Fastball Tournament the clouds burst and rain poured on the diamond sending the capacity crowd home.

The tournament regulations stated that the Championship game had to go seven of the stipulated nine innings before it could be considered complete.

As a result of the rain the game was registered incomplete.

Inevitably the tournament has no winner, but ironically it has two champions.

The two "A Finalists of the three day affair, Howard and Robert Printing and Rollin's Construction, decided it would be best if they split the prize money, both being called the tournament champions.

The tournament sponsor Mel Eckford commented, "Supposing one of the finalists had of been from out of town. The only other time I could have hooked the field is best Saturday morning. You couldn't very well have asked a team from Toronto or the States to come all the way up here for one game."

By the, two teams used the hypothetical supposition as a guide and decided that they should each get $200 of the $400 championship money, have both their names inscribed on the Formosa Softball Championship Trophy and call the whole thing quits.

Rollin's had scored a run in their half of the seventh inning to take a 4-3 lead, but Howard and Robert didn't get an opportunity to play their half of the seventh. So the game reverted to the sixth inning with the score 4-3.

Certain things were decided, though, despite the downpour.

Wayne McTaggart was selected the Tournament's Most Valuable Player and Bob Ethier was awarded the Tournament's Most Valuable Pitcher.

McTaggart, in four games and seven times at bat collected four hits, including a home run, scored three runs and had two rbi's to lead Rollin's offensively. Wayne was also a key defensive player for the Constructionmen through his play at third base.

Larry Mowery, of Trenton Augar's, was McTaggart's closest competition for the MVP award. Mowery crashed two homers in the tourney and led his team all the way from an offensive standpoint.

Dave Stalmon of Belleville and Robert, also received honorable mention in the MVP category.

There was no doubt in the judges' minds as far as the Most Valuable Pitcher was concerned. It was Bob Ethier all the way. Ethier threw two consecutive games for Howard and Robert and choked the opposition to bits.

His first win was a one hitter and his second a two hitter. Bob did not walk a man in either contest.

Rollin's played two games to get into the Grand Championship defeating Maynard 5-4 in the first and Bardon Supplies 8-4 in the second.

Howard and Robert played three games prior to the Championship. They beat Cobourg TAB 5-1, Ellis Juniors 10-0 and Dwolin Motors 5-0.

The only other thing the rain didn't wash away was the Consolation Championship. Cobourg Tam's Auto Body (TAB) won that deciding game 7-3.

Al Ferguson took the loss on Auger's mound giving up 10 hits, fanning five and walking none.

Tam Low singled three times for the winners and Al Buchan added two more to lead the attack.

Heavily bruised and Jim Clemens weighed twice for Trenton.

Tournament sponsor, Eckford, was overwhelmed and overjoyed by the support and assistance he received from everyone throughout the three-day affair.

"Thank you everyone," he said, "we had enough rain that it's already to wash out a swimming competition. I couldn't have done it without everyone's help."

Four Belleville Youths On Regional Squad

By MIKE BRAWDSHAW
Sports Staff

The Eastern Ontario Regional Soccer Team, for boys under 21 players, were held Saturday at OSD Belleville.

Four cities in Eastern Ontario participated - Belleville, Kingston, Trenton and Peterborough.

The purpose of the Games was to select an under 21 team to represent the region at the provincial tournament.

Among the 13 regular players appointed to the Eastern Ontario team were Belleville's Harris Nesterevski, a forward, Peter Miller, a forward, Dario D'Anna, a winger, and Tom Maxwell one of the four reserves. All 17th player was also chosen to the team, in case of injury to any players. Bruce Mohr, from Brighton, was selected to the team, but will not officially be placed on the player list unless something should happen to any one of the first 16 selections.

Players for the team were chosen through their showing in exhibition games Saturday.

"Naturally we missed taking some of the good players," said the convenor of under 21 teams in Eastern Ontario, Harry Pollard, "there are probably some players that shouldn't have been left off the list."

"There just isn't enough time in one afternoon to properly analize this great a number of players," added Pollard.

Next year the convenor says he would like to see the selection done over a two week period, rather than all at once.

Other players on the team are Dimitri Senis and Jeff Jackson, both goalkeepers from Kingston, Tony Valente a full back from Kingston, Ken Hudson a full back from Ottawa, Eric Ericson and Tom Becker both half backs from Ottawa, Rob Duncan and Alex Graham both halfbacks from Peterborough, James Kerr a centre forward from Ottawa and three other reserves, Jim Martin and Austin McCabe of Kingston and Scott. Ogilvie of Peterborough.

Pollard headed the selection committee for the Eastern Ontario squad. He was assisted by Dennis Bradley from Kingston, Gerry Hastings, from Peterborough, appointed as the team's assistant coach, Mark Bachan, from Peterborough appointed as the team's coach, and Bob Watson and Manuel Montes both from Belleville.

The Eastern Ontario team will participate June 29-30 and July 1 at the Provincial Regional Games in Hamilton.

Six areas of the province will be represented — Central, Southern, Western, Eastern, Northern and Northwestern.

The purpose of the provincial tournament is to allow the Ontario Selection Committee an opportunity to update the Ontario Under 21 Soccer Squad.

Players are chosen from across the province to play for the Ontario team which will participate in the 1976 Olympics.

Consecutive Woodstock Championships for SACO

For the first time in the 11-year-old history of the Woodstock Peewee Softball Tournament, a team has won it for two consecutive seasons. The team was the Belleville SACO Peewees, who took the tourney with four wins in four tries on the weekend.

They took their first game of the four Saturday morning, behind the 2-hitter, 13 strikeout pitching performance of Andy Roszil. They dumped Oak 9-2, to move into the A Championship side of the tournament.

The winners collected seven hits, including two each by John Henry and Bob Hedge in recording the victory. Ron Bigley, Darrell Colman and Dave Gee had the others.

Belleville moved to the semi-final of the tourney with a 5-4 win over St. Mary's, their biggest winning margin of the day.

Ron Bigley, Andy Roszil, and Tim Soule all shared the work of the SACO rubber, combining for six whiffs and three walks.

Clarence Brookema had two doubles to pace the winners, with seven other hits, all singles, being collected by the Belleville team.

SACO could only put together five runs on 10 hits in the semi-final game, but they were enough to take the victory and move to the championship game.

Tim Soule fired the win, giving up six hits, while whiffing 12.

Bob Hedge had a double and wo singles to pace the attack, with Coldman stroking a double and single and Henry a pair of singles.

Belleville was outhit in the final contest by a 5-4 margin, but burned the scoring ground on Sarnia, 4-3.

Ron Bigley had a double, with Henry, Roszil, and Coltman adding singles for the only hits Belleville could muster. They scored two runs in the first and third innings to take the win.

Tim Soule was once again the winning pitcher, giving up five hits, fanning 12.

Larry Thompson cranked a homer to lead the winner's attack with a two run blast in the fifth inning to wrap the game up. Cobourg got some help from Maynard as the losers had seven errors.

Maynard was knocked out of the tournament and Cobourg advanced to the Consolation final against Trenton Auger's.

CHAMPIONSHIP ROUND

HOWARD AND ROBERT 1 — ELLIS JUNIORS 0

Bob Ethier came on with a strong one hitter for the winners. The single by Calvin Pope in the third inning was the only thing that stood between Ethier and a perfect game. Ethier struck out 18 batters.

Incredibly enough the losing pitcher, McMurray, only gave up four hits two of which were singles to Scott Reid, Reid drove in the winning run.

The Juniors were knocked out of tournament action and Howard and Robert advanced to the semi-final.

ROLLINS 5 — BARDON 4

Rollins scored five times off Bardon starter Jamie Baxter in the first inning before Wayne McConnell came on to complete the game.

Glen Carleton cranked a triple and a single for the winners and Ralph Pass added three singles.

Rollins got a by into the Championship final and Bardon's were knocked out of competition.

HOWARD AND ROBERT 5 — DEVOLIN 0

Bob Ethier once again threw for Howard and Robert pitching his second consecutive game in the tournament. Ethier allowed just two hits and fanned 11 batters. Again it was the two hits that stood between Ethier and a perfect game.

The winners scored four runs in the first inning to ensure his win. Wayne Woods was top man at the plate for Howard and Robert. He knocked two singles.

Devolins were knocked out of tournament play and Howard and Robert advanced to the final against Rollins.

CONSOLATION CHAMPIONSHIP

COBOURG TAB 4 — TRENTON 1

Al Fenton pitched Cobourg to victory fanning 14 Auger's batters and not giving up a walk.

Tom Love gave Fenton all the help he needed punching in three singles, Terry Burnham added a pair of singles.

For Auger's it was Larry Mavety with the big hit of the game, a sixth inning solo home run and Trenton's only score. That was Mavety's second homer of the tourney.

Cobourg took home Consolation honors and Trenton was Consolation runner-up.

A CHAMPIONSHIP

Howard and Robert and Rollin's Construction played six and a half innings of their best before the rain came. Unfortunately, tournament rules state teams have to complete seven innings before the game is final.

As a result of the rainfall, the two teams decided to split the Grand Championship. Therefore, Howard and Robert Printer's and Rollin's Construction are the winners of the 1974 Fastball Tournament Grand Championship.

Game by Game Summaries

OPENING ROUND

ELLIS JUNIORS 19 — CONSECON 2

Tournament rules forfeit any game to a team that is leading by more than seven runs after the first five innings. The Juniors scored 10 times in the first six and therefore won the game without having to play the seventh.

Steve Campbell led the Ellis attack with a double and three singles. Wayne Andrews cracked a three run triple and added a single to ensure the win. John Sprackett pitched the victory striking out nine.

The Juniors advanced to the second round of A competition while Consecon went to the first round of Consolation play.

DEVOLIN 1 — TRENTON 0

Dan Holloway pitched the shout striking out 19 batters. Rick Rosebush scored the only run for the winners and was top man at the plate with a pair of singles.

Devolin earned the right to go into A competition and Trenton Auger's were B.

HOWARD AND ROBERT 2 — COBOURG TAB 1

Scott Reid threw the win in this contest fanning 18 batters and giving up just three hits. Howard and Robert scored both their runs in the seventh inning when Dave Skelton pounded a two run triple. Both the runs were unearned.

Howard and Robert advanced to the A semi-final and Cobourg got a by into the B semi-final.

BARDON SUPPLY 3 — COBOURG MERCHANTS 1

Bardon's scored all three of their runs in the first inning and came up with some tight defensive play in the rest of the game to ensure the win.

Bill Harrison was the winning pitcher.

Bardon's went A and the Merchants went B.

ROLLINS 5 — MAYNARD 0

Ted Watts pitched the win giving up just two hits and fanning 13 batters. Except for the two hits, Watts pitched a perfect game.

Wayne McTaggart led the batting attack with a single and home run.

Rollins go to the A side and Maynard goes B.

CONSOLATION ROUND

TRENTON 2 — CONSECON 2

Trenton scored four runs in the fifth inning to wrap the game up. The losers scored a three run homer to top off the four run surge. Jack Jury singled and tripled and Bill Clement doubled and slipped to 4-0 win. The winners hitting attack and band Bob Swain the easy victory.

Trenton got a by into the Consolation final and Consecon was out of the tournament.

MAYNARD 4 — COBOURG MERCHANTS 2

John Pike belted a triple and a single to drive in two runs and secure the Maynard and scored two runs to help the winning cause.

Maynard advanced to the B Championship round, consolation round and the Merchants went home.

COBOURG TAB 3 — MAYNARD 1

Ed Krzysztner picked up the win for Cobourg fanning 10 batters and giving up three hits.

Larry Thompson cranked a homer to lead the winner's attack with a two run blast in the fifth inning to wrap the game up. Cobourg got some help from Maynard as the losers had seven errors.

Maynard was knocked out of the tournament and Cobourg advanced to the Consolation final against Trenton Auger's.

CHAMPIONSHIP ROUND

HOWARD AND ROBERT 1 — ELLIS JUNIORS 0

Bob Ethier came on with a strong one hitter for the winners. The single by Calvin Pope in the third inning was the only thing that stood between Ethier and a perfect game. Ethier struck out 18 batters.

Incredibly enough the losing pitcher, McMurray, only gave up four hits two of which were singles to Scott Reid, Reid drove in the winning run.

The Juniors were knocked out of tournament action and Howard and Robert advanced to the semi-final.

ROLLINS 5 — BARDON 4

Rollins scored five times off Bardon starter Jamie Baxter in the first inning before Wayne McConnell came on to complete the game.

Glen Carleton cranked a triple and a single for the winners and Ralph Pass added three singles.

Rollins got a by into the Championship final and Bardon's were knocked out of competition.

HOWARD AND ROBERT 5 — DEVOLIN 0

Bob Ethier once again threw for Howard and Robert pitching his second consecutive game in the tournament. Ethier allowed just two hits and fanned 11 batters. Again it was the two hits that stood between Ethier and a perfect game.

The winners scored four runs in the first inning to ensure his win. Wayne Woods was top man at the plate for Howard and Robert. He knocked two singles.

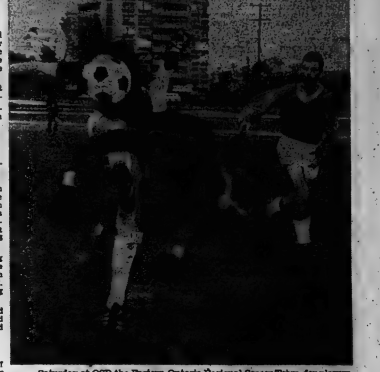
Devolins were knocked out of tournament play and Howard and Robert advanced to the final against Rollins.

CONSOLATION CHAMPIONSHIP

COBOURG TAB 4 — TRENTON 1

Al Fenton pitched Cobourg to victory fanning 14 Auger's batters and not giving up a walk.

Tom Love gave Fenton all the help he needed punching in three singles, Terry Burnham added a pair of singles.



For Auger's it was Larry Mavety with the big hit of the game, a sixth inning solo home run and Trenton's only score. That was Mavety's second homer of the tourney.

Cobourg took home Consolation honors and Trenton was Consolation runner-up.

A CHAMPIONSHIP

Howard and Robert and Rollin's Construction played six and a half innings of their best before the rain came. Unfortunately, tournament rules state teams have to complete seven innings before the game is final.

As a result of the rainfall, the two teams decided to split the Grand Championship. Therefore, Howard and Robert Printer's and Rollin's Construction are the winners of the 1974 Fastball Tournament Grand Championship.

Saturday at OSD the Eastern Ontario Regional Soccer Team, for players under 21 was chosen. Teams from Ottawa, Peterborough, Kingston and Belleville participated in exhibition games. Then the best 32 players were chosen from the four teams and pitted against one another in a rough, competitive game of stars.

And to Think They Almost Forfeited

After coming within about two minutes of forfeiting their Industrial Softball League game with Canadian Tire Sunday, Constellation dumped the Tiremen 12-1 in a rescheduled game, played at Sir MacKenzie Bowell.

The ninth player Constellation fielded arrived just two minutes before the game would have been awarded CTC after the 15 minute period of grace.

Tom Kroll had the arm for Constellation, quieting the Tiremen line, allowing four hits. He fanned ten and walked none.

John French started for the losers, going four innings, giving up 13 hits and eight runs. He walked four while not fanning a man.

Andy Prudden threw the final three frames, allowing four runs on six hits. He whiffed five and issued no free passes.

Mike Callaghan had a double and three singles for the winners, with Jim Thompson and Ed Cain each bagging a double and two singles. Wayne May and Jim Clair both had a pair of safeues, with Ed Reid a double and Ron Mitchell a double and one base hit.

Prudden, Ken Trice, John McMurter, and French each had a base hit for the losers.

In Friday night's action, Maud's dumped CNR by a 6-4 count. Sonney Holowey fired a seven hitter for Maud's, striking out seven and walking four.

Wayne Casselman absorbed the loss, striking out three and walking the same total. He gave up eight hits.

Charlie Rowbotham, Gary Casselman and Jim Sopha each had a double for Maud's, with Jim Woods adding two hits. Four singles were by Tim O'Connell, Mark Reid, and Rick May.

Jerry Hill led the CNR attack with a home run and single, with Bob Duval doubling.

Singles went to Rob McMurter, Zane Plumbe, Milt Bell, and Wayne Cassleman.

Black Diamond and Post Office played to an 8-8 tie in a game played at Prince Charles School.

Dave Hubbard was on the mound for the Posties, allowing 13 hits, fanning eight and walking only one.

Jack Francis started for the Black Diamond team, going two and a third innings. He allowed three runs on four hits, walking three and striking out one.

Ron Bateman came on in relief, finishing the last four and two thirds frames. He allowed five hits, walking four and whiffing none.

Lockhart led the Post Office at the plate with a four bagger, with Bob Wikyka driving in Gord and Gene. Wikyka had a pair of base hits, with one each going to Randy Burke, Ron Marriotte, and Tom Wood.

Jack Francis had a home run, double and two singles for Black Diamond, with three Francis crashing two doubles and two singles. Ken Bateman and Bob Neil each had a double, with Myles McDonnell contributing two singles. Ross Empey rounded out the attack with a base hit.

Expos Win Two

Clay Carroll Could Get Starting Position

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Clay Carroll has finished a lot more games than he's started, but he may get a chance to close the gap.

"I have to give a lot of consideration to starting him," Cincinnati manager Sparky Anderson said Sunday after Carroll teamed with Pedro Borbon to pitch the Reds to a seven-hit 7-0 triumph over Philadelphia Phillies.

Other results were: Los Angeles Dodgers 7, New York Mets 1; St. Louis Cardinals 6, Atlanta Braves 3; Pittsburgh Pirates 4, San Francisco Giants 3; Montreal Expos 9, San Diego Padres 8; and Chicago Cubs 2, Houston Astros 1 in 10 innings.

Results Saturday were: Montreal 6, San Diego 4; Houston 3, Chicago 7; New York 4, Los Angeles 1; Philadelphia 1, Cincinnati 2; Pittsburgh 3, San Francisco 2; and Atlanta 7, St. Louis 1.

Carroll, 4-1, set a National League record of 27 saves in 1972 and was making only his 23rd start in 551 major league appearances. He pitched eight innings of six-hit ball before giving way to Borbon.

"It had to take myself out after the eighth," Carroll said. "I guess I used some muscles I haven't used in a long time."

Dave Concepcion drove in two runs with a single, and Joe Morgan hit a home run to lead the Reds' attack.

Andy Messersmith pitched a five-hitter and Jimmy Wynn triggered a five-run uprising with a seventh-inning triple as the Dodgers sent Tom Seaver to his sixth loss in nine games.

Ted Sizemore drifted a tie-breaking single in the seventh inning and St. Louis added three decisive runs in the ninth on a bases-loaded walk to Ted Simmons and Joe Torre's two-run single. Darrell Evans had tied it for the Braves in the ninth on a 3-0 homer off winner Lynn McGlothen.

McGlothen, who entered the game with a 9-3 record and 1.82 earned-run average, allowed seven hits and fanned seven in 8 1-3 innings.

Jim Rooker survived a three-run first inning and went on to pitch a five-hitter for the Pirates, helping the team to the victory which lifted them out of the East Division cellar for the first time since April 25.

Expos' Willie Davis homered with one on in the ninth to tie the score and Ken Singleton's single scored pinch-hitter Ron Fairly's double. Two-run homers by Fred Kendall and pinch-hitter Clarence Gaston, in the eighth inning had powered the Padres into an 8-7 lead.

Rookie Barry Foote drove in three runs for Montreal with a single and a homer. Dave Winfield of the Padres also homered.

Chicago's Andre Thornton drew a bases-loaded walk following a pair of intentional passes in the 10th inning. Rick Monday homered in a one-out triple off reliever Ken Forsch and Matt Alexander was purposely passed, as was pinch-hitter Vic Harris. Chris Ward was sent up to hit for Steve Swisher and Fred Scherman relieved Forsch. The Cubs switched to Thornton and he, too, walked.

Astros' Cesar Cedeno homered off Chicago's Rick Reuschel in the first inning and Billy Williams tied the score in the fifth with a homer off Larry Dierker.

Handle With Care Wins

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Handle With Care, Alexandra's harness horse of 1972, beat Merrywood Sara by 2½ lengths Sunday to win the $12,600 Niagara Pacing Stakes at Garden City Raceway.

Covering the mile in 2:03 1-5, Handle With Care paid $2.30, $2.20 and $2.10. Merrywood Sara paid $4.00 and $2.70 while third-place finisher Sandra paid $2.40.

Handle With Care and Merrywood Sara fashioned a thrilling stretch duel.

The daily double of Eastern Spencer and Laura Rodney was worth $33.20 while the 10th-race exacta of Lord Decanter and Armbro paid $40.10.

A crowd of 2,400 wagered $262,548.

F. J. Hal won the featured $2,300 fifth race Saturday night, returning $20.90, $7.70 and $3.50.

Lady Messenger gained a victory in the first race for a purse of $1,400 in 2:08 and paid $10, $4.70 and $3.50.

The daily double of Lord Messenger and Keystone Gary returned $180.20.

Discourages Joining Players' Association

NEW YORK (AP) — John Thompson, executive director of the National Football League's management council, said Sunday all NFL clubs have been sent letters urging rookies and free agents not to join the players' association until the current contract impasse is settled.

Thompson also said he does not think negotiations between the owners and players will resume as scheduled Tuesday in Washington. Discussions were terminated Thursday.

Thompson, in a telephone interview, said the letters were designed to explain to the rookies and free agents their rights under current circumstances.

The letters told the players involved they will be entitled to any benefits won from collective bargaining whether or not they were members of the players' association as long as they report to training camp. But, if the rookies fail to show at training camps they will not be eligible to be a member of the bargaining unit.

The union has said it will strike July 1 if negotiations are not complete.

Blind Man Brings A's Sluggers Together

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It took an almost blind man to get Bill North and Reggie Jackson together Sunday but it was a meeting Oakland Athletic's feuding sluggers could have done without.

Bill Sudakis, an infielder with New York Yankees of the American League, legally blind with 20-400 vision in both eyes.

In the game against Oakland, Sudakis hit a pinch-double to North was "probably incorright-centre field in the seventh inning and as Jackson and North both ran for the ball they collided. The hit drove in the tying run.

After doubles by Elliot Maddox and Bobby Murcer, Sudakis shoved home a insurance run with a sacrifice fly to assure New York's 5-3 victory.

Other league results were: Chicago White Sox 9, Baltimore Orioles 1; Detroit Tigers 3, Kansas City Royals 2 in 11 innings; Boston Red Sox 7, California Angels 4; and Milwaukee Brewers 4, Texas Rangers 3.

Minnesota Twins defeated Cleveland Indians 3-0 before Indians rebounded to win the second game of their doubleheader, 5-4.

Results Saturday were: Cleveland 5, Minnesota 1; Detroit 11, Kansas City 0; Oakland 9, New York 1; Baltimore 4, Chicago 3; Texas 5, Milwaukee 2; and Boston 5, California 3.

At Oakland, North was blocked unconsciously by collision with Jackson and had to leave the game.

"I understand they've been trying to keep those two guys apart," Sudakis cracked, referring to their recent clubhouse fistfight.

Oakland's team doctor said North was "probably uncon- scious only a few minutes after the collision. He remembered the batter was hit but he couldn't remember the actual hit."

Tony Muser paced Chicago's 13-hit attack against Baltimore with two singles, a double and a homer. He drove in three runs and scored three more.

General manager Chuck Tanner said Muser is "the kind of guy who can do a good job while going in and out of the lineup."

Kansas City manager Jack McKeon was glad to see the end of Royals' batting slump after the club's meeting with Detroit.

Tigers scored a three-run homer with two-out in the ninth inning Saturday for the Detroit victory.

Sunday, Rodriguez singled home the winning run with two out in the 11th inning.

Boston won from the ninth trailing 4-1 but Dwight Evans walked and Rick Burleson singled, chased Carlos Garcia starter Dick Lange. Mario Guerrero's double off Harry Rasiano scored Evans and Glenn Borgmann fielded single loaded the bases.

Cecil Cooper's two-out single tied the game. Then Carlton Fisk, who had hit his 10th homer in the third inning, tied it with a double to left. Cherrie Sands smashed a two-runner and Lee Stanton had a solo shot for the Angels.

Charlie Moore's tie-breaking single in the seventh inning and Don Money's run-scoring double in the eighth led Milwaukee past Texas, keeping the Rangers from moving into a first-place tie with Oakland in the West.

Jim Spencer hit two homers and Alex Johnson had one for Texas while Bob Coluccio homered for Milwaukee.

Ray Corbin and three Minnesota relievers limited Cleveland to six hits in the Twins' first-game triumph. Then Fritz Peterson pitched a seven-hitter on his own and John Lowenstein drove in two runs with a pair of singles to lead Cleveland to its victory and the twinbill split.

Okker, Dent Lead Loves Again

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Phil Dent upset Tom Okker to men's singles and Rosie Casals won the women's singles at Detroit Loves defeated Toronto Buffalo Royals 23-21 Sunday night in World Team Tennis.

Dent won the set 6-4 while Miss Casals beat Wendy Overton 6-3. The Royals had an easy time in men's doubles with Okker and Mike Estep trouncing Alan Stone and Dent 6-1.

Estep and Jan O'Neill won the mixed doubles 8-4 but Miss Casals and Kerry Harris beaten Miss Overton and Laura Rossouw in women's doubles, 6-3.

In other matches, Philadelphia Freedoms downed Boston Lobsters 33-24; Pittsburgh Triangles beat San Francisco Golden Gaters 28-14; Denver Cliff Edge Nikki Pilic 7-6.

Hockey Eye Injuries Could Be Epidemic

EDMONTON (CP) — The possibility of serious eye injuries in ophthalmological Society says that if eye injuries in hockey were considered a disease, the country would be faced with an epidemic.

Dr. Page Harshman of Toronto said in an interview Sunday a society survey found 200 cases of eye injuries resulting from hockey mishaps. About one-fifth of the Society's 800 members responded to the survey.

"These are only preliminary results, but there are serious injuries to eyes during the course of playing hockey to justify further investigation and co-operation with hockey officials and sports equipment manufacturers," Dr. Harshman said.

The types of injuries range from broken socket bones — which leads to poor eye support and vision problems — to nerve damage, hemorrhages, and tears and cuts to the eyeball

Toros Get Featherstone

TORONTO (CP) — Tony Featherstone, whose pro hockey career stretched from Halifax to Oakland since 1960, signed a three-year contract today with Toronto Toros of the World Hockey Association.

Signing of the 5-foot-11, 187-pound right winger brings to four the number of new signings announced recently by the WHA team.

Special Olympics

David Brickman Wins Two Swimming Events

WINNIPEG (CP) — David Brickman of New Westminster, BC., emerged the top individual performer in the 1974 Canadian Special Olympics by winning four of five men's swimming events.

Brickman won the boys 17- and 18-year-old 50-yard freestyle in 32 seconds, the 50-yard backstroke in 37 seconds and the 100-yard freestyle in 2:46.6.

Wayne McLellan of Toronto won two events in the 15- and 16-year-old division, winning the 25- and 50-yard freestyle. The only other double winner among the boys was David Brickman of Belleville who won the 15- and 16-year-old 25-yard freestyle and 50-yard backstroke.

Linda Conners of Toronto led the women by winning the 25- and 50-yard freestyle and 25-yard backstroke for 13- and 14-year-olds.

Patricia Hardick of Sarnia won the 50-yard backstroke and 100-yard freestyle events in the 15-year-old section.

In the track and field competition there were four double winners, including Helen Martin of South Falls, Ont., in the girls 17 and 18-year-old groupings. She won the 220-yard dash and the high jump.

Gordon Woodward of Woodstock walked off with the boys' golfing championships.

Smokin' Joe Fired Up For Tonight's Match

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe Frazier will be out to prove that he is still "Smokin' Joe" tonight in Madison Square Garden when he fights Jerry Quarry, who will be trying to shake the rap that he never wins the big ones.

"I think he's as sharp as he's ever been," said trainer Eddie Futch of Frazier, who prepared to put his career on the line.

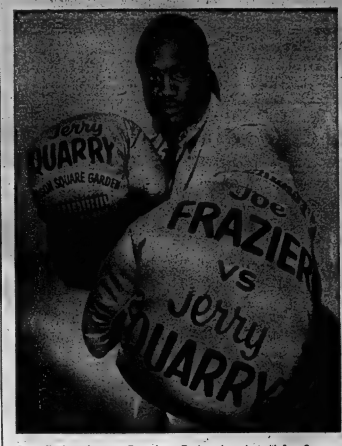
The former heavyweight champion has lost two of his last three fights—a knockout by George Foreman when he lost the title and a decision defeat by Muhammad Ali—and Futch said he would recommend Frazier quit unless he wins impressively.

"That fight (the loss to Ali) only made him more determined to show his best.

"You better believe it," Frazier said when he asked if he thinks about fighting Foreman again.

Frazier weighed in at 212 pounds Sunday while Quarry was 197½.

Quarry goes into the fight with a string of six straight victories since ending a brief retirement about 15 months ago and has lost only six times against 35 pro victories, 29 by knockout.



But four of the defeats especially rankle—he was stopped twice by Muhammad Ali; he lost a decision to Jimmy Ellis in a World Boxing Association title bout in 1968; and he was stopped in seven rounds by Frazier in 1969 when Frazier was recognized as champion by six states.

"If I don't win, I better get out of the business because I'll never be more ready than I am right now," said Quarry who blames personal problems as the reason behind some of his past defeats.

The scheduled 12-rounder will be the first half of a closed-circuit-television double-header and will start a 10 p.m. EDT. The second fight, which also will be seen on television by the Garden crowd, will be Bob Foster's NBC ten-round title defense against Jorge Ahumada.

Adding interest to the Frazier-Quarry fight is the fact that Joe Louis, boxing's legendary "Brown Bomber," has been licensed and appointed by the New York State Athletic Commission as referee.

The move drew some criticism, but both fight camps said they will accept Louis. And both Garden boxing boss Teddy Brenner and Louis denied the action was taken to sell tickets.

Joe Frazier, former heavyweight champion, displays an eight-pound set of boxing gloves given him at a press conference Tuesday. Frazier, who usually uses an eight ounce set of gloves was advised by his manager-trainer Eddie Futch to either win his bout with Jerry Quarry next month and win it impressively or retire. Irwin Wins U.S. Open

MAMARONECK, N.Y. (AP) — Hale Irwin, 29, won the United States Open golf championship Sunday despite a three-over-par final-round 73.

He finished with a 287 total, seven-over-par, on the 6,961-yard Winged Foot (N.Y.) Golf Club course.

Forrest Fezler was second with 289 and Bert Yancey and Lou Graham were tied for third at 290.

Irwin's winning score, which brought him prize-money totaling $25,000, was the highest winning total since the 1962 National Open in Brooklyn, Mass., when three players tied for top spot with 293s, nine over par.

Tom Watson, who led Irwin by a stroke at the end of three rounds, fell back with a 78. His total of 292 tied him with Arnold Palmer and Jim Colbert.

The reigning Masters' champion, Gary Player, took a seven on the ninth hole for a 73 and 293.

Jack Nicklaus rallied with a final-round 71 and ended with 294.

"It's a great course," he said. "I just never got to playing well.

The defending champion, Johnny Miller, closed with a 77 for 302.

CFL Talks Grind To Halt—Again

TORONTO (CP) — Most veterans in the Canadian Football League resigned during the weekend as contract talks between the players and league came to a halt.

"It is quite clear that the demands of the players and the structure of the Canadian Football League to provide them are somewhat apart," Norm Kimball, general manager of the Edmonton Eskimos, said after the breakdown in talks Saturday.

Kimball, chairman of the CFL's players' relations committee, said commissioner Jake Gaudaur has received "resignation notices" from 256 veterans.

George Reed, president of the Canadian Football League Players' Association, said another 25-30 resignations have been submitted to general managers. There are 398 veterans in the CFL.

Kimball said that by retiring before midnight Saturday night, the players are in a legal position to withhold their services and still remain eligible to resume play later this season.

If they had waited past Saturday, they would have had to wait until next season to rejoin their clubs.

Most clubs are have opened or are ready to start their training camps.

Al Sangster, president of the Saskatchewan Roughriders, said the team will wait until Tuesday or Wednesday to open its training camp, and if the veterans are not back by then "we will bring in more players."

General manager Frank Clair said no returns reported to the Ottawa Rough Riders' training camp Saturday but they have been using the of the field to get in shape.

Forty-seven rookies turned out during the weekend as Toronto Argonauts opened their camp, but all veterans were missing.

British Columbia Lions veterans continued to practice on their own during the weekend and none were expected to turn out at today's camp.

Kimball said the two sides are close to agreement on most of the 63 demands put forward by the players' association for the two-year contract but are apart in such areas as payment of payments in post-season games, the Grey Cup game and the pension plan.

No date has been set for renewing contract talks but a telephone conference of owners and presidents was scheduled for today.

Kimball said the CFL is prepared to give the players a 25-per-cent increase in the event of contention in 1974 and a further 20-per-cent in the second year.

Included in the league offer is a training camp per diem of $12 this year and $15 in 1975 compared with $10 in 1973, increasing payrmeth in post-season games by $200 a game and raising the winners' share of the Grey Cup game $4,000 a man rather then the current $3,000.

Kimball said the player demands, if met, would cost the CFL $1,918,000.

Reed told a news conference the owners' committee has refused to discuss a proposed minimum wage of $11,500.

Other key demands include $6,000 to the Grey Cup winner this year and $7,500 in 1975 and the losers share $3,000 and $4,000; conference winners $1,500-$1,000; conference losers $1,200-$1,500; semi-final winners $1,200-$1,500; semi-final losers $1,000-$2,000.

Reed said the players will resume negotiations only when the owners' committee has "more room to the table to negotiate with."

Oliver and Follmer Team Up at Mosport

MOSPORT, Ont. (CP) — Despite a shoving match before the race, Oliver said, "I just ducked and George started throwing punches and I ran. I'm not the physical type."

Follmer of Arcadia, Calif., said only that he and Oliver "had a problem. I think it is solved now."

Oliver said the two had agreed he would win the race and Follmer the next race in the series in Gainesville, Ga., July 7.

"Why yes, we had a bit of a punch-up in the garage" before the race, Oliver said. "I got a couple of Jackie Oliver and George Follmer finished one-two Sunday in the Canadian-American challenge auto race.

In winning the first race of the Labatt's Can-Am series, Oliver of England finished 1.9 seconds ahead of Follmer, the early leader until a punctured tire forced him back to second place.

Follmer did not appear on the victory stand after the race.

Oliver, whose last win was at Monza, Italy, three years ago, averaged 112 miles an hour over the 125-mile course for prize money of more than $19,000.

Mansfield Sees Kissinger As 'A Little Thin-skinned'

WASHINGTON AP — Senator Mike Mansfield D-Mont. Monday said Saturday State Secretary Henry Kissinger is "a little thin-skinned" when it comes to criticism.

Mansfield said Kissinger told him in a personal conversation on June 8 that he was considering resigning because of the "cloud over his head" of the government wiretapping issue.

Mansfield said the next day, a Sunday, he received a telephone call at home from Kissinger, saying he was thinking about not going with President Nixon on the Middle East trip also because of controversy stirred up by the wiretaps.

"I guess it kept eating away at him," Mansfield said in an interview.

Ford Says Kissinger Target of News Leaks

UTICA, N.Y. AP — Vice-President Gerald Ford said Saturday that "nameless sources of vital information have sought to undercut, have sought to destroy Henry Kissinger."

The vice-president, at a Republican fund-raising reception at Oneida County airport, said the recent leaks regarding State Secretary Kissinger's role in wiretaps are in some ways typical of what has been happening for a year and half.

Ford said it is "a planned, organized effort to discredit the president."

The vice-president did not name those who are alleged to have made the leaks.

But in Chicago on Friday he said they include Representative Joshua Eilberg Dem. Pa.

Amendments Obtained

TORONTO CP — Metropolitan Toronto chairman Paul Godfrey has obtained two amendments to the Metropolitan Toronto Act, which Metro council did not ask for, through private negotiations with the provincial government.

One amendment permits Metro council to appoint a chief administrative officer while the other gives the council the power to approve a housing policy which might force all Metro area municipalities to conform to it immediately.

Five Arrested In Watergate Two Years Ago

WASHINGTON (AP) — Police Sgt. Paul Leeper drew his gun and jumped on a desk in Democratic national committee headquarters.

"I looked over this glass partition. There were five men standing in front of a desk with their hands either raised above their heads or at least shoulder high wearing blue surgical gloves. . . .

"We ordered them out from behind the desk and lined them up along the wall, facing the wall, hands on the wall, feet spread apart," Leeper said he informed them who we were, they were under arrest for burglary and advised them of their rights. . . ."

It was a heady time for Richard Nixon, relaxing last weekend in Key Biscayne, Fla. Earlier that year he had made his trip to China and he had every reason to be confident that the following November he would win a second four years in the presidency.

Former attorney-general John Mitchell had taken command of the president's re-election campaign and was in Los Angeles. The campaign treasury was overflowing.

The Democrats seemed certain to nominate Senator George McGovern of South Dakota, whom both Nixon and Mitchell were convinced would be their easiest opponent. That is, unless Mississippi forced a stalking horse for Senator Edward Kennedy, the Democrat they feared most.

Not even the break-in at Democratic party headquarters ruffled the forward calm of the Nixon campaign. "A third-rate burglary" not worth commenting on, said presidential press secretary Ronald Ziegler.

But as time passed that calm facade would crack, widen and reveal far more of the secrets of the Nixon administration than the burglars had supposedly conceded in disclosing about the Democrats.

June 17, 1972, would become the most easily remembered date of Richard Nixon's presidency—and by the first anniversary of the break-in, no one was calling it a third-rate burglary.

Senator Sam Ervin (Dem. N.C.), was starting on daytime television as chairman of the Senate Watergate committee hearings. Archibald Cox was the special Watergate prosecutor. And most of the men who had held the real power during the first Nixon administration had resigned.

Most of them, like H. R. Haldeman, John Ehrlichman and former attorney-general Richard Kleindienst resigned. But one, former White House counsel John Dean, was fired.

Dean had a story to tell. Eight days after that first anniversary, he settled into the Watergate committee spotlight and related his belief that one of those who had conspired to cover up that involvement of Nixon campaign officials in the Watergate break-in was the president himself.

But how to prove whether Dean's story was true or false? The president declined invitations from Ervin and Cox to tell his side of the story, summoning from Nixon biographers related with Dean's.

And then Alexander Butterfield told the Watergate committee of the existence of the White House taping system. Thus began the battle of subpoenas. It quickly became clear that Cox, a former solicitor-general and legal adviser, represented the chief threat to the president's determination to guard the confidentiality of his discussions with aides.

Finally, on Oct. 20, 1973, after Cox had obtained two court rulings upholding his right to subpoena presidential tapes, Nixon fired the special prosecutor.

Within days, White House aides conceded they misjudged the possible public reaction. Thousands of telegrams poured into Washington demanding the impeachment of the president. Three days after the firing, Nixon agreed to turn over the subpoenaed tapes.

But the impeachment process had begun. It was spurred on by the disclosure that two of the subpoenaed conversations did not exist and that a third was marred by an 18½-minute erasure that had wiped out the only discussion of Watergate.

A new special prosecutor, Leon Jaworski, took over. In March, 1974, grand juries returned the major Watergate indictments. Facing criminal charges were the same familiar names: Haldeman, Ehrlichman, Mitchell and former White House special counsel Charles Colson. With all his one-time advisers under indictment, the president suddenly appeared vulnerable.

The House of Representatives Judiciary committee joined Ax Jaworski, the special prosecutor in demanding access to White House files. But Nixon, after a period of co-operation, the president drew the line. He would withhold over the material needed for the full story of Watergate. He would turn over no more tapes.

But Jaworski and Representative Peter Rodino (Dem. N.J.), chairman of the judiciary committee, didn't let up in their demands. In a dramatic bid to quiet their demands, Nixon released edited transcripts of 46 presidential conversations, giving them not only to Jaworski and Rodino but to the general public.

However, the transcripts gave a picture of a president who had sought to "keep the lid on the bottle," to contain the Watergate investigations. His position on the payment of hush money proved ambiguous. His tone, in some across as a bitter and cynical man who yearned for a chance to retaliate against political opponents.

But had the president broken the law? Had he done anything might be considered grounds for impeachment?

On the second anniversary, those were unanswered questions. And because they were unanswered, they overshadowed all the other questions of guilt or innocence that would be decided in the courts.

But there was one certainty. John Dean was a poor prophet when he told the president Feb. 28, 1973, that the Watergate break-in would end up "in the history pages of the history books."

Uranium Town Divided on Eve Of Health Probe

ELLIOT LAKE, Ont. (CP) — This uranium town's opinion is divided as it awaits the convening of a public inquiry into health conditions in the mines. But there is no disagreement with the conviction that the hearings will be vociferous.

The union which represents the miners was instrumental in obtaining the provincial inquiry, and is already preparing its case.

Local leaders of the United Steelworkers of America are drumming up support from anywhere they can find it to have working conditions in the mines. They cite neglect by mining companies, governments and others; and the cost of Canadian uranium.

The workers themselves are resentful.

"The attitude in the mining companies does not belong in the 20th century," says Joseph Zoltan, an underground miner. "They still work on the old attitude that miners are slaves or prisoners of war or some condemned person."

But Dr. Neil McMillan, a family doctor, does not agree entirely.

"There's a health problem," he said. "It's not a serious health problem—it has been blown a little out of proportion."

Studies are under way into the question of silicosis, cancer and working conditions in the

Denturists to Inform Miller of Intentions

TORONTO (CP) — The Denturist Society of Ontario will inform Health Minister Frank Miller Tuesday whether or not members will register by June 29 for an examination which might qualify them as denture therapists under a system of provincial legislation.

Mr. Miller met Saturday with more than 200 denturists to gain support for the legislation he is proposing to govern the profession.

"There was not a total meeting of minds," Gordon Smith, spokesman for the denturists said after the closed meeting. "But we will disclose our decision to the minister on Tuesday."

The bill, the third put forward by the government in two years, would allow denturists to sell whole dentures directly to the public.

Need $12,600

WASHINGTON AP — A typical family of four in a United States city requires $12,600 annually to maintain a modern standard of living, the U.S. labor department said Saturday. This is nearly $1,200 more than the previous year.

Sheafs of Bills Face Legislators

TORONTO (CP) — In a final flurry of legislative activity before the fast-approaching summer recess, the Ontario government is introducing sheafs of bills — leaving the opposition angry and vocal.

Friday, various ministers introduced seven pieces of legislation, leaving 31 bills on the order paper in various stages of consideration.

Thursday, 11 bills were brought in, most of which were described by their sponsoring ministers as housekeeping amendments to acts already in force.

Other bills provide for licensing fees for farm products including wool, beef, and fruits and vegetables. Others change municipal government structure.

The most important bill brought in Friday is probably the guaranteed income provisions for the blind, elderly and disabled, introduced by Treasurer John White.

Mr. White says he is confident of passage before the adjournment, which may come as soon as June 21 — four sitting days away.

But, as one opposition spokesman said last Friday, there is no way to tell when the legislature is to adjourn.

The opposition, though, is angry with the sudden rush of legislation.

Liberal Leader Robert Nixon said Friday that the last-minute rush always happens.

He said it is regrettable, because it does not give the members a fair chance to look at the various bills when they are rushed through.

He said the practice of pushing a last-minute flood of bills tends to undermine the democratic process.

NDP Leader Stephen Lewis echoed Mr. Nixon, saying the situation is aggravating.

Mr. Lewis predicted that members will flare in the legislature as the recess approaches because of the frustration of dealing with so many measures in such a short time.

It makes the opposition feel harassed, he said.

The opposition parties have few alternatives to talk passage of bills.

The Conservatives hold an overpowering majority in the House, with 78 of the 117 seats. The Liberals have 22 seats and the NDP 18.

During the passage of the government's land speculation tax repeated quorum calls and recorded votes extended debate for more than a month.

Mr. Nixon said he has no plans to stall any legislation, but "we can't finish next week".

Cairo Canadians Anxious to Move

CAMP CHAMS, Egypt (CP)—Canadians in this dusty, tattered camp near Cairo are on a count-down to mercifully day, and no one here will be sorry to fold their tents and leave the place back to the local horse-racing fans.

Established on an emergency and temporary basis last November in the wake of the latest Arab-Israeli war, it is the lifeline of the widely-scattered 7,000 - man United Nations Emergency Force (UNEF) supervising the truce. Now, it is showing its age, with the relentless Egyptian sun sending temperatures above 100 degrees each day.

Monotony is setting in now that the camp is on hot-weather working hours of 7 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., largely a lot of excess leisure. But morale remains remarkably good.

The commanding officer, Brig-Gen. Don Holmes, 53, of Ottawa, says all hands are anxious to shake off the dust of Shams for the move to the Suez canal zone town of Ismailia, 85 miles away, to take place in stages up to mid-August.

There, the Canadians and their Polish neighbors at Shams will settle in an old, abandoned British base to continue providing the communications, transport, medical, mechanical and other back-up services for the UNEF.

In Ismailia, Holmes said in an interview, the approximately 850 Canadians and a similar number of Poles will be geographically better placed for their job.

Meanwhile, in this sweltering tent-city camp, once a horse-racing track, there are eight showers in a single tent to accommodate all troops. Eight others had to be moved up to Ismailia, just a really bad hot weather hit.

Fresh toilets there can be counted on one hand. All others are out in the open, along with garbage and medical facilities.

Enlisted ranks sleep five or six to a tent, officers' one or two. But vital medical, dental and other services are excellent and well-supplied.

The fact that the posting here is for only six months makes it bearable, but nevertheless it is a grim drab existence at Camp Shams — treeless, with the color of desert sand everywhere except in dusty ground long since bald of grass and baking in the summer sun.

The new summer work hours make the place a study in contrasts between morning and afternoon. In the early hours the dust swirls, trucks are on the move and the area is the generality of activity.

In the afternoon, men shriveled to their underpants or occasionally nude — there isn't a woman or child on the base — sunbathe, or wander about aimlessly. Some go to the beer hall, a canvas-covered affair run by contracting clubs to which they have free passes. Others read, write letters, maybe go for a nap in their tents. In the evening, there are outdoor movies, or a tent trip to Cairo and the mess bars are open, but more money is taken in on soft drinks than on beer and liquor, possibly because the parching heat makes the former more palatable.

Maritime Liberal Set Policy

HALIFAX CP — Liberal candidates running for the 32 Conservatives seats at stake in Atlantic Canada in the July 8 federal election resolved Sunday to campaign on a platform of tax cuts, housing assistance, improved transportation and a guaranteed income plan for those unable to work.

The group released Sunday its "Atlantic Liberal action program" with a general statement on the region's "special position" in the Canadian federation and outlined proposals for initiatives in eight subject — the cost of living, energy, jobs, transportation, fishing, forestry, housing, agriculture and environment.

The program, which the 32 candidates may incorporate in their local campaigns, calls for the removal of the federal 12 per-cent sales tax on clothing and footwear and an increase to $30 a child a month from $7 in family allowances.

The candidates urged periodic increases in a variety of allowances to senior citizens and veterans to protect the buying power of their pensions and also was a call for negotiation between Ottawa and the provinces to create a "more welcome plan for those not able to work."

The candidates also suggested that a trans-Canada oil pipeline not end at Montreal but be extended to the Atlantic coast with facilities for reversible flow should offshore oil need to be sent inland.

Pulling Out

LONDON (AP) — Britain has decided to withdraw all its 1,200 troops and airmen from Singapore this year, The Sunday Telegraph said in newspaper says the decision was made despite pressure from Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew of Singapore to keep a small garrison on the island country in main tain security in the area.

9,000 Laid Off

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Almost 9,000 workers begin indefinite layoffs today as the flow of parts from Ford's strikebound Chicago stamping plant forces an end to assembly at four car plants.

A Ford spokesman said negotiations to end the strike might resume today, but that the layoffs would take place regardless of a settlement of the local contract which is in dispute.

Seven Killed

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. CP — Seven persons were killed in a fiery two-car crash on the Trans-Canada Highway four miles north of here Saturday night.

Police said the dead included four members of one family and three residents of a nearby trailer court.

Earl McMillan, 43, his 25 year-old wife Madeline and their daughters Debbie, 16, and Laura, 8, died in the wreckage. The McMillans were from near by Goulais River.

Edward Russell Lewis, 29, Barbara Baird, 21, and Ronald Valentine, 36, also were killed in the collision.

Nixon Backed

PRINCETON, N.J. AP — President Nixon's popularity rating increased slightly from a low point of 25 per cent last month to 28 per cent following the Middle East Ceasefire agreement the latest Gallup Poll shows.

Probe Asked

OTTAWA CP — The Ontario division of the Canadian Union of Public Employees Sunday unanimously passed a resolution calling for a full public inquiry into the May 11 police raid on a Fort Erie, Ont., hotel.

During the drug raid, 115 hotel patrons were reported to have been searched and a number of women stripped and subjected to searches.

Delegates attending the three-day convention said the action was contrary to policies of a democratic system.

Trudeau Hits Nuclear Tests

TORONTO (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau slapped at India and France Sunday for testing nuclear explosives.

"We hold the view that there is no need for any country to develop a nuclear explosive competence," he said in a speech to the Canadian Jewish Congress.

"None need divert resources from other needs any more than they need to reinvent dynamite."

In a largely non - political speech delivered in the midst of his campaign for the July 8 federal election, Mr. Trudeau said:

"We are fearful that any expansion of the nuclear explosives club represents a serious setback for the efforts of mankind in control the growth of this wasteful, destructive, terrifying technology."

He was speaking from a prepared text. It contained several paragraphs that he did not deliver when he spoke, including:

"We must not permit ourselves to be lulled into the fantasy that nuclear explosions are simply larger bangs, and that there is some distinction between a nuclear explosive device capable of peaceful use and one for non-peaceful uses."

While Mr. Trudeau mentioned no countries by name, it was clear that he was referring to a recent nuclear underground explosion in India — the result of knowhow acquired from Canada — and forthcoming atmospheric nuclear tests by France in the South Pacific.

His remarks appeared directed more at India, which the government feels has violated a bilateral understanding that led to the establishment of a Canadian nuclear power system on the sub-continent. France has paid little attention to past anti-nuclear protests from Canada.

Ivan Head, a prime ministerial assistant who has travelled the world on behalf of Mr. Trudeau, said the speech is a reflection in part of he Canadian attitude toward the NATO meeting that starts in Ottawa Tuesday.

Mr. Trudeau will interrupt his election campaign tonight to act as host at a dinner for NATO ministers. He will formally open the conference Tuesday morning.

The Indian explosion allegedly was for peaceful purposes, but Canada has suspended all aid to India with the exception of food and agricultural assistance.

Mr. Trudeau said Canada now wants to know the priorities of the whole Indian economic development program as it relates to nuclear explosions.

His prepared text said the horrific power of nuclear weapons must be brought under full international control. Nuclear tests in outer space and on the seabed had already been banned by international agreement, and many countries were opposed to atmospheric tests.

Mr. Trudeau's speech was scheduled before the election was called. Although largely non-political, he could not resist a dig at the foreign affairs record of his six-year-old government.

Lewis Sees Duty To Avoid New Vote

TORONTO (CP) — David Lewis, federal New Democratic Party leader, said Sunday that he would prefer minority government result from the July 8 federal election, it will be the duty of all members of the House of Commons to keep Parliament operating for three or four years.

"If the people of Canada again select a minority government whatever its approach, whether NDP, Liberal or Tory, it will be the obligation of all members of Parliament to try and make Parliament work for three or four years," he said on the CBC radio open-line show, Cross-Country Check-up.

But answering other questions on the CBC show and on a local television program, Mr. Lewis refused to say what Liberal or Progressive Conservative economic policy the NDP would support in a minority Parliament.

Mr. Lewis was winding up a three-day visit to Toronto-area ridings before launching the final stage of his campaign on a chartered Convair 440 aircraft.

Dubbed Daisy Air, the 50-seat aircraft will take the NDP leader to Hawkesbury, Ont., and Trenton, Ont., today and will hedge-hop across Northern Ontario, Manitoba and Saskatchewan for the rest of the week.

The Prime Minister Trudeau called Mr. Lewis "David the Daisy" in a speech just before his government was defeated

Stanfield Sees Work As Key to PC Victory

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield Sunday completed a week-long assault on Ontario ridings by telling voters that only "work, work, work" can result in the election of a Conservative government.

"It's not going to happen by chance," he kept repeating as he whipped through four Toronto-area constituencies on the final day of his Ontario blitz. "I ask you to get out and work like you fan . . . ."

Mr. Stanfield didn't make any major speeches Sunday as he visited the ridings of York East, Scarborough West, Eglinton and Etobicoke, but at each stop he told campaign workers to get out and knock on doors and spare no efforts towards electing a Conservative government.

"Even with my great qualities as a leader," he joked with several hundred supporters in Scarborough West, "we will have to work hard." Canada now faces its greatest challenge since the Second World War as inflation galloped "out of control," Mr. Stanfield said.

In his seven-day campaign in Ontario—the province considered a key battleground for the July 8 general election—Mr. Stanfield visited 31 ridings, bringing to 33 the number he has appeared in since the election was announced.

Saturday he went to Peterborough to issue a strong endorsement of former Manitoba premier Duff Roblin, seeking a seat in that riding.

Earlier Saturday, Mr. Stanfield visited a shopping mall at Alex where most of the customers had him confronted his proposals for controls on prices and incomes.

"We're talking about a 90-day freeze," he replied. "It's a temporary measure to put the brakes on inflation."

He ran into the same type of questioning when he visited Toronto's Kensington market where several youths, carrying placards supporting Liberal candidates, kept firing questions at him about his proposed controls.

His 50-minute walk through the market brought a mixed reception, with some shopkeepers shook his hand warmly, others were unfriendly with the Conservative leader, and some shoppers made it clear they supported other parties.

"At one point he accepted a gift of bandaids only to find they carried Liberal party stickers on them," he quickly gave them away.

But, as on other occasions during his visits to Ontario during the week, Mr. Stanfield received a big ovation and warm welcome from those he met.

Roblin Is Given Strong Backing

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield issued a ringing endorsation Saturday night of former Manitoba premier Duff Roblin who is seeking the Peterborough seat in the July 8 federal election.

Mr. Stanfield, addressing several hundred people in an open park, asked support for "this courageous and dedicated man."

He said he wanted "the continued pleasure of his company, his advice and his wisdom when we have formed the next government of Canada."

He said the former Manitoba premier would be a great addition to national unity as any other politician in Canadian history.

"And I'll tell you something else, in terms of social justice in terms of facing up to challenge, in terms of recognizing human needs, in terms of competence and capacity and vision and vigor, the record of Mr. Roblin government is an unfully lot better than the record of the governments of Pierre Elliot Trudeau."

Rain didn't permit Mr. Stanfield to complete his speech, but his prepared text said the federal government "spills more of your money in a year than a mere provincial government could waste in an entire term of office."

The text said the Trudeau government doesn't believe the provinces have any rights—especially those provinces which have resources. "They don't believe in consultation. They believe confrontation."

Mr. Stanfield came her after stopping at a shopping centre in Alex. Out., where he shook several hundred hands and speaking to about 75 people at a ball in Perry, Ont.

He made an appearance at a home show in Perry and was told his audience that "we cannot allow things to go on the way they are going." He said that his party is the only one with the guts and determination to face the inflation issues.

Caouette Refuses To Condemn Jones

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — Social Credit Leader Real Caouette moved into this heart, land of Canada's language controversy Sunday and declared his well clear of involving himself in it.

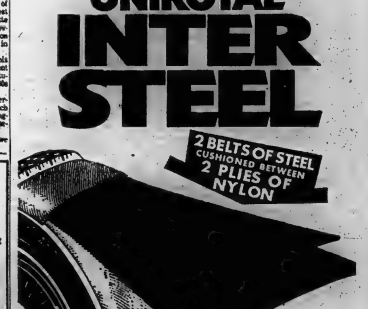
"What about Mayor (Leonard) Jones?" a reporter asked him, referring to the man who took his fight against the Official Languages Act to the Supreme Court of Canada and whom Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield refused to have as a candidate for the Conservatives in Moncton.

"Well, I don't know," Mr. Caouette replied. "He is a Social Credit?"

Mr. Caouette said Mr. Jones has the same right "to be what he is" as anyone else and "if I knew it in advance."

He says he is a democracy, we respect elected officials all."

Speaking both French and English in the part of Canada where frictions over the use of French are among the bitterest in the country, Mr. Caouette again attacked the Quebec government's language legislation to give a boost to French in that province.



Mr. Caouette repeated his view that the $53 million spent on the bilingualism and bicultralism commission in the 1960s was a waste of money.

The commission had determined "that we speak French in Quebec and English in Ontario English outside the province of Quebec.

"That's all they found out; we

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Actress Hedy Lamarr is suing motion picture director and newsman Mel Brooks for $15 million, claiming he exploited her name and identity without permission in the film Blazing Saddles.

The film, a Keystone Cops type western full of puns and outlandish humor, features a male villain named Hedly Lamarr.

Throughout the picture, the villain is addressed as Hedy and is at times taken to convince people his name is Hedly.

Miss Lamarr, a star in the 30s and 40s in such films as Boom Town, Comrade X and Ziegfeld Girl, charged Thursday that the use of her name and identity in the film was unauthorized.

Named as a defendant in the invasion-of-privacy suit, along with director Brooks, is Warner Communications Inc., producer and distributor of the film.

The suit entered in Manhattan Supreme Court noted that Blazing Saddles currently is among the 11 top-grossing pictures in the United States.

NEW YORK (AP) — Three priests sang the Gregorian chant in a recording studio Thursday while five long-haired musicians waited to begin their electronic rock version.

The priests and the rock group, Sunrise, put together the chants and rock in the recording called The Rites of Exorcism.

The priests are members of The Contemporary Mission in Westport, Conn.

A mission member, Rev. Robert Cassidy, said the rock recording, bearing the label of the priests' own company, Crunch Records, is part of the mission's program of communicating with people in their own media.

Proceeds from The Rite of Exorcism and other records the priests plan to bring out will go to the mission's Inner City projects.

SYDNEY (Reuter) — Drug charges against Eddie Cole, bodyguard of British singer Cat Stevens, were dismissed in a court Thursday, Gold, 31, of Los Angeles, was charged with importing marijuana and hashish when he arrived in Australia with Stevens May 30.

NEW YORK (AP) — Russian-born composer Sidney Bechet, 80, who wrote more than 60 operettas for the Yiddish theater and about 1,000 songs, died Thursday of cancer.

Secunda's songs included Bei Mir Bist Du Schoen, popularized by the Andrews Sisters, and the more recent, Donna, Donna.

Secunda was born in Russia and emigrated to the United States at the age of eight, already a prodigy as a vocalist.

Besides composing, he served as conductor of a five-piece symphony orchestra and for more than 20 years was musical director of the Concord Hotel in the Catskills.

Late Taxpayers' Penalty Endorsed

CANNIFTON — Thurlow council endorsed a Pickering township resolution last Wednesday calling for an increase from one to two per cent of a penalty against ratepayers who submit taxes late.

Notification of council's endorsement will be forwarded to provincial treasurer John White as well as the Municipal Liaison Committee. At present, the Municipal Act provides for a maximum one per cent penalty.

In making the move, council is requesting a change in existing provincial legislation.

Clare Horton, township treasurer, told council Wednesday non payment of taxes is a problem for the municipality. However, he noted, "the biggest percentage pay their taxes."

He told council approximately $18,000 is yet outstanding at the end of each taxation year.

Notices, urging payment of taxes, and sales bookkeeping, drive costs up for the township.

Some taxpayers pay the money they owe banks and other financial institutions before they pay their taxes, Mr. Horton said. "They let their taxes go."

Interest rates elsewhere are higher than that the township levies against late payment, at present, 12 per cent annually.

It is hoped the proposed higher penalty will act as a deterrent against late payment.

Pittsburgh township's maximum two per cent calendar month penalty, or 24 per cent per calendar year.

Blind Bowlers Win Trophies

A group of blind bowlers from Trenton and Belleville participated for the first time in the all-Ontario Bowling tournament in Ottawa.

The Canadian Armed Forces flew the group to Ottawa and returned the bowlers to Trenton after the tournament. The air force women provided host families.

Mail Buckingham and Oral Casey of Trenton won trophies in the tournament.

Members of the Belleville team were Gene Stratton, Francis Topping, Sarah Thompson, David Gobel and David Wardbaugh. Their coach was Tom Wardbaugh.

Members of the Trenton team were Mail Buckingham, Mary Turcott, Oral Casey and Ian Cover. Their coach was Hilda Joey.

One Car Crash

TWEED — An RR3, Stirling man had been charged with both impaired and careless driving by police following a single car accident on Highway 37 and Hastings County Road 12 Tuesday.

Burton Robert Howes, 21, of RR3, Tweed was charged by the Madoc detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police.

Police said the Howes vehicle, westbound on county road 12, travelled across the highway and crashed into a rock cut.

Howes was uninjured. Police estimate damage to the vehicle at $300.

Guide Posts Hit

FRANKFORD — An RR 4 Stirling youth escaped injury early Saturday when his car he was driving went out of control and hit guideposts on Highway 33 south of here.

Belleville provincial police said driver of the vehicle, Leslie Jeffrey Searles, 18, was not injured.

Damage to the car was estimated at $400.

W&B Stables Tie for First

Waitemaker and Sally Stables moved back into a first place tie with Bayview Orchards in the Prince Edward North Shore Softball League Sunday, coming up with a 3-2 shading of Reserve in the second game of the doubleheader at Almeltasburgh.

In the other game, Concession dumped Palmer Fuels 9-1 for their fifth win of the season.

W and B picked up their sixth win over Reserve, scoring runs in the first, third and fourth innings.

Harold Werkbowen started for the Stablemen, going five innings and getting credit for the win. He gave up four hits, allowing two runs, striking six four and walking two.

Bob McCoy came in in relief, allowing only one hit. He walked two and fanned none.

Pat Maracle, 3b., took the loss on the Reserve rubber, giving up five hits. He whiffed six batters, walking three.

Mike Flagler had double and single to pace the winners, with Doug Findaly, Gerry Vincent, and Bob Mowbray adding singles.

Tom Dickers had two hits for the Reserve, with Rod Selman, Carm Selman and Lyell Shaver all contributing one safety.

In the opener of the afternoon, Concession pushed across seven runs in the third inning to salt away the win.

Wayne Clarke fired the win for Concession, giving up only three hits, all singles. He walked three and whiffed the same total.

Bart Odton took the loss, allowing eight hits, walking two and hurling four batters watching third strikes.

Dale McLeod had a triple and single to pace the winners, with Ted McDonald chipping in double and single. Dale McCaffrey had a triple, with Larry Herrington, Al Clarke, and Dave Philips each singling.

Brian Montgomery, Chuck Kemp, and Bill Hobbs each had hits in a losing cause for Palmer's.

Your Horoscope

By BERNIC EBEDE OSOL

Tuesday, June 18

Aries (March 21-April 19) You have a lot of good ideas today, but you are likely to do more talking about them than putting them to use.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Some confusion will result if you are not extra careful with the way you handle your business and financial affairs.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) You will be able to awaken enthusiasm and support from everyone today, but the one you really need: You will have to light a special fire.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Limit your spending today to household items and basic needs. Contracting for special services requires more looking around.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) Someone in your threesome today will cause you some type of complication, if you let her take over and run things.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A situation where you've put yourself out on the limb has a flaw in it's foundation. Try to get to the root of the problem.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) A plan you have is feasible if it is worked out the way you envision it. However, another party will try to meddle things up.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) A situation where you share a joint interest needs some looking into. All isn't as well as it appears on the surface.

Sagittaries (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Leave yourself a little more room to negotiate today. You are apt to change your mind after you've made an agreement.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your stress and moodiness will not be in line with those of a co-worker. This will have a dilutig effect upon your efforts.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You are likely to treat a serious situation too lightly. Instead of solving the problem, you will just postpone it.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) Go full speed as soon as it is. Your present endeavor lacks a subjected to pressure.

sturdy foundation and it is apt

By Oswald and James Jacoby

Oswald: "There are any number of ways for a good bridge player to make more tricks than one of lesser ability, but none is more apparent than the expert's willingness to give himself extra chances."

Jim: "Here is a case in point. South (a fair player) started by cashing his three top diamonds. The suit failed to break so he led a club to dummy's ace and a second one back to his queen. West took his king; cashed the last diamond and got out with a heart. South had a losing club and was down one when that suit failed to break.

Oswald: "South had given the hand a fair play. He would have made it if either minor suit had broken or if East had held the club king."

Jim: "A fair play, but one that failed to give himself every chance. He was right to cash the diamonds and lead a club, but the first club played from dummy should have been a small one. He would get in with a heart or spade and lead a second club. This would collect West's king and give him the second club trick he needed."

Oswald: "This play would have cost him an unimportant overtrick if East had started with three clubs to the king. As it was it would give him the extra chance that would bring home the contract."

Underactive Gland Needs Medication

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 22 and overweight and have an underactive thyroid. I have gone to doctors and lost weight, but my husband doesn't like to see me taking pills all the time just to get slim.

I would have it taken out but neither my husband or I are sure what will happen if I have it taken out. Will I become really fat and stay like that? Or would I slim down and stay slim?—Mrs. V.D.

I think maybe both you and your husband may want to readjust your views a bit, and a little explanation of the thyroid gland will help you do so.

An underactive thyroid gland means that your metabolism is slowed down. One of the consequences is that you become more lethargic than is normal for you—and you tend to put on weight.

Give up any notion of having your thyroid removed. (Anyway, no surgeon would do it under the circumstances.) The gland is already underactive; removing it entirely would just make matters much worse.

Rather, an underactive thyroid needs medication (a form of thyroid hormone) to bring its activity up to a normal level. In most cases, this medication has to be continued indefinitely, but is small doses. You should view this as "replacement therapy," that is, replacing some of the hormone of which your thyroid gland is not producing enough. It is not, as is the case with much drug treatment, a matter of introducing something foreign into your system.

If you get your thyroid activity up to normal, you very likely will find that emotional reducing methods will control your weight.

As to your husband's objection to "taking pills all the time just to get slim," if you mean amphetamines or "pep pills," I agree with him. You shouldn't. But if he means simple thyroid medication to get your thyroid up to normal, that's another matter, and I would approve of your taking that.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: At least once a week I am awakened with a nearly unbearable pressure like a fist trying to push through my rectum. It started two years ago. The pressure was mild and only happened about once a month. Now it is more severe and more frequent.

I hope you can give me some idea as to what could be wrong. I am afraid it could be cancer as there has been much cancer in my family. Is this possible?—B.S.

Yes, it could be cancer, but there is no way I can tell from your letter. All I can feel fairly sure of is that something is exerting pressure. It could be quite a number of things: a large, thrombosed (hardened) hemorrhoid; a rectal abcess, fissures; benign tumor. Or cancer.

Do the obvious thing: Have your doctor examine you immediately.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Every two or three weeks I notice quite a lot of dark red blood in my stool. Since I'm reasonably certain that I do not have hemorrhoids, piles or whatever, and have never experienced any rectal itching, I'm really worried about this. The only thing I can think of that could cause this bleeding would be ulcers. I'd surely appreciate your recommendation as to what to do.—M.T.

It is utterly fruitless to expect any advice from me in a case like this—other than telling you to get to a physician promptly and find out what's causing the bleeding. Guessing is pointless and delay may be dangerous.

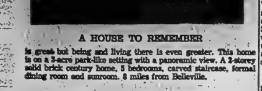
A HOUSE TO REMEMBER

is great but being and living there is even greater. This home is on a 3-acre park-like setting with a panoramic view. A 2-storey solid brick century home, 5 bedrooms, carved staircase, formal dining room and sunroom. 8 miles from Belleville.

BRIDGE STREET



a spacious family home with centre hall plan. 4 bedrooms plus formal dining room. Fireplace in living room. Close to shopping area and schools.

NORTH OF BELLEVILLE

a 100-acre farm with many extras. There's a 2-storey brick home with original plus bedroom and bath. Also a newly decorated. A 32-stanchion barn and good workable land.

BEAT THE HEAT

with the central air conditioning in this four-bedroom beauty. Brick construction, poured concrete basement walls, electric heating, reasonable taxes, paved driveway, built-in oven and many other features all combined to make this blue print for fine living complete. It's on Village Drive and it's reasonably priced too. Interested people can arrange to see it by phoning Al Raets at 968-1621.

WHAT'S MISSING?

A swimming pool, but that's all. If you insist on a pool, there's plenty of space to add one on this large 116 x 130 foot lot. Featured, in a lovely home, with a games room, utility room, two-car garage and workshop. In addition, there's a built-in bar with fridge. But it's not stocked! This is a beautiful home in an attractive location.

WHAT IS A VIRGINIAN ELEVATION ?

In this case, it's an attractive new home on McFee Street. It possesses a nice view of the Moira River, which will never be obstructed because of the green belt easement. The home has 3 good sized bedrooms, is broadloomed throughout and has a high, dry basement. For an inspection of this property call Al Raets at 968-1621.

REASONABLY PRICED WATERFRONT

We've got some 50 feet of it on the Moira. Near Vanderwater Park. It has a brick fireplace bungalow on a concrete block foundation, complete with a 9-piece bath. It's a cute little cabin for relaxed holidaying within easy commuting distance of the city.

B.C. Assessment Commissioner Kept Job Despite Politics

VICTORIA (CP) — Walker Percival Wright woke up the morning after the Aug. 30, 1972, British Columbia election wondering how much longer he would have his $30,000-a-year job as provincial assessment commissioner.

That was the date the New Democratic Party swept to victory over the Social Credit party—and Mr. Wright is a card-carrying Social Credit member and former MLA.

In fact, Mr. Wright entered the civil service in 1964 amid charges of a "payoff job" for resigning his seat after only one session to open a seat for the Social Credit finance minister Ethel Grace Gundersen.

"I didn't think I'd be fired," he says, "but I said to myself that he (Premier Barrett, a pal) had a perfect right to. I knew I was under scrutiny. He had no illusions about my political sympathies."

But Premier Barrett did not fire Mr. Wright. And now that Mr. Wright is nearing 65, he is not being "retired," but has been asked to stay on for another six months to help revamp B.C.'s assessment system.

Mr. Wright likes straight talk and honesty and that's why he said he hasn't made any effort to hide the fact he is a Social Credit party member and will be until at least the next provincial convention, membership card expires.

But in spite of his dedication of former premier W. A. C. Bennett, Mr. Wright has a fondness for Premier Barrett "except for his socialist policies.

"He's an attractive figure, a 'young Bennett,' said Mr. Wright. "But Tweedy about his buying up all those farms and taking resources so heavily. It's the case of the grass that laid the golden egg."

The original Equalization of Assessments Act, now twice amended, was passed by the Social Credit government during the Dec. 1971 session, the one that Mr. Wright attended as an MLA.

"I'm probably the only civil servant who ever helped pass the legislation which he administers," he said.

The act was amended in 1971 to establish assessments at 50 per cent of actual value for both land and improvements; that was changed the next four years were a "joy ride" for many.

High School Grad Sees World As Apprentice Coastal Seaman

VANCOUVER (CP) — The change of scene sought by 18-year-old Thomas Crosby of Victoria when he completed his studies was realized not in the currently popular practice of hitchhiking across the country, but by signing on the British Columbia's isolated coastal communities and Alaska.

He hired on as an apprentice seaman on the 65-foot vessel Thomas Crosby V, an 80-foot United Church mission ship. In addition to new surroundings, he received a bonus in "learning to live with people mean to people."

He says the chance to get away and do something different "sold the son of a Victoria lawyer and a teacher" to sail "down the north coast—but aboard a real ship before the mast."

They'd only been on board the Thomas Crosby for a mile while when my reasons for being there sort of changed."

He learned what the ship's white name to Indians in remote villages, lighthouse keepers and their families and inhabitants of small settlements and places like Bella Coola, 350 miles north of Vancouver with a population of around 1,000.

"Some folk don't think of themselves as isolated," said Tom. "They are happy enough but enjoy chatting with someone different once in a while."

In addition to conversation, the Thomas Crosby which sails out of Prince Rupert for three weeks at a time—provides extras as a baseball game with Indian children, a library, occasional meals for visitors, religious services, Sunday school assistance and shopping.

Requests for purchases by the isolated coast dwellers include such things as groceries, books and even underwear.

Some have special tastes. Like Frenchie and Ernest, two old-timers in their 80s who live alone on an old fishing scow pulled up on shore 30 miles north of Ocean Falls. They have lived and worked in the area for many years.

"They do they have some stories," said Kenn. "And here they are, right in the middle of nowhere, asking us to buy oats for them next time we dock at Prince Rupert. Funny too, they only wash hair with soap flakes."

His initial stint with the ship was for just the summer when he first sailed on her last June, but Kenn signed up for the winter after the Crosby had her annual refit and inspection in October.

He grew attached to the new world he encountered while working with Rev. Bob Farris, skipper Bob Naughty, engineer and two other deckhands.

The ship's calls last about two hours and the vessel is usually tied up at night by a mooring line.

"The Indian children love to play baseball and often we'll have it at Sunday school. But basically we just visit and if anyone has a problem Mr. Farris helps them."

Church services are performed in halls when available, in homes or in the ship's lounge which is equipped with an electric organ. Weddings and occasional funeral are also held on the main purpose is to share life with people. Tom has a way of speak.

The mission service arose from trips to fishing grounds and isolated villages by Thomas Crosby, a missionary from Woodstock, Ont., who travelled by canoe starting in 1874 with a crew of seven recent converts.

He moved to the powerdrive Glad Tidings in 1884 and his vessel plied the coast until it was wrecked in a gale in 1903. Other ships followed and eventually there was a succession of Thomas Crosbys, I through IV, culminating with the present ship built in 1967.

The vessel is in port for two weeks of every five to give the crew time off and when in service the deckhands take three day shifts in turn.

Apprentice seaman McLaren Kenn, 18, born, board and a wage."

"Nothing big," he said. "That isn't the attraction."

When "doing something different" and meeting people who really welcome a visitor wears off, he is not sure whether he wants to be a minister, like his father.

But he said he "won't be stuck in ocean office."

France, U.S. Split Over NATO Policy

OTTAWA (CP) — A disagreement between France and the United States over the wording of a new declaration of principles is likely to top the agenda when the NATO alliance opens its annual spring meeting today.

Informed sources say, however, that a compromise between the two governments is in sight and some settlement is expected which will enable the 15 countries attending the discussions to leave the document before the conference closes Wednesday.

They say the dispute centres on a section of the declaration devoted to a pledge of greater consultation between the U.S. and its European partners on Western defence matters.

In general terms, France appears to be demanding a greater commitment to close consultation than the U.S. is ready to give.

The issue was to be discussed by the foreign ministers or diplomats attending the twice-yearly meeting at a dinner given Monday night by Prime Minister Trudeau at his residence.

It likely will be taken up again today, sources say, by U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger who arrived late Monday night from Tel Aviv.

Kissinger described the meeting as possibly one of the most important in the 25-year history of the alliance and said he was pleased it was being held in the capital of "our old friend, Canada."

Earlier NATO Secretary-General Joseph Luns said the declaration of principles, intended to guide the future development of the alliance, will be signed formally in Brussels next week when President Nixon stops off there on his way to a summit meeting in Moscow.

European sources say a communique, to be issued separately from the declaration, likely will condemn the lack of progress in East-West talks on security and co-operation in Europe but will stop short of recommending a halt to the discussions unless major concessions are made by the Warsaw pact.

Hospitals Will Talk To Nurses

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Representatives of 10,000 nurses from across Ontario will meet in Toronto Friday to negotiate with administrators of 40 hospitals on various monetary matters concerning the group as a whole.

Ann Gribbin, public relations director for the Registered Nurses Association of Ontario, (RNAO), said in a news release Monday that the association hopes the discussions will "obviate the necessity of arbitration as only non-monetary issues will be left for resolution on a local basis."

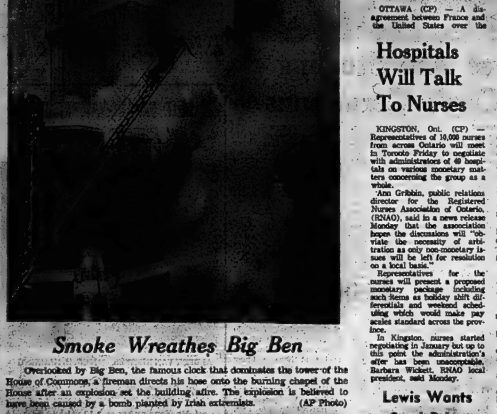
Representatives for the nurses will present a proposed monetary package including such items as holiday shift differentials and weekend scheduling which would make pay scales standard across the province.

In Kingston, nurses started negotiating in January but up to this point the administration's offer has been unacceptable, Barbara Wicket, RNAO local president, said Monday.

Women Want End To NATO

OTTAWA (CP) — The Voice of Women said Monday that NATO foreign ministers meeting here this week should seriously consider disbanding the alliance.

The military alliance is as obsolete as its aging equipment and facilities," the organization said in a press release.



The statement was handed in an official of the external affairs department for distribution to the foreign ministers, who start their closed-door meetings today.

The women's group said that to say that NATO is necessary as a balance to Soviet power "is to suggest in the cold war argument which is outmoded in the era of negotiation, detente and improved trade relations."

Scotland Yard Fearful Of IRA Major Offensive

LONDON (CP) — Senior Scotland Yard officials fear the bombing of historic Westminster Hall may be the start of a major summer offensive by the Irish Republican Army in England.

Police officials told The Times they believed the campaign will be aimed primarily at government buildings and political figures.

Police sources said the IRA's Provisional wing, the branch that is fighting a guerrilla war in Northern Ireland, is believed to have stockpiled explosives in preparation for a new terrorist offensive.

Detectives questioned dozens of workmen, many of them transient Irishmen, in their search for the terrorist who planted the 20-pound bomb that exploded during the rush hour Monday morning in the Palace of Westminster, the home of the British Parliament.

The bomb damaged the 857-year-old Westminster Hall, one of Britain's most historic buildings; injured 11 persons and started a gas fire that did extensive damage in an office annex.

Police believe that the bomber may have posed as a workman. An underground garage is being built in the area, and security was reported to have been relaxed for the workmen.

"This place is like Liberty Hall," said one worker. "No one asks for passes, and many people don't even have one."

Members of Parliament indicated that their attitude to the situation in Ireland will not be changed by such attacks.

Lewis Wants Steel Price Boost Halted

TORONTO (CP) — Stephen Lewis, provincial leader of the New Democratic Party, says steel companies should have to justify price increases at public hearings.

Speaking outside the legislature Monday, Mr. Lewis said price increases announced recently by the Steel Co. of Canada Ltd. (Stelco) should be halted until they can be investigated.

Earlier, Mr. Lewis asked Premier William Davis in the House whether the government is prepared to undertake a review of the newest increases—the second set announced by Stelco in recent months.

Mr. Davis said the company's first set of increases are under review, suggested that the matter may be beyond provincial jurisdiction.

U.S. Expects to Resume Beef Sales to Canada

WASHINGTON (CP) — Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz said Monday that Canada and the United States are "almost at the point of agreement" on re-opening the Canadian border to $140 million a year in U.S. beef.

The solution is "about a week away," he told reporters after a two-hour White House meeting in which Butz and presidential counsellor Kenneth Rush discussed the depressed U.S. meat industry with executives of growers, packers, wholesalers and retailers.

Pre-meeting speculation indicated that the U.S. might announce cattle import restrictions. The closest Butz and other cronies will say is announce that Australia is being asked to restrict shipments voluntarily.

As for Canada, which exported nearly $31 million worth of beef to the U.S. last year, "we're doing exactly the reverse" of the Australian proposal, Rush said. "We're trying to get Canada to remove the restrictions on our exports."

Canada banned U.S. cattle about two months ago when the U.S. ban on DES, a diet-fattening hormone which causes cancer in laboratory animals, was overturned on a technicality.

Oil Lands Increase Royalties

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — The world's major oil-exporting countries have agreed on a two-per-cent increase in royalty rates that should have a minimal effect on consumers.

The increase announced Monday by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) after a three-day meeting in the Ecuadorean capital works out to about 11 cents a barrel or a quarter of a cent a gallon.

Along with the royalty increase, the 13-country meeting agreed to continue for another three months the freeze on posted prices that they put into effect last January.

"Nobody came away with what they wanted," said Nigeria's commissioner of mines and energy, Shehiyu Ali Mugumo.

Saudi Arabia, the biggest exporter, had proposed lowering prices while the other 12 OPEC members advocated some form of increase, either in the posted price or in taxes, to keep pace with inflation.

Saudi Arabia dissociated itself from the royalty increase. The official explanation was that the Saudis were awaiting the outcome of their negotiations to take over more stock in the Arabian American Oil Co.

Mosgaoo said the other countries voted for the nominal increase partly as a warning that OPEC would take tougher action if the industrialized countries bring their inflation under control.

Candidates for July 8 Vote Total 1,210, Setting Record

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The number of entries in the July 8 federal election set a record Monday with a surge of last-minute candidates who filed their papers before nominations closed.

Unofficially, the total was 1,210 compared with the 1,117 who set the previous mark in 1972.

The 1974 total was in dispute because of uncertainties in a few ridings surrounded hours after nominations closed at 2 p.m. local standard times. But the figures left no doubt that the number seeking office hit an all-time high.

The Liberals and Progressive Conservatives had full slates in the 264 constituencies while the NDP entered 262.

One of the causes of dispute was by Labels riding in Quebec, held in the last Parliament by a Liberal, when two candidates filed under the Social Credit banner.

Electoral officials in Ottawa were pondering what to do about that one. And Real Caouette, Social Credit leader campaigning in Halifax, indicated he would make a statement today.

As the scene closed, a total of 1,056 candidates had been chosen by party conventions or had otherwise indicated their intentions to run.

For More Details on Ontario Nominations See Story on Page 5

The big surge on nomination day came among Social Credit candidates and others in such groups as Independents, Communists and Marxist-Leninist.

The Social Creditors added more than 50 to their weekend numbers while candidates of other groups ballooned by more than 80.

The NDP fielded full slates in all provinces but Quebec where they were two short of the 74 needed.

Social Credit's largest group was in Quebec where the figure of 99 was disputed. Their total across the country left them about a dozen short of the 186 who ran under the Social Credit banner in 1972.

Representatives of the other groups unofficially totalled 268, a record number for these parties which put 173 in the field two years ago.

The number of women seeking office also set a record. A total of 135 filed papers compared with the 71 who entered the race in 1972.

Conservative leader Robert Stanfield is facing four opponents in his third bid for re-election in the federal riding of Halifax. His opponents include Liberal, NDP, Social Credit and Marxist-Leninist candidates.

Quebec often produces odd situations, and one was in Quebec East where Mederic Robichaud is running as a Conservative while his brother Robert is Social Credit candidate.

Social Credit Leader Caouette is seeking re-election in his Témiscamingue riding while his son Gilles, also a Social Credit, is again seeking the Chauveroix seat he held in the last House. A second cousin, Arcade Caouette, is running in Villeneuve.

Prime Minister Trudeau has five challengers for his Montreal Mount Royal seat, including a Conservative, a Democrat, Social Crediter, Independent and a Marxist-Leninist.

Three national party leaders are running in Ontario, including NDP leader David Lewis in York South.

The others are Hardial S. Bains of the Marxist-Leninist, running against External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp in Prescott, Edition, and Communist leader Tim Buck in Toronto Trinity which Conservative Paul Hellyer, a former Liberal cabinet minister, represented in the last House.

Trial Is Ordered On Drug Charges

Two Trenton men, Michael Alan Dingee and Robert Stanley Sears, 20, were ordered to stand trial at the next court of competent jurisdiction on charges of trafficking in a narcotic — marijuana — following a two-day preliminary hearing in the County Court House here yesterday.

The two men appeared before Provincial Judge R. V. Wills in a preliminary hearing that heard the evidence of four witnesses, two of whom were undercover police agents, involved in bringing the case before the court.

Dingee and Sears were charged last April 3, along with five other Trenton-area residents, when police from the RCMP, Ontario Provincial Police and the Trenton Police department conducted a series of raids on several Trenton area residences, following a 16-day-long undercover investigation in late March.

During the preliminary hearing yesterday, the court was told that the two undercover police officers, one from the RCMP in Toronto and one from the Hamilton detachment of the OPP, had spent 16 days in the Trenton area, between March 20 and March 30, posing as persons interested in buying large quantities of drugs in the Trenton area.

Dingee and Sears are charged with having sold the undercover agents approximately one ounce of marijuana during a transaction at the rear of the National poolroom in Trenton on March 30.

Both Dingee and Sears have elected to be tried by a judge and jury.

The court will conduct preliminary hearings into charges against the five other persons arrested in connection with the undercover operation on Wednesday, June 19, and again on Monday July 8.

At those times Malcolm Lynn Wickens, 21, of RR3, Trenton, will appear on charges of conspiracy to traffic in marijuana, trafficking in restricted drugs and trafficking in narcotics.

Sears will appear before the court on a charge of possession of a narcotic.

Ian Kimball Scott, 20, of 17 Orchard View Dr., will appear on a charge of trafficking in a narcotic, while Judy Lash Allsen, 23, of Front Street, Trenton, will also appear on two similar charges.

Two other persons, charged with conspiracy to traffic in a narcotic and trafficking in a narcotic, will appear at a preliminary inquiries on July 8 are Larry Thompson, 22, of RR3, Trenton, and Lance Barder, also of Trenton.

Candidates Stay Same

The federal election in Hastings riding stays the way it emerged last week — with four candidates.

Deadline for candidates to file nominations was 3 p.m. Monday.

Registered by that time were Jack Ellis, Conservative; Marie Kurchak, Liberal; Bob Sanders, New Democratic Party and Floyd Hawley, Social Credit.

Three of the candidates had filed their official papers — with the needed 25 signatures and the standard $200 deposit — by last week, with returning officer Reg Dunham.

Last candidate to register — early Monday afternoon — was Mrs. Kurchak.

In the neighboring riding of Prince Edward Hastings four candidates have registered for the July 8 federal contest. These are Cunningham, New Democratic Progressive Conservative George Hees, Liberal George Harvey Gottfried and independent Brian Burgess.

Mailbox Missile

Officers from the Belleville detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police are looking for a man who was seen throwing a mailbox into the path of a westbound car on Highway 401 from atop the Wyman Road interchange around 2:30 this morning.

Early this morning a Weston, Ont., resident, Michael James, drove into the Belleville OPP detachment and told police that a man in a white T-shirt had thrown what he believed to be a garbage can at the front of his car as it passed under the overpass.

Mr. James slowed down when he saw some transport trucks parked along the shoulder of the highway for the night. As he approached the overpass, a man wearing a white T-shirt and standing beside a dark North American compact car that was parked on top of the overpass, threw a container into the path of his car.

Three police cruisers rushed to the scene and on their arrival discovered that the garbage pail was in fact a large concrete-style mailbox.

PC Bob Jackson, of the Belleville OPP, the officer investigating the incident, said the mailbox was "a deadly missile" and could have very easily killed Mr. James if it had gone through the windshield of his car. The missile caused $200 damage to the front end of his 1974 Pontiac.

Police have traced the mailbox to a farm on Highway 2 and discovered it was stolen from the home of Mrs. Tina McKenzie of RR3, Shannonville, some time early this morning.

Corby Park Gardener Peter Koelmaa spotted geraniums missing

Thieves Are Stealing The City's Geraniums

Fewer flowers are blooming this year in Belleville's greenbelt — and the root cause is believed petty pilfering by adults. In one instance, an entire flowerbed was picked clean overnight.

There's no doubt the thefts are deliberate, says parks department officials.

For one thing, the pilferers are zeroing in on only one species of plant — geraniums.

The reason is geraniums are easily recognizable — and among the more expensive garden blooms. There's no difficulty recognizing a geranium for what it is. As plants they retail at $1.25.

The uprootings are not exactly new, but the locations have switched this year, says Lloyd Syer, parks director.

In June 1973, when the department hung decorative pots in the downtown area, geraniums had a habit of disappearing. Now the thefts have switched to areas like the Corby Park rose garden and various flower beds pinpointed through the city.

Last week 30-40 geraniums were planted in a bed at Cannifton Road and College St. The next morning all had disappeared.

Value of the thefts so far this spring has cost his department about $80 — and it won't replace any missing geraniums, says the director.

It's a problem he blames on "public ignorance".

What the pilferers may also be unaware of is the existence of a city bylaw levying penalties up to $300 for damage to park property.

Mr. Syer says he would have no hesitation in reporting to police anyone caught stealing the plants.

"It doesn't matter what it is, it's still public property they're stealing," he says.

A department gardener says a woman was caught recently lifting a geranium from a city park in Brantford. She was fined $300.

REAL ESTATE:
THE 'DREAM HOUSE' SYNDROME

Ed. McKinney
A. E. McKinney
Realty Ltd.

There are two species of housebuyer — the pragmatist and the idealist. Beware of going to extremes at either end of the fiscalical spectrum.

You can be too practical. For instance, assuming that a home in need of repair can be fixed at an over-all price savings and find out that the final cost greatly exceeds the estimate. Buying a home in a neighborhood whose value is going downhill because "it's a bargain". Buying a home with fewer rooms than you really need. You may end up with an unsuitable, uncomfortable home with lower resale potential.

On the other hand, the idealist should beware of the all-too-frequent "dream house" syndrome. Sure, it's tempting to set out in quest of the absolutely perfect home, but it's better to balance your dreams with your pocketbook. Even if you can define the perfect home (which is doubtful), you probably couldn't afford it. Be prepared to compromise.

Glanmore House Concert on Lawn

The late 19th century was a time of outdoor band concerts in the park attended by top-hatted gentlemen and ladies in long gowns carrying parasols.

A bit of that atmosphere, musical as any rate, will be revived at Glanmore House Sunday June 23 when the Trenton Citizens' Band will perform.

The performance will be held on the lawn at Glanmore and starts at 1 p.m. and runs until 4 p.m. Selections played will be in keeping with the period.

No charge will be made for the performance outside while normal charges will prevail for those hoping to visit the museum. In case of rain, the performance will be cancelled.

So bring a cushion, relax on the grass and close your eyes. Who knows, you might see someone riding by on a bicycle built for two.

Merchants Merit Support

Local and district merchants are entitled to the support of the citizens. They are established here, pay heavy taxes and oft-times assume more than their share of responsibilities of citizenship.

The money that comes over their counters stays in the community, unlike that which goes to out-of-town merchants, which usually goes to someone who has nothing at stake in the community.

By buying from your hometown merchant you are working for the advancement of your own community, for the money he has to spend is spent where he is established and where his interests are. On the other hand, if you patronize some outside concern which does not have a stake about the community, you are lacking in loyalty to the community in which you live. Trenton Councillor Irate

'Dirty Books' Bylaw Sought

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Councillor Bob Wannamaker told council Monday night it is moving "too slowly, too cautiously," in fighting the display of what he called "dirty books" in Trenton's shops.

"There is a great problem of immorality in this day and age he said.

The councillor said he had been handed a petition signed by about 300 town residents claiming "the display of 'skin magazines' in our stores is detrimental to the moral fibre of the community."

"If we get these magazines off the book shelves it would make Trenton a better place to live," said the councillor. "Ninety five per cent of the people aren't interested in them anyway."

Councillor Wannamaker asked council to endorse a bylaw he was prepared to draft which would prohibit the display of magazines making it necessary for the publications to be concealed behind the counter and sold only on request.

"Then if any family is shopping my children are always faced with these things. Everytime you go into a store you see the titles of fellows holding these books," said Councillor Wannamaker.

Councillor John Bonn agreed in principal with Councillor Wannamaker's complaint but said "I hate to see a government legislating moral standards."

His comments were reiterated in a report from the town solicitor who advised council not to legislate in "matters of moral corruption."

Councillor Wannamaker cited the cities of Winnipeg and Woodstock as both having bylaws prohibiting the display of certain publications.

Council instructed Deputy Clerk Arden Royce to contact these municipalities and investigate the workings and definitions of such a bylaw.

Arena Assist: Gary Campbell, Delbert Boyle open donations

Shoppers Help New Arena Fund

PICTON — The Wellington District Community Centre building fund Monday received a donation of $100 when a contribution box at a Picton store was emptied.

The box, placed in the Canadian Tire store in May, contained $70 in store bonus coupons deposited by customers leaving the checkouts. Store manager Gary Campbell matched these funds with a cheque for this amount, along with his own 20-per-cent donation, of $30. The cheque was received by Delbert Boyle of Wellington, arena building fund chairman.

The box will remain at the store throughout June and July and customers are invited to turn their bonus coupons over to the arena project.

'Showbiz' Agent

A sod-turning ceremony for the new arena was held in Wellington last Friday.

The Town Won't Pay To Haul Away Orchard

TRENTON — Orchard removal and house demolition clouds have appeared on the spring cleaning ecstasy so far as Trenton council is concerned.

In this year's spring cleaning campaign sponsored by the town, Councillor Wannamaker seized the opportunity to have a heavy-duty spring cleaning done by cleanup work crews, at the taxpayer's expense.

One West Street resident dropped the bulk of an orchard to the roadside. Another demolished a house on the corner of Campbell and Dundas Streets, leaving the rubble to be handled by town crews," said Arie Boerweeg, commissioner of works.

Lengthy discussion came when the owner of the orchard refused to pay a hauling bill sent by the town works department. The matter had been left to the discretion of Mr. Boerweeg whether or not the orchard would be moved by the town spring cleanup service.

Mr. Boerweeg felt it did not. He could not remember exactly how much he charged the man.

Councillor Bob Wannamaker, with the support of two other councillors, said the resident should not have to pay to stand on if the collection of the bill were found, because no guidelines were set down for such a situation.

A motion to relieve the resident of payment was defeated by Mayor Norm Sweet's billing.

The resident was off the financial hook for only a moment however when council decided it didn't think the same rule could be applied to the homeowner who had a final motion the orchard owner and the homeowner were back to paying for cleanup.

Mayor Norm Patrick, noting the orchard had already been discussed at a previous council meeting, asked why the orchard was taken away?

"Children were setting brush fires in the district and we couldn't contact the owners," said Mr. Boerweeg. The job took two trucks and crews five hours to complete.

"For us it was a job we wasn't part of cleanup week — we're getting into trouble," said Councillor Wannamaker, commenting on possible court action.

The majority of councillors sided with Councillor Ed Idol when he recommended taking care of both jobs as well, eating it off to bad experience."

He contended more stringent ground rules would have to be laid for next year.

In the final vote, Councillor Wannamaker who earlier supported Mr. Idol's motion to defeat bill, voted against it because the bone cart-away service was included in the motion. He said "the bone is still there and the town shouldn't have to pay for it".

The orchard bill will remain valid and the homeowner will have to seek alternate cartage service for the debris.

Legislation Sought On School Guards

TRENTON — Town council endorsed a Peel regional municipality resolution calling for provincial legislation governing the powers and duties of school crossing guards here Monday night.

Notice of the endorsement will be forwarded to Peel as well as associations of municipalities, and counties and regions of Ontario. Notification will also be sent to the Municipal Liaison Committee.

Prior to the presentation, town clerk, C. W. Larry, informed council that similar bylaws now stand, any accidents involving crossing guards are covered by the town's public liability insurance.

Students Need Jobs

TRENTON — Town council here has proclaimed July as "Give a Student Month" following a request from Canada Manpower student placement officer Al Hamilton Monday.

Council agreed to the move with no discussion.

In a letter to council, Mr. Hamilton said the Manpower office is now concerned with placing high school students in summer employment. University students have been finding their own jobs for years placed by his office, he said.

Man Held In Break-in At Trenton

TRENTON — An 18-year-old man, Brian Spock, of no fixed address, was charged by Trenton police with breaking, enter and theft last night after a $100 plate glass window was smashed and two pieces of silver stolen in a downtown jewelry shop.

Det. Sgt. Sid Vickers said that three police constables investigated the incident and minutes later arrested Mr. Spock.

He is being held in custody and will appear in court in Belleville on the 13th inst. at 10 a.m. Thursday.

The break-in occurred at 11.46 p.m. Monday.

Rollins Concerned About Mishaps

MPP Asks Highway 37 Study

TORONTO — Clarke Rollins, MPP, Hastings, says he has asked provincial highways and police authorities for safety reports on Highway 37 between Belleville and Tweed.

Mr. Rollins told The Intelligencer he had requested the surveys to possibly explain the reasons for having what might be considered a rash of accidents on the highway in recent weeks.

The latest mishap occurred early Saturday three miles south of Tweed when a Tweed man was killed after he lost control of his car and left the highway.

Mr. Rollins says he has asked provincial police for a traffic survey and district transportation and communications engineers for reports on road surface conditions.

"You can't control the driving habits of individuals, — but I'm interested in any other factors," said Mr. Rollins.

He said he expected to meet with district highways and police officials before July 1.

The five-mile stretch of the highway north from Tweed to Highway 7, has been listed for reconstruction, he said.

Town Staff Can Relax On the Roof

TRENTON — Amid protest, town council Monday night approved the purchase of lawn furniture for the town office roof deck at a cost of about $250.

Councillor Ronald Price wondered why would use the facility and when Arden Royce, deputy - clerk let the situation vague, the councillor quipped "you get a lot of visitors asking for the roof deck do you"

Mayor Norm Patrick the purchase are six flowerpots, a number of lawn chairs and a patio table equipped with an umbrella.

The councillor was told by Councillor John Bonn that if for no one else, it would "create a better working environment" for town office staff.

Neighborhood Improvement Fund for Town

NAPANEE — This town is among the latest 13 municipalities to receive federal funds under the Neighborhood Improvement Program.

Total of the amount is $89,500.

Announcement of the latest grant, including $1,000,000 in federal funs — was made by Paul Hellyer for the Ontario housing ministry.

A total of 35 municipalities across Canada are funds under the joint federal-provincial-municipal program, designed to help improve and preserve older residential neighborhoods.

The province is to contribute another $572,000 with the municipalities providing a similar amount.

Truscott Case Comparison

TORONTO (CP) — A Lindsay, Ont., teen-ager convicted of killing a nine-year-old girl studied the case or Steven Truscott in school and believes his case is 'similar, the Ontario Court of Appeal was told Monday.

Randy Scott Robertson, now 18, told police investigating the murder of his friend's sister, Lynne Harper, he was kicked to death in the basement but later denied he had, read from the trial transcript.

Robertson is appealing a conviction and life sentence for the murder of his friend's sister, Lynne Harper, he was kicked to death in the basement but later denied he had, read from the trial transcript.

Robertson is appealing a conviction and life sentence for the murder of his friend's sister, Lynne Harper, 11, whose body was found in a Lindsay basement.

He denied killing the girl in his testimony during trial and in statements to police, the appeal court heard.

The only time Robertson could have committed the murder, his lawyer argued, was during an eight-minute span at lunch break from school.

"It struck me as very bizarre that in this time period a crime of this nature could have been perpetrated by a 16-year-old youth who showed no signs of being upset or having been running," Mr. Maloney said.

Heritage Program Launched In Crowe Watershed History

MARMORA — The Crowe Valley Conservation Authority's 1974 SWEEP program including a heritage crew of three students to collect historical information in the Crowe watershed this summer.

Seven watershed borders on an important site, the Peterborough petroglyphs, as well as numerous sites on the Trent River. However, little if any archaeological work has been done in the area and the crew hopes to find some. If found substantial artifacts in the area to contact them.

Although the region was not important agriculturally some of the province's early mining industries were located in the area. These included the Marmora Iron Works and the Cordova Gold Mine.

Information on some of the early industries as well as details on early life are needed in any compilation of the history.

The heritage crew is willing to meet with anyone either interested in the area or has historical information on the watershed.

They may be contacted by writing to Heritage Crew, R. Hood, RR1, Havelock, or by telephone 778-3233.

The authority includes in its boundaries the townships of Seymour, Rawdon, Belmont, Methuen, Marmora, Lake, Tudor, Chandos, Wollaston, Limerick, Cashel, Cardiff and Faraday.

SWEEP is the provincial government program, Students Working in an Environmental Enhancement Program.

Bloomfield Native Books Big-Timers

By TERRY SPRAGUE
Staff Correspondent

BLOOMFIELD — Canadian-born country and western singer, Hank Snow, is coming to Bancroft for a one-night stand but a Bloomfield man is responsible for the booking.

Bert Mitford, of Music and Artists Placement Ltd., Toronto, was born on a farm near the village of Bloomfield and became interested and involved in the music field at an early age. After approaching his father, George Mitford, and getting promoter himself, with the idea of a "popular" music brand!" of and field, Bert Mitford gradually worked his way up to his present status.

His Music and Artists Placement is now recognized as one of the most diversified agencies in Canada, booking for many of the leading Toronto conventions. In addition, Mr. Mitford's organization has brought in recording artists to the arena where they would not otherwise appear.

The upcoming Hank Snow Show at the North Hastings High School, June 29, is just one of many concerts that Mr. Mitford has been responsible for in the area. Also on his has booked the Ian Tyson Show, The Carleton Show Band, Tommy Hunter Show, Stompin' Tom Connors Show and the Kitty Wells Show.

The Bloomfield native is also exclusive booking agent for Prince Edward County's Singing Post Family, as well as all the Canadian appearances of Ian Tyson and North Carolina-born singer George Hamilton IV.

"We do not believe in representing too many artists exclusively," commented Mr. Mitford, "but we do have access to any Nashville star, as long as it is within the budget of the client."

Mr. Mitford says he occasionally takes time off "to relax my battery" spending his leisure time at his cottage at Lake Baptiste. This week, Ian Tyson who has his own popular CTV network television show, will be making the journey to Mr. Mitford's cottage to write some songs, says the booking agent.

"I have no intentions of retiring," asserts Bert Mitford, "I find each day to be a challenge — it keeps me young and keeps me going."

Mr. Mitford, who has a sentimental spot in his heart for Prince Edward County, spent last Sunday touring the county, renewing old acquaintances.

Woman Claims Long Wait For Ambulance

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto woman who saw her three-year-old son hit by a truck Monday had to wait for an ambulance for 25 minutes after it was called, her neighbors say.

Mrs. Frank Panicola, five months pregnant, was watching with neighbors as their children played across the street when her son Michael darted across a boulevard and into the path of the truck.

A neighbor, Mrs. Joseph Principe, said she phoned for an ambulance twice after the accident and her neighbors made three more calls.

She said they were told each time that the ambulance was on its way "but it took a long time, 25 or 26 minutes."

However, police said the boy was dead on arrival at Toronto hospital at 11.30 a.m., 25 minutes after the accident occurred.

An ambulance service supervisor Monday night refused to comment on the women's charges and said he had specific orders not to bother his superiors at night.

Province Awards Contracts, Grants

The award of construction contracts by the Ministry of Transportation and Communication for work on two development roads in North Hastings has been announced by Clarke Rollins Hastings MPP.

Eady and Graham Construction Ltd. of Kinburn have been awarded the contract for reconstruction of the Detlor road in the amount of $214,804. Construction will commence June 17 and is expected to be completed by the end of September. Paving will be carried out in 1975.

A contract for $189,752 has been awarded to L.M. Welter Ltd., of Cobden for the Lavallee Creek structure on the Lower Faraday Road. Work commenced in April and will be completed by mid-August.

The ministry has also approved subsidies for Monteagle and Faraday for new construction of a proposed municipal garage and for a culvert over Bird's Creek.

With these approvals, the township's allocation for 1974 totals $158,000, of which $107,000 is for construction and $51,000 for maintenance.

Also the supplementary request of Bangor, Wicklow and McClure for the construction of a garage and purchase of a snowplow in the amount of $181,000 has been approved. The township's 1974 allocation has now reached a total of $339,000 with $232,000 for construction and $52,000 for maintenance.

Tweed Property Measure Under Study

TWEED — A public meeting will be held Thursday to further discuss a property control bylaw for this village.

There was a small turnout at the meeting called Mrs. M. E. Morse, of consultants Totten, Sims, Hubicki, explained the proposal.

Any necessary amendments to the bylaw will be made following Thursday's meeting and each ratepayer will receive a copy of the measure. It is given third reading and sent to the Ontario Municipal Board for approval.

A committee of adjustment will also be appointed to study the bylaw.

300 Evacuated In Forest Fire

EDMONTON (CP) — More than 300 persons were evacuated late Monday from their homes as a raging forest fire about 150 miles northwest of Edmonton continued to spread.

Fanned by winds gusting to 30 miles an hour and with temperatures in the 80s, the fire destroyed about 5,000 acres by day night. It had covered a 1-1/2-acre area earlier in the day.

A provincial government spokesman said most persons evacuated were employees of natural gas distribution centres in the area of the forest blaze. In addition, 175 Alberta forest service firefighters had to be evacuated from their base when it was threatened by fire.

It is not an election issue — but maybe it should be.

Shouldn't the death of around 5,000 Canadians every year on the country's highways merit more than cursory interest, if not years?

Unfortunately the public mind has become so conditioned to the accident toll on the roads that the whole sorry business is simply psyched out.

Out of sight out of mind — it is as simple as that.

Last week The Oshawa Times carried a front-page picture of two sisters: Lois Gerrow 17, and Heather Gerrow 12. Heather was killed when the car driven by her sister was in collision, with another car near Orono a week ago Sunday. The older girl died the following evening.

The driver of the other vehicle has been charged with driving with more than .08 percent alcohol in the blood.
